"THE experience I had at Saint Peter's has provided me with the ground work for all I have done in my chosen profession these past years." So writes a distinguished priest of this Diocese who worked as a seminarian on the Saint Peter's summer staff some ten years ago. Over sixty young men and women in college and seminary have come five or ten at a time to spend two months of work and play with the people of this old parish of Chelsea on New York's West Side. Now as priests, professors, housewives, social workers, journalists, church college workers, business men and women —they all write similar accounts of what they owe to a summer devoted to this work.

Part of the time of the summer staff is devoted to their work with the children of the neighborhood and their families—in getting them to know the Church as one of the few places in this sometimes bitter city where they can know a welcome and acceptance in the name of God. A smaller but no less significant part of the time is spent in getting to see their experience in this particular parish as a part of the Church's mission to the inner city. Sociologists, anthropologists, prison workers, social workers, mission priests—all help to place the summer at Saint Peter's in the larger framework.

The result of this program—like those in some half-dozen other parishes and missions of the Diocese—are hard for us to measure precisely since their only true measurement is God's invisible yardstick. However, one can in the course of a summer see new souls brought to Christ ready to acknowledge him as Lord and Saviour, and one can see a group of potential leaders of the Church—lay and clerical—ready to enter into mature leadership with a personal experience of the church at its growing edge, especially as that is known in the urban environment.

SEAMEN'S CHURCH INSTITUTE MARKS 125th YEAR

COMPLETION of a century and a quarter of service to merchant seamen was marked on March 6th by the Seamen's Church Institute of New York, 25 South Street.

Addressing 250 guests at a noontime service in the Institute's Chapel of Our Saviour, Bishop Donegan, traced the development of the Institute's work among seamen since its founding in 1834. On March 6th of that year was held the first meeting of the Young Men's Auxiliary Education and Missionary Society, through whose efforts the Institute's first floating church was launched a decade later.

Bishop Donegan noted that prior to the launching of the floating church in 1844, the Young Men's first missionary to seamen, the Rev. Benjamin C. C. Parker, had carried on his work in a "rented room over a grog shop at the corner of Pike and South Streets."

Despite the success of its first floating church, which prompted the group to incorporate as the Protestant Episcopal Church Missionary Society for Seamen in the City and Port of New York and to launch a second floating church within two years, "the need for social and spiritual betterment to match the success of religious services was soon felt," observed Bishop Donegan.

In 1854 the Society's charter was amended accordingly to include the "boarding, lodging and entertainment" of seamen.

A series of lodging houses subsequently opened to combat crimping, shanghaiing and other abuses of seamen, served as "stepping stones" to the opening of the Institute's present headquarters at 25 South Street which has "continued to grow and develop, not only by brick and mortar but by modernization and the addition of new services as they were needed."

Among the services he cited the Merchant Marine School, radio medical service to ships at sea, a Missing Seamen Bureau, clinics, a library, national clubrooms for Allied seamen during World War II, and the promotion of legislation and special programs benefiting seamen.

He also cited as a "most important and significant addition the opening of the International Seamen's Club at the Institute within the last year. Noting that men from more than forty nations have visited the Club to date he said, "Much is said about the need for international good will and understanding, but here something is being done about it."

SPRING AND SUMMER PLANS ARE MADE

Christian Education Department Announces Interesting Program

SOME WILD TAKEN FROM WILDERNESS

IMPORTANT steps are moving the Diocese closer to the happy time when it has a youth center of which it can be proud. Beginning in 1956, with the cooperation of the Department of Missions, the Department of Christian Education has been gaining experience in the use of the property at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness, Bear Mountain.

Last summer's program of work conferences established that the property is suitable now for pioneer youth conferences, and the work the young people accomplished prepared the way for immediate improvements. Much has already happened. Much more will happen before the new series of "Wilderness Conferences" gets under way on Sunday, June 28th.

Immediately after the conclusion of last summer's program, electricians moved in to provide regular electric power in the place of the inadequate generating plant formerly in use. They were followed by plumbers who put a long-unused well into operation, installed a pressure pump and laid pipes to provide running water.

More is still to come. The Department of Missions will spend up to ten thousand dollars this spring in the establishment of a sewage system and wash house facilities, including toilets and showers. Nine tent platforms will be erected, setting up two "wilderness villages," to provide pioneer living accommodations.

This expenditure has been authorized by the Department of Missions from the Zimmerman Fund, established for the maintenance of the facilities and ministry in the Bear Mountain area.

The March issue of THE BULLETIN carried the announcement of the dates for the Wilderness Conferences this year—five conferences, three for one week, and two for two weeks. As last year, these conferences will be for boys and girls 14 years of age or older (or above grade 8). The conference program will continue to establish experience of the close relationship between worship and work in a carefully controlled community of Christian concern.

At the same time the Church's ministry to other camps in the Bear Mountain area will be centered at St. John's. Seminarians appointed by the Department of Missions will both serve on the conference staff and conduct services at other camps in the area. Pilgrimages and hikes from these camps to St. John's, already an established part of the program of several camps, will be encouraged. The conference program of St. John's will make provision for the welcoming and guiding of these pilgrimages, including brief services in the church when desired.

The young people enrolled in the "Wilderness Conferences" will continue regularly scheduled work periods each day to improve the property. More rooms of the Rectory will be redecorated. The "wilderness villages" will be equipped with cooking places, service paths, etc., and sites of further "villages" will be explored. Work will continue on the recreation field and on the dining hall. An outdoor chapel will be developed, but daily services will continue in the Church, known to many as the "Hiker's Church". Young people will again prepare their own meals under adult supervision.

The size of the conferences will be restricted this year to twenty-four young people, plus a leadership staff of at least six. Though they work hard, young people will pay $15 for a five day conference and $30 for a twelve day conference. Provision can be made for young people to stay on from conference to conference if they desire.

When the conference program concludes on August 15th, parishes or missions wishing to take their own groups into camp may do so by special arrangement with the Department of Christian Education. A minimum staff will be carried for the remainder of the summer, but such parish groups would need to provide their own cook and instructors.

The future looks bright for the Wilderness program. This summer's experience will provide the answer to such questions as the demand for larger conferences, the usefulness of the wilderness areas of the property, and the effectiveness of the increased ministry to other Bear Mountain camping programs.

"WOOSTER AGAIN"

The New York Youth Conferences will again this year benefit from the sincere hospitality and pleasant facilities at Wooster School, Danbury, Conn.

To those who have previously attended, certain changes will be evident. Former conferences began on Friday and ran over the weekend. This year both will begin Sunday evening; the Junior High School Conference on Sunday, Aug. 23rd, and the Senior High School Conference on Sunday, Aug. 30th.

A significant change from the past two years will be noted in the fact that the first period of each day will be "Bible Instruction" rather than "Bible Discussion." This year's theme at both conferences arises from the Lambeth request for emphasis on the Bible. Under the theme title "God Speaks" the keynote addresses, Bible instruction and group discussions will attempt to impress on the young people the reality of revelation, and the central importance of Holy Scripture as the Word of God.

The Rev. Canon Edward N. West, Sacrist of the Cathedral, will again serve as Chaplain to both conferences, being responsible for the services and a vesper talk each day. Specially prepared clergy and lay leaders will round out the staff. Both conferences will be under the direction of the Rev. Canon J. Stuart Wetmore, Director of the Department of Christian Education.

Each conference will be opened by an address by The Right Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of New York. The keynote addresses in the Junior Conference will be delivered by the Rev. Michael Allen, Assistant at Grace Church, Manhattan, and a former editor of Look Magazine.

Clergy and parents are urged to encourage young people to enroll early. Last year late registrations for the Senior Conference had to be rejected because of lack of space. Special emphasis will be placed on enrollment for the Junior Conference which last year fell short of its enrollment objective.

This year's fee will be $25.00 of which $10.00 is the registration fee and must be forwarded with the enrollment form. Conference folders and registration forms will be sent to the clergy, youth advisors and young people in April. Parents or young people wishing to receive such forms should send their request to the Department of Christian Education.

These conferences are planned by the Camps and Conferences Committee of which the Rev. Howard O. Bingley, Rector of St. Andrew's Church, Brewster, is Chairman.

AN ADULT SUMMER PROGRAM

The intensive adult conferences —Princeton and Finger Lakes— will be augmented this year by a new series of holiday conferences conducted at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center at Tuxedo Park.

The Princeton Conference, June 26th to 30th, is officially sponsored by the Diocese in cooperation with the Dioceses of Newark and New Jersey. It is planned to be an intensive training conference for adult leaders of parish program, both clerical and lay. Leadership from the Diocese of New York in this year's program includes the Rev. George Barrett, Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville, as the Keynote Speaker and the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, Rector of St. Peter's, Bronx, as Chaplain. The Rev. Canon J. Stuart Wetmore, Director of our Diocesan Department of Christian Education, is to lead a Workshop on Christian Education and Mr. Albert Brownbridge, Director of our Diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations, will lead a Social Relations Workshop. Mrs. Gurney Williams, President of the Diocesan Board of Episcopal Churchwomen has been an active member of the planning committee and will be in the Workshop on Women's Work.

The Finger Lakes Conference is held at Hobart and Smith Colleges in Geneva, N. Y., and has always attracted faculty and membership from this Diocese. This year's conference will be held from June 21st to 27th and New York leadership includes The Rev. Dr. Robert E. Terwilliger and the Rev. Canon John W. Pyle

TUXEDO SUMMER SESSION

In a more relaxed program, the Department of Christian Education will sponsor six weeks of opportunity for adults at the Diocesan Conference Center, beginning June 12 and continuing until August 2.

This program will provide daily worship and Bible study, with ample provision for rest and recreation. The complete facilities of the conference center are being made available at less than the operating cost to allow a fee for room and board that will be much less than holiday facilities usually charge.

The program is being developed by the Rev. E. J. Rooney, Associate Director for Leadership Training and Adult Work, in consultation with both the Adult Division and Mrs. George Adams, Director of the Conference Center. Literature will be available in late April and will be sent to all parochial clergy and to any others who indicate their desire to receive it.

PRESENTATION TABLEAUX

At the Annual Presentation Service in the Cathedral at 2:00 p.m. on Saturday, May 23rd, the missionary study emphasis will again be demonstrated through tableaux arranged in the entrances to the apsidal chapels.

This year's theme, following the National Council emphasis, will indicate the important part of the Church's total ministry which is carried on in the parish house.

The tableaux will be arranged by the following parishes: St. James, Hyde Park; St. John's, Larchmont; St. Mary's, Manhattanville; St. George's, Manhattan; and St. Alban's, Staten Island.

ASCENSION DAY

BOTH the Youth Division and Children's Division of the Department of Christian Education are urging that parishes plan and conduct special holy day instruction on Ascension Day, Thursday, May 7th. Suggested program material is being prepared and will be mailed to the parishes in April.

Accent on the use of Holy Days arises from the Diocesan Policy on Released Time Education, in which parishes are urged to note that children may be excused from school at the request of their parents for Religious Observance. This policy emphasizes the use of Epiphany, Ash Wednesday, Maundy Thursday, Good Friday, Ascension Day and All Saints Day. Parishes are urged to develop plans for as much of the day as can be well used, and to return the children to school if any major portion of the school time remains.

Clergy and lay leaders should note that legislation passed at Albany last year has changed the former situation. Previously when children were absent for Religious Observance the school, in reckoning the school's aggregate attendance, was permitted to use the attendance figure for the day previous. Now the adjustment of the attendance figure is not allowed. Since the State grant is based on aggregate attendance the new legislation means that Holy Day Observance can cut the amount of state aid. Children in elementary grades need to be in school for at least one hour, and high school children at least one period, if the school is not to be penalized.

Because of this change parishes are being urged to cooperate with the local school, when asked to do so, by developing Holy Day plans which allow the children to attend school for at least the required time. A bill is now before the State Legislature which intends to restore the earlier Holy Day provision. It should be noted that the right of asking for the excuse of children has not been changed, and there is no intention by the State to interfere with religious liberty.

ST. ALBAN'S, S.I., SOLVES PROBLEMS BY GOOD PLANNING AND EXPERT CANVASS

To be located in the middle of the fastest growing community on Staten Island without adequate facilities to minister to the newly arrived people, was the situation in which St. Alban's parish found itself. The main inadequacy was the old parish house, small and cold and almost unusable. This was especially a problem since there were over 200 members of the Church School. Also there were other matters to be faced. The Rectory had to be almost rebuilt, a great deal of work had to be done on the Church, including a new heating unit, and more property was needed for expansion.

The rector and vestry faced these problems and looked for solutions. One fact kept coming to the forefront—what was needed was a program that would put the Church where she should be in the lives of her members, a program that would help people realize that all we have belongs to God. In light of this thinking, a program of Christian Stewardship was begun. Thomas White and Associates were engaged for the Canvass and asked to help organize a program of Christian Stewardship in the parish. The results have been heartwarming. From a budget of little over $7,000 a year, 157 families have pledged over $27,000 yearly to the support of the parish. These pledges were made, not due to a promise of new buildings, but as a result of Christian Stewardship. In January of this year, the Vestry adopted a budget of $31,770, and have been able to build an undercroft, install 14 new stained glass windows, put in a new furnace and radiators, almost rebuild the Rectory and install a new furnace, make a bid on additional property behind that now owned by the parish with the hope of owning one square block, and complete plans for the construction of a new parish house.

A five year program for the physical and spiritual development of the parish is being set up and with God's grace will be possible, due to the sense of Christian Stewardship possessed by the people of Saint Alban's Church.

LeQuier, Chairman, Stewardship Committee; Douglas J. Weare, Junior Warden and Treasurer, who also is Continuing Chairman of the Program; Ralph H. O'Donoghue, Senior Warden, who served as General Chairman of the Canvass; and John S. Yates, Teams Chairman, and Chairman of the Follow-up Committee; Mr. Reymann and Mrs. Schare.*

FREDERICK C. KURZ RETIRES

MR. Frederick C. Kurz, Senior Warden of St. Paul's, Yonkers, for more than a half century a leader of our Church, announced his resignation at the parish vestry meeting on March 10th. Mr. Kurz will celebrate his 76th birthday next July 1st. He is soon leaving Yonkers to take up residence in southern California.

When his resignation takes effect Mr. Kurz will have completed 49 years of vestry service in several parishes but his service to the Church started long before that. For as a boy he sang in the choir of the East Side Chapel of St. George's Parish in Manhattan.

Since May of 1910 Mr. Kurz has served on the vestry or advisory boards of St. Mary's, Mott Haven, Bronx (which has since been closed), St. John the Divine, Mt. Vernon, and St. Paul's Yonkers. He says that one of the things he values most (now proudly displayed on the wall of his room) is a certificate awarded by the late Bishop Manning in 1930, attesting to his then twenty years of activity as a vestryman in the Diocese of New York.

Mr. Frederick C. Kurz

In the words of his own rector, the Rev. Clinton C. Veinotte, "Mr. Kurz has been and is a loyal servant of God."

Conferring on Church School plans are, left to right, Mr. James W. Tobey, Mrs. Robert Loree, Mr. Winfield J. Best, Mrs. Norman P. Clement, Jr., and the Rev. Dr. Phillips, rector of the parish. This educational task has been greatly simplified and improved by the tangible results of a program of stewardship.

CHRIST'S CHURCH, RYE—A STORY OF SUCCESS AND PROGRESS

By John W. Stanley

"WHAT a tremendous difference our new parish house has made!"

The words are those of Mrs. Norman P. Clement, Jr., Director of Christian Education at Christ's Church, Rye.

Indeed it has made a dramatic difference. Until the parish house was completed less than a year ago, some 400 children were jammed into every available foot of the old building; in the parish hall with flimsy screen dividers, in the balcony, in the kitchen, in the choir stalls, in the open basement. Teachers were hard to enlist; only the hardiest and most dedicated dared face the discomfort and lack of privacy. Parents were troubled and children bewildered in noisy and distracting surroundings.

Now there are eighteen additional classrooms. There are ninety-three adults on the teaching staff including a full complement of observers and substitutes which means that no class ever lacks leadership and the esprit de corps is high. Now more than 425 children and a rapidly growing adult class of fifty meet each Sunday morning in an orderly, efficient schedule of religious education and services.

How did this all come about? The Rev. Wendell Phillips, who has been rector of Christ's Church for twenty years, looks back on the many stops and starts in the church's progress.

Eighteen years ago, soon after his arrival, Dr. Phillips and the church leaders took a hard look at the present and the future and plans were drawn up for a new wing to the parish house. Even then the need for it was apparent. But there just wasn't enough courage and faith to build it.

Then, eight years ago, new plans were made—far simpler plans that called for some improvements to the basement classroom, for transforming the rectory into an auxiliary parish house and the purchase of a new off-campus rectory. The Associate Vestry sparked this. Mostly young, family men with children, they were vitally concerned about these steadily deteriorating conditions. The funds, they thought, could be raised by approaching a number of hand-picked families in the parish. But when calls were made and the promises tabulated, the scoreboard showed less than $20,000.

So again, the project fell through.

The real turning point came early in 1955. Dr. Phillips credits the Parish Life Conferences for clergy and laymen as the real force behind a drastic change in thinking. The new Seabury Series was in the making, and aided by the quiet, purposeful devotion of Mrs. Robert Loree, Jr., who had recently taken over as Director of Religious Education, Dr. Phillips and the Vestry set to work.

Rye was, and still is, no "boom town." Like many similar Westchester communities, growth had gradually leveled off if only because there was little more land to build on. Certainly church membership had increased over the years but not spectacularly. But here was a real challenge that must be met if Christ's Church was to remain a vital force in the community. The Seabury Series demanded private classrooms and this time they must be built. Other needs were piling up too: renovations to the existing parish hall, a better kitchen, more space for clergy, choir vestments, improved rest rooms, better living quarters for curate and sexton, storage facilities and parking space for at least 100 more cars. The architects thought that a new building and all these other needs would cost at least $350,000. How could this be raised when only a few years ago not even a tenth of that amount seemed possible?

Professional fund-raising counsel was consulted and in October of 1955, Wells Organizations was retained to conduct a Building Fund Canvass. After five weeks of hope and prayer, and the usual measure of scepticism, the total was announced to a delighted parish. The minimum goal of $350,000 had been exceeded by nearly $100,000.

Now definite plans could be made and the new building was carefully designed with the architectural skill of the New York firm of Rogers and Butler. It was of help, too, that Mr. Jonathan Butler was a member of the parish and could be in constant consultation with the Building Committee.

Late in 1958, the striking new parish house was ready for use and the first classes began to meet in it. The visitor cannot help but be impressed by its contemporary design that harmonizes so well with the existing Gothic Church and old parish house. This is largely achieved by the use of triangular dormers with the same pitch as the roofs of the older buildings. An unusual feature is the use of porcelain on copper to produce a translucent material in strong color. Large expanses of glass make each room light and airy. Spacious and pleasant offices for the clergy, parish secretary, treasurer and Director of Christian Education, are grouped together at the strategic center of activities. There are ample rest rooms and sufficient space for equipment and sexton's supplies. The needed renovations and alterations have been made to the old parish house, a new fully-equipped kitchen installed and the parking space has been enlarged and resurfaced. The church program is no longer handicapped for lack of facilities, and from National headquarters in Greenwich the Rev. Elsom Eldridge and the Rev. William Coulter have come to lend invaluable aid in establishing the new curriculum. Mr. Eldridge has recently accepted a new position in St. Louis, but Mr. Coulter still works with Dr. Phillips and Mrs. Clement as Educational Advisor.

But the story of stops and starts, of success and progress does not end here. Church families had learned a higher level of giving and Building Fund pledges expired in December of 1958. In January, Wells Organizations was again retained to conduct a canvass—this time to raise budget support to a point where it would cover not only increased costs of operation—but, more important, where it would have a positive impact on each family. There was no published goal; no specific increase asked, no ceiling placed on giving.

Again the response was highly gratifying. At this writing, pledges for "The Proper Support and Maintenance of Christ's Church, Rye" have increased by 50% over last year, testimony to the fact that the amount church families give each year depends much more upon the realization of their own need to give than upon the physical needs of their church.

General Chairman of this last canvass was Mr. John Ellis Knowles, former Warden, golfer of note, and donor of the beautiful little chapel that abuts the Sanctuary. He joins Dr. Phillips in rejoicing that Christ's Church families while satisfying their own physical needs, are increasingly mindful of the needs of others.

Of such is real progress made.

NEWS OF THE EPISCOPAL CHURCHWOMEN

DIOCESAN INGATHERING PLANNED FOR MAY 2nd

The Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering of the women of the Diocese will be held on May 2nd at 10:30 a.m. at a Celebration of the Holy Communion in the Cathedral. Women from every Convocation of the Diocese will be present and custodians will present the gifts previously gathered in each parish and mission.

The gifts of the United Thank Offering, made first privately by individual women, represent in tangible form the thanksgiving of each one for the blessings God gives. The prayer of thanksgiving is as vital to the nature of the United Thank Offering as is the money given.

Over the many years since this offering was started in 1889, thousands of women in this Diocese have expressed their response to the love of God in this way; and hundreds of women have been sent to many places at home and abroad to teach and serve the Lord and His Church; buildings and tools for their work have been provided through this means. Offerings of thankfulness are always used to make known to others the Giver of our blessings.

In the file of the Diocesan Treasurer of the United Thank Offering is a wonderful check book which has been used since 1934 to record the offerings received and deposited in our bank; and to draw the checks transmitting these offerings to their destination and use. In this time five women have served as Diocesan Treasurer of the United Thank Offerings: Mrs. William C. Dickey, Mrs. Charles M. Baxter, Jr., Mrs. John H. Michaeli, Mrs. John Whiteley, and Mrs. Harold E. Pim. The time represents eight Trienniums, since the offering is presented each three years at the time of General Convention and the Triennial Meetings of the women of the Church. The money in twenty-four years amounts to $905,289.64. The thanksgivings with which the gifts were made are uncounted in number.

A new check book was started last December for this Triennium. From the Advent Ingathering it records gifts of $27,835.00 from 8,802 women. The May Ingathering will be added to this, thus begins a new opportunity to serve. The check book will record the tangible part of the offering, the love and gratitude it represents is beyond recording in any book on earth. —Mrs. W. E. Leidt

YEAR'S THEME CHOSEN

The Diocesan Executive Board, Episcopal Churchwomen, meeting for a two day program planning conference at the Bishop Donegan Conference Center, Tuxedo, in February, chose "Today's Family" as the 1959-60 emphasis for women's work in the Diocese.

The emphasis will be presented in terms of the family unit as the Christian faith defines it under program planning suggestions in the 1959-60 Handbook for Episcopal Churchwomen (83rd Year Book), to be published in June. The Book will contain coordinated program planning suggestions from the departments. Sample, single programs and a guide as to subjects and areas of activity which should be covered in a year by parish groups are now being prepared for publication in the Handbook. To assist parish groups in a recognized transition period, the Handbook will carry (1) a statement on Unification and (2) a Review of the New Status of Women's Work.

Under the triennium theme "One Family in Christ," a related group of members of the "family" is singled out each year for special emphasis. Particular study and action are involved for those who are part of that group, as well as a consideration of the work of the Church in relation to the group. The 1958-59 emphasis is on "Children and Youth." The Church's program for Youth and the responsibility of youth as Christian citizens have both been stressed. Study, work and giving in this area of youth work will be carried on by the women of the Church as a "continuing responsibility."

For the benefit of those parishes which will start their program planning this Spring for next Fall and Winter, a memorandum will be mailed to all parishes early in April outlining the program suggestions of the new Handbook, particularly as they relate to the emphasis "Today's Family."

BOOKS REQUESTED FOR CHURCHWOMEN OF BRAZIL

The Church Periodical Club of the Diocese is asking $5 contributions for books for St. Hilda's Training School for Women in Brazil. The new training school at Sao Paulo is part of our church's answer to the immense challenge presented by the thousands of nominal Christians in Brazil who now have no church affiliation but who potentially may be interested in the teachings of our Church. The Diocesan Church Periodical Club has undertaken to supply to the new training school (opened in March) the small number of English-language books needed. Although the books are of differing values, contributions will be uniform. Every donor of $5 will be acknowledged with a book plate in one of St. Hilda's books. Parish groups or individuals are urged to contribute. Books may be either gift or memorial books (special book plate.) Contributions should be sent with a covering note to Mrs. Jamie Kerr, the Diocesan Treasurer, 1430 Midland Avenue, Bronxville 8, New York. Additional information may be obtained from the Diocesan Director of the Church Periodical Club, Mrs. Rudolf F. Mattesich, 233 East 69th St., New York 21, New York.

CPC AND SUPPLY PRESENT "OUR CHURCH IN LIBERIA"

The Supply Department and the Church Periodical Club of the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of New York presented a jointly sponsored program on "Our Church in Liberia" at the Diocesan Meeting in Synod Hall on Tuesday, March 3rd. Mrs. Gurney Williams, President of the Episcopal Churchwomen presided at the meeting.

In her introductory remarks, Mrs. Rudolf F. Mattesich, Diocesan Director of the Church Periodical Club, explained that the presentation was intended to demonstrate the effectiveness of inter-departmental cooperation in programing, which is in line with the United Program the Episcopal Churchwomen advocate for all parish branches. Liberia was chosen as a subject partly because Church Periodical and Supply have made important contributions there. Contributions by UTO were also shown. The program, however, was also intended to serve as a model for convocations, areas and parishes. All the materials used represent resources readily available.

Mrs. John Hazard explained the availability of materials, free or at moderate cost, from the National Council at 281 Fourth Avenue, pointing out that the motion picture feature of the Liberian program was one of the National Council productions, and that it can be rented through the Audio-Visual Department. For background material she advised the use of travel agencies and the travel promotion departments of the countries involved, as well as consulates. Churchways was recommended as a special aid in deciding what program to have.

Mrs. W. H. Danat Pell, President of the women's organization at Holy Trinity, Manhattan, formerly Church Periodical Club Secretary explained how the Church Periodical Club functions at the parish level citing cooperation with local chaplains and St. Paul's University, Tokyo.

Mrs. K. George Falk, Supply Chairman for the Day Branches in Upper Manhattan gave introductory remarks to the feature film by outlining the work at the House of Bethany School for Girls at Robertsport, Liberia. The Church Periodical Club distributed a book list of children's books currently needed at Bethany House.

The Rev. Mr. Harold Landon, Assistant Minister at the Cathedral, who has recently returned from a three year mission in Uganda, spoke briefly, touching upon the current ferment created by nationalism, upon the general role of our country in Africa, and upon the duty of American Christians to these people and upon the great gift which these Africans, with their deep recognition of gospel truth and their unspoiled joyousness can give to civilized man. He indicated that Christianity is currently in great danger in Africa, however.

During lunch Mrs. W. E. Edgar, Jr., Supply Chairman of Lower Manhattan and Mrs. George Dwight, Vice-Chairman of Supply for the Diocese modelled the blue and white House of Bethany uniforms made by the women sewing in our parishes. Mrs. William Gardner, Vice-President-at-large of the Episcopal Churchwomen had charge of hospitality arrangements. She reports that there was an excellent parish representation at the meeting. Many representatives expressed the intention of putting on similar programs in their parishes next fall.

G.F.S. RALLY TO BE HELD ON APRIL 18th

Members and leaders of the G.F.S. are busy at work preparing for their Mission Rally, which will take place on Saturday, April 18th at St. Bartholomew's Church, Manhattan.

Mexico is the theme of the mission study of the G.F.S. this year. Decorations, dances, songs, dramatics—will all be Mexican in flavor. Each branch will contribute something specific to the program.

The girls will also present their Mission Object offering which this year will be used to expand the G.F.S. in Mexico and to develop and train G.F.S. leaders from among the women and girls of the Church in Mexico. G.F.S. members from all over the United States will be working to raise $3,000 which will be sent to the Bishop of Mexico for this work.

ST. MICHAEL'S BUILDS NEW CREMATORY

PERHAPS because it has one of the oldest parish histories in New York City to look back on, St. Michael's, at 225 West 99th St., is adept at looking ahead to meet future problems.

As a result of one such look into the future the parish in June will start using a $200,000 crematory now under construction at St. Michael's Cemetery, on Grand Central Parkway Extension, near LaGuardia Field, in Queens. The most advanced crematory in this part of the country, it is intended to meet the dual problem of enabling the parish to provide dignified burial services at minimum cost and to stretch shrinking cemetery space. Although St. Michael's Cemetery of 75 acres is in a better position than most of its neighboring cemeteries, its space will be exhausted in about 20 years, in the estimate of the Rev. William F. Corker, rector. Cremation, with its much smaller plot demands, seemed the best hope of conserving the remaining acreage.

The crematory structure was designed by Edwin J. Dauber, architect of Great Neck, L.I. The chapel, in the central section, will have a front of stained glass set in a non-objective pattern. Two floor to ceiling windows will be set in the rear wall. The stained glass design will be of squares and rectangles in primary colors. The flashing brilliant reds and blues and yellows will be interspersed with a few colors, chiefly green and amber.

Flanking the chapel on one side will be a columbarium and lounge and offices.

The crematory is not the first work designed for St. Michael's by Mr. Dauber. A year ago he completed a seven-car garage and machine shop at the cemetery, which has been completely mechanized for economy. A new exit road into 49th Street was built at the same time.

The Rev. William Corker who has been rector since 1948 says that "there is no disrespect of the dead in cremation. A modern crematory is a suitable place to put the remains of the departed for the reverent return of the borrowed elements from which the body was made. Those elements will be changed when cremation takes place. They will not be destroyed. Our bodies are approximately 85 per cent moisture. In cremation this moisture returns to the air from which it was received. Some mineral fragments remain. Lord Shaftsbury, when discussing the lot of the blessed martyrs who were burned, correctly said, 'The ashes of a saint are truly as venerable as his bones.' The ashes are enough to house in simple unpretentious surroundings to remind us not only of the journey that has been made, but also of the true destiny to which we move."

TO THE OWNER OF A LEAKING BUILDING "bids" mean little. Don't let anyone tell you that water infiltration in masonry can be cured with magical "coatings". That's the easy technique employed by itinerant "waterproofers" who attempt to lure you with low prices. The only way to stop leaks and seepage PERMANENTLY is to remove disintegrated mortar from all weak areas and repoint the joints with properly compounded mortar. Rockwell Newman brings to this problem over 38 years experience, plus the skills of highly trained men equipped with modern tools. Our clientele is comprised of people who seek, and are willing to pay fair prices for PERMANENT corrective workmanship. We can prove to you that our charges are ultimately one of the lowest.

Book Review

THE WONDER OF PRAYER by Shelton Hale Bishop, Seabury Press, January 1959, $2.25

One of the most persistent memories this reviewer has of Shelton Hale Bishop is his resorting to prayer for the solution of any difficulty which might arise in meetings, conferences, or the confrontation of two people in the midst of crisis. So it was no surprise to me when a little book appeared written by him with the title THE WONDER OF PRAYER.

While this book was labeled "The Seabury Book for Lent 1959" and unfortunately did not get reviewed in time for Lent, it is not strictly speaking a Lenten book at all. Certainly Lent is a time for concentration on prayer, but this is an all year around discipline of Christian life, and almost any Christian will find something new and relevant for his own prayer life in the too few pages of this book. One cannot help but realize that the author has come by his knowledge of prayer from first hand experience.

Dr. Bishop, for many years rector of St. Philip's Church, New York City, has now retired to the Hawaiian Islands. It is good to know that he is still hard at work spiritually, and sharing the results of prayer in his own inner life. Whoever is concerned with the life of prayer will find this book an enriching experience with gentle hints and unexpected jabs which lead to an ever deepening level of communion with God.

MISSION SITE PURCHASED BY 175th ANNIVERSARY FUND

The above photograph was taken on February 23, 1959, on the occasion of the erection of a sign marking the site of the proposed St. Anne's Mission in Washingtonville, Orange County, N.Y. At present St. Anne's is an unorganized Mission which holds regular services in the Washingtonville Grange Hall. The congregation numbers about 25 families residing in a rapidly growing part of the county. Dedicating the sign is the vicar, the Rev. William S. Reisman. Mr. Reisman is also vicar of St. David's, Highland Mills, and St. John's Arden. St. Anne's is one of the missions in the northern part of the Diocese which is benefiting from the 175th Anniversary Fund since the purchase of the site was made possible by gifts to the fund. The ceremony was concluded on the second anniversary of the organization of St. Anne's Chapel under the guidance of the Dean of the Ramapo Convocation, the Rev. Samuel P. Holiday.

THE BULLETIN

of the Diocese of New York

A SILVER SPADE

THE BISHOP WILL BE increasingly the man with a spade — a silver spade — as the life of the Diocese quickens and the sound of building is heard. The ground breaking ceremony at St. Paul's in the Bronx is evidence of your money at work and among the first fruits of "The Campaign."

With a little imagination this Eastertide and an assist from Spring, now bursting forth all over, the Bishop with a silver spade becomes the symbol of new life springing up all over the Diocese and the first attempt in many years to keep pace with the atomic speed of modern change in city and suburb in all Convocations.

Instead of a tiny blossom thrusting up through a crust of ground from the bulb long hidden in the earth, to display its fragrance and beauty, a parish house will emerge from a barren plot of ground, its beauty and well planned usefulness coming from a dream long hidden, nourished at last into life by the many gifts of devoted people of this Diocese.

The cover picture is news in May, 1959. It should be almost a commonplace by the time of the actual anniversary celebration of the 175th year since the founding of the Diocese some time next Spring.

The Diocese is still moving ahead in the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign as parish after parish swells the grand total available for meeting urgent building needs.

First a Bishop with a vision, then a Diocese with a purpose, then a silver spade flashing in the sunlight as ground is broken for making concrete the vision and fulfilling the purpose.

May the Bishop keep busy wielding the spade.

Cover picture shows Bishop Donegan turning the first earth for the new Church House at St. Paul's in the Bronx. This is the first construction project under the 175th Anniversary Fund Program.

DAY OF WITNESS PLANNED FOR JUNE 13TH

By the Rev. Robert R. Spears, Jr.

WHAT would you do to demonstrate forcefully that the Episcopal Church is vitally concerned with the lives of all people who live in the great city of New York and its surrounding area?

When the Urban Priests Group, a society of Episcopal clergy from fifteen intercity parishes in New York and vicinity, met to discuss this question some five years ago, one of their answers was the sponsorship of an annual "Day of Witness". As inaugurated on the lower East Side of Manhattan and then carried out in successive years there and in the Morningside Heights area surrounding the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the "Day of Witness" has proved to be an increasingly vital way of demonstrating the fact that the Episcopal Church includes all sorts and conditions of men and has a vital stake in the life of this great urban community.

Upwards of five thousand persons have taken part each year in the great street procession and services held in the late Spring. Clergy and lay representatives from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania Episcopal churches have marched through the streets of New York to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine for a Festival Celebration of the Holy Communion.

The past two years the Bishop of New York has reviewed the procession from the steps of the Cathedral and welcomed participants to the service. The thrilling sight of men, women and children marching though the streets to the Cathedral service has proved to be an effective way of witnessing for the Episcopal Church and has attracted favorable comment from many sources.

The "Day of Witness" will be held this year on Saturday, June 13th, under the direct sponsorship of the Bishop of New York. He has invited all the congregations of the Church in the Diocese of New York to share in the witness on this day and to send delegations to participate in the procession and to join in the service which follows. The Right Reverend Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York, and the Venerable Richard E. McEvoy, Archdeacon of the Diocese of New York, have been appointed by Bishop Donegan to organize and supervise the activities of the "Day of Witness". A committee chosen by them is taking the responsibility for the detailed planning of the day.

A procession will assemble at 9 o'clock in the morning at St. Mary's, Manhattanville, located on 126th Street just off Amsterdam Avenue. At 10 o'clock the procession will begin from this point and march southward on Amsterdam Avenue to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. At this point the procession will be reviewed by Bishop Donegan and will enter the Cathedral for a Festival Celebration of the Holy Communion—an assemblage of the communicants of the Diocese of New York from many parishes gathered before the Altar of God in the great Cathedral Church of the Diocese of New York.

Vans, floats and signs illustrating the major theme, "One Family in Christ", and the secondary theme of "Christ for the City", will add both color and emphasis to the kind of witness which the day provides. Clergy in vestments, vested acolytes and choristers and specially identified groups from many congregations will further strengthen the impression that this is a Church-sponsored occasion. Both those who view the procession and those who participate in it are made aware that the Church is a composite of many people and that its work embraces all men and is carried out in a great variety of ways.

Clergy in charge of congregations receive from Bishop Donegan an invitation to take part in the "Day of Witness". The Reverend Edward Chandler, vicar of St. Peter's, Manhattan, is acting as coordinator for the committee and the Reverend Richard Gary, rector of St. Mary's, Manhattanville, is acting as Marshal for the street parade and procession.

175th Anniversary Fund Activity

BISHOP BREAKS GROUND FOR ST. PAUL'S CHURCH HOUSE

A CROWD of over 300 jammed into the vacant lot behind St. Paul's Church, Bronx, Sunday, April 5th, to watch Bishop Donegan turn the first spadeful of earth for the first construction project under the 175th Anniversary program. The ground breaking ceremony marked the beginning of the new Church House for St. Paul's.

The Bishop was assisted by the Ven. George F. Brätt, and the Ven. Richard McEvoy, Archdeacons; the Rev. Samuel Snodgrass, priest-in-charge of St. Paul's; Louis F. Stauss, co-chairman for the Fund in the Bronx Convocation; George Oakes, chairman of the Bishop's Men for the Bronx; and George Lopaus, Area 2 Chairman. The Rev. E. Perren Hayes represented the Rev. Leslie Lang, co-chairman, who was unable to attend. Among those present were representatives of many Bronx parishes, civic leaders, city and state officials, and representatives of other denominations.

The new three-story and basement Church House will contain an adult lounge for forty people, Church offices, living quarters for two clergy families, and for the sexton. The present 110 year old rectory building will be demolished.

Most of the buildings surrounding St. Paul's, from 169th Street to 171st Street, and from Park Avenue to Third Avenue, will be demolished to make way for the new 1600 family Gouverneur Morris Housing Project. St. Paul's and a Junior High School will be the only present buildings left standing in the area. When the housing project is completed St. Paul's and its new Church House will sit in the middle of a large recreation area.

Construction of the Church House at St. Paul's is one of the many projects planned by the Diocese. The urban phase of the 175th Anniversary program is directed at modernization and expansion of present facilities and the construction of new churches in areas where housing projects are being built.

Organized as a chapel of St. Ann's, Morrisania, in 1849, St. Paul's became a parish in 1853. For 110 years it has continued steadfast in its Christian Witness through sometimes difficult, always changing, times and conditions. The congregation is growing. With this growth there has come a more widespread sense of stewardship. To date the people of St. Paul's have pledged more than $6,000 to the Anniversary Fund.

CHILDREN'S LEISURE CHALLENGES CHURCH

FOR TEN months of each year the Church competes with the community for attention. This is particularly true for children and young people whose lives for these ten months are so much caught up in school and many other clubs and groups.

Suddenly, in most places, this competition stops late in June to be revived again in mid-September. Thousands of children find themselves cast into a vacuum, and many of them are quite incapable of remaining happily in it for more than a few days. They welcome some kind of organized program.

This is the Church's big opportunity, yet so often the Church follows the community pattern and closes down its week-day program as well as its Sunday School.

Recently more and more parishes have been looking at this situation and have made plans to use at least part of the summer months. Those who have done so are convinced of the validity of several surprising facts, including the following:

◈ Children in all types of parishes respond. The city children respond in great numbers, but so do those in the suburbs and in the rural areas.

◈ In a summer program there is an opportunity to reach children who respond at no other time.

◈ All are amazed to learn how much more can be done in a few days of consecutive opportunity in contrast to what can be done in small bits of time, once a week.

◈ All are pleasantly surprised to find that they have even less trouble recruiting the leaders they need for a summer program than they do for the regular program.

◈ Program is easier in the summer — not confined to the parish house, and with parks and beaches nearby.

What form do these Summer Programs take?

● In the so-called inner-city parishes and missions (St. Edward the Martyr, St. Mary's, Manhattanville; St. Peter's, Chelsea; Lower East Side Mission) the program goes on all summer. In some instances it is a "club type" program throughout the summer, e.g., a Tuesday instructed Eucharist, a Friday beach trip, a Wednesday afternoon craft period.

● In some parishes a Vacation School operates for two or three weeks, as an isolated project.

● Some parishes carry a group-graded Sunday School throughout the summer, and provide special outdoor occasions.

● Some parishes urge their children to attend Church services wherever they are each Sunday and provide attendance cards to be signed by the local clergy.

Most of our parishes need to learn some of the lessons that our inner-city parishes know well — when children and young people have leisure time they need help to know how to use it. When the Church is on the job, providing a relaxed program which combines recreation, crafts, worship and instruction some very exciting things happen. The Church not only provides a service for the children, it successfully makes a plea for consecutive response which the children are then free to give.

Those parishes which can identify need for a full summer program, and will plan early enough, can receive valuable staff assistance from the National Council's Summer Project program at very little cost in salary and maintenance.

This Summer Project program makes it possible for college students or older young people to dedicate their holiday to the service of the Church. This is often a testing time and out of such summer experience full time vocations to the Church's work have frequently developed. During this present year there are many more leaders available than the Church seems able to use.

WOOSTER SPEAKERS CHOSEN

The Department of Christian Education has announced that key-note speakers have been chosen for the New York Youth Conferences to be held at Wooster School, Danbury, Conn., the latter part of August.

Junior High School Conferences: The Rev. J. C. Michael Allen, Assistant Minister at Grace Church, Manhattan. Senior High School Conference: The Rev. Canon Bernard C. Newman, Vicar of Trinity Church, Manhattan.

The theme for both conferences will be "God Speaks" to underline the place of the Bible in present day living. This theme will be carried out primarily through Bible instruction, a key-note address and small group discussion sessions each day.

The Rev. Edward Nason West, Canon Sacrist at the Cathedral, will serve as Chaplain for both conferences.

DIOCESAN CONFIRMATION PREPARATION ACTIVITY

THE COMMISSION on Confirmation Preparation, appointed by the Bishop following the 1958 Diocesan Convention, has met regularly each month, receiving and acting on reports from its sub-committees.

The Commission came into being as a result of the Bishop's concern about adequate Confirmation preparation. In addressing the Convention on the subject, he said: "I wish again to stress the importance of adequate Confirmation preparation. Too many after Confirmation become lapsed communicants, or conventional and casual Christians. This happens in part because of lack of commitment, and a lack of careful, adequate instruction. Furthermore, there is often no follow-through of fellowship and interest on the part of the congregation in the newly confirmed. I would point out that this matter of adequate Confirmation preparation is not only the concern of the parish priest who presents the candidates, but also it is the concern of the Bishop who confirms them. Every person presented to the Bishop should understand that Confirmation is personal commitment to Christ, and be aware of the obligations and duties of a Christian and a Churchman.

"On the recommendation of the Department of Christian Education I am organizing a Diocesan Commission on Confirmation Preparation to be made up of ordained and lay leadership well versed in the theological, pedagogical and parochial disciplines."

The Commission subsequently appointed by the Bishop is composed of the following:

Chairman: The Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, D.D., S.T.D.
Vice-chairman: Dr. Virginia D. Harrington
Secretary: The Rev. Canon J. Stuart Wetmore
The Rev. Dr. George W. Barrett
The Rev. Frank L. Carruthers

Mr. Hugh Riddleberger
The Rev. Robert R. Spears, Jr.
The Rev. Philip M. Styles
The Rev. Dr. R. E. Terwilliger
The Rev. David B. Weden

Director Appointed

THE REV. Donald S. Cheetham again has been appointed Program Director of the Wilderness Conferences to be conducted this summer in Bear Mountain Park. Working under the staff of the Department of Christian Education, Mr. Cheetham will head up a team of eight leaders.

His experience at St. John's Conference last summer, added to his already broad experience in other camping programs and our New York Youth Conferences, has given him excellent preparation for the five conferences scheduled:

June 28th—July 3rd
July 5th—July 17th
July 19th—July 24th
July 26th—Aug. 7th
Aug. 9th—Aug. 14th

Mr. Cheetham, formerly assistant at Holy Trinity Church, Manhattan, and Rector of St. Alban's Parish, Staten Island, is a graduate of Virginia Theological Seminary. He is at present doing graduate work at the New School of Social Research, and since February 13th has been administrative assistant to the Headmaster of Ascension Day School (Castleton) on Staten Island.

He will take up his duties at St. John's on June 22nd.

The Wilderness Conferences will continue the emphasis developed experimentally last year, in which young people explored the relationship between work and worship. In a carefully guided program young people prepared their own meals, did manual work on the property and followed a regular schedule of worship and instruction in a relaxed Christian community.

DIOCESAN CONVENTION SET FOR MAY 12th

THE 178th Convention of the Diocese of New York will be held on Tuesday, May 12, 1959, in Synod Hall, Cathedral Close, 110th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, New York City.

Following a celebration of the Holy Communion in the Cathedral at 8:15 a.m. and breakfast in the Undercroft of the Synod House, the business sessions of the Convention will open at 10:00 a.m.

The Convention is the legislative body of the Diocese consisting of all canonically qualified Clergymen together with three Lay Delegates from each parish in union with the Convention, and one Lay Delegate from each organized mission.

As Clerical and Lay Delegates leave the Cathedral, following Holy Communion, they will be given tickets of admission to breakfast. These will be collected at the undercroft doors, downstairs in Synod House, where breakfast will be served until 9:45 a.m.

Luncheon tickets will be distributed by the pages at the close of the morning session.

Cooperation with the ticket arrangements will be greatly appreciated. It is important that an accurate accounting may be obtained of the number served.

EPISCOPAL CHURCHWOMEN SHOW VARIED ACTIVITIES

Objectives of Episcopal Churchwoman Cited

THE purpose of Episcopal Church women, as stated in the Diocesan Constitution, is: "To unite the women of the Diocese of New York in a program of worship, study, service, gifts, and fellowship which will deepen and strengthen their own spiritual lives and lead them into service for the Church in the parish, the community, the diocese, the nation, and the world."

Objectives are to bring into one association all the women of the diocese and, paradoxically, to free more women from organizational Church work; to send into the world trained members from the Church who will go out as Christians to do the work of the Church.

In Reuel Howe's book "The Creative Years," we are reminded that "the purpose of the Church is not to serve itself, but to be the redeeming community." To be this, the Church must have a base and organization, with those who maintain that base and act as leaders in planning and interpreting the program of the Church to other members who do the work of the Church in the world.

With these thoughts in mind, women of the parishes are working toward unified parish planning by all groups and every woman in each parish. This will serve to avoid duplication of work, foster closer fellowship, understanding and concern for one another's efforts. With a sense of wholeness, an atmosphere will be created in which the contributions of each woman can be appreciated and supported, whether she is primarily interested in Mission Supply or work in her community, or engaged in providing Christian nurture for children in her own home.

There is recognition of the fact that women's groups are composed of members of the parish churches in the change in designation from Women's Auxiliary to Episcopal Churchwomen. As members they assume the responsibility of planning and working with all other groups and members of a parish in so far as possible. Under the Triennial theme "One Family in Christ," the emphasis for diocesan women beginning next Fall will be "Today's Family." An opportunity is provided for closer cooperation in program planning between men and women in study projects and action because the General Division of Laymen's Work of the National Council has chosen as its study subject for next Fall "Christian Family Life." The committee report on "The Family in Contemporary Society" from the Lambeth Conference provides good material which has been presented to all members of the Church.

Episcopal Churchwomen in the Diocese of New York will continue to train leaders to maintain the base, but it will also seek to simplify the conduct of many, or overlapping, activities so that more women may be about the Church's mission in the home and in the world.

Supply Department Active

Supply work is not all sewing. There are many ways everyone can participate.

First of all assignments are made to the diocese from the requests received by Miss Dorothy Stabler, National Supply Secretary. In the Diocese of New York these requests are then divided among the Convocations and each parish gets its specific assignments for items to be sewn in parish workrooms.

Second, other ready-made items are requested, including everything from sheets to hospital supplies; however, most of these items are now purchased wholesale by money from the Readymade Buying Fund and the Dispensary Fund.

Third, good used clothing is needed, although in New York, Thrift Shop projects compete with this assignment in a few parishes.

The Supply Department of the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese is busy meeting all the requests which come from the missionary fields through Miss Stabler's office. For further information, contact your Convocation Supply Officer who is listed in the back of the year-book.

Leaders Training Courses Popular In Diocese

To further the mission of the Church is the ultimate objective of Episcopal Churchwomen and an important project of the women in the Diocese is learning about "the machinery" that the Episcopal Church has set up to carry out its mission.

In 1954 the Diocesan Board, under the presidency of Mrs. Arthur J. Simpson, inaugurated a Leaders Training Course. Its aim: "To inform present and potential leaders of Episcopal Churchwomen about the whole program of the Church and to prepare them for active participation in its work." To date more than 500 women have taken the course and files of letters attest to its worth.

The course was designed by a Diocesan Committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. William E. Leidt and was subsequent adapted for use in the Convocations by Mrs. George W. Barrett, LTC chairman 1956-58. All Leaders Training Courses are under the general supervision of a Diocesan Committee, currently chaired by Mrs. William H. Deatly.

Both day and evening courses are scheduled and are divided into four or five sessions. Membership is limited to twenty-five women representing almost as many parishes. A variety of meeting places is chosen among the parishes and missions of the Diocese, including the Church Missions House and the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

The course includes talks on General Convention, the National Council and General Division of Women's Work, the program of the Diocese of New York, the program of the Episcopal Churchwomen, Parish Program Planning, How to Make a Speech and How to Conduct a Meeting. A special feature of each session is a talk on the work of the host parish or institution.

Subjects are presented by speakers actively engaged in the area covered. The Rev. C. Rankin Barnes, secretary of General Convention and Mrs. Arthur M. Sherman, executive director of the General Division of Women's Work frequently present the "national" picture, and Mr. Theodor Oxholm, Treasurer of the Diocese of New York, the Diocesan program. The program of the women is covered by Diocesan and Convocation officers responsible for particular aspects of the work.

Question periods follow each speaker and provoke lively discussion. Noonday devotions precede the lunch hour.

All Convocations have held Leaders Training Courses this year and they continue to be a means of bringing many women into the active life of the Church.

Frances Everitt Jones

Miss Frances Everitt Jones, 17, of New Rochelle, has been selected by the National Girls Friendly Society for a summer service project at Norton Memorial Infirmary in Louisville, Kentucky.

Years ago, at the age of 12, Miss Jones indicated a desire to become a medical missionary. Selection for the summer project will take her into one of the most modern hospitals in America. In addition to working as a nurses aide she will assist in other phases of therapeutic arts and crafts and hospital administration.

Miss Jones is a communicant of Christ Church, Pelham Manor, where she is active in the Adult Bible Study Group and Christ Church Youth Group.

TO THE OWNER OF A LEAKING BUILDING "bids" mean little. Don't let anyone tell you that water infiltration in masonry can be cured with magical "coatings". That's the easy technique employed by itinerant "waterproofers" who attempt to lure you with low prices. The only way to stop leaks and seepage PERMANENTLY is to remove disintegrated mortar from all weak areas and repoint the joints with properly compounded mortar. Rockwell Newman brings to this problem over 38 years experience, plus the skills of highly trained men equipped with modern tools. Our clientele is comprised of people who seek, and are willing to pay fair prices for PERMANENT corrective workmanship. We can prove to you that our charges are ultimately one of the lowest.

New York Altar Guild Active In Many Places

IN 1903 an Episcopal Church woman visted the Tombs Prison. While there she went to the room which was being used as a chapel. Its crude and barren condition troubled her greatly. Encouraged by the Superintendent of City Missions, she enlisted the help of six women from six Manhattan parishes. Together they formed an Altar Guild for the chapels of the Episcopal City Mission Society.

Now entering its fifty - sixth year the Guild provides the elements, vestments, altar linens and sanctuary furnishings for the chapels in prisons, hospitals, and other institutions served by the Society. In addition it donates supplies to missions of the Diocese of New York.

Among their many activities during the past year the Guild installed a new dossal in the Riker's Island Penitentiary Chapel. They donated thirty choir vestments and a processional cross for the men at Newhampton Training School. A processional cross, American flag and standard, and altar flower vases were given to the Society's summer camp at Lake Elko.

Members of the Guild are communicants of the churches of the Diocese of New York. Those interested in becoming members, either associate or active, are asked to communicate with the New York Altar Guild, Inc., Room 2751, 120 Broadway, New York 5, N. Y.

Cathedral Library Offers Choice Volumes

IN recent months the Cathedral Library has acquired, either by gift or by purchase, about 250 books, all of them "current and choice." This brings the total collection to approximately 8,000 volumes.

All persons who like to read are welcome to come in either to browse or to borrow. Apart from a few reference items, the books may be taken out without charge for a period of one month, with privilege of renewal unless the book is in general demand.

The Library is open from 9 to 12:30 and from 2 to 5 Monday through Friday, except on holidays, and the Librarian is glad to mail books to readers anywhere who find it inconvenient to come in person. (The Cathedral pays the out-going postage; the reader, the return postage. The postal address is: The Library, Cathedral Heights, New York 25, N.Y.)

Limited by both space and funds, the Library has determined to specialize, when it comes to new purchases, in the fields of liturgics, apologetics, and pastoral theology. It also has an important section devoted to ecclesiastical art, architecture, and music. But readers with an interest in mystical and devotional works, in patristic theology, church history, the Bible, missions, Christian sociology, philosophy, psychology, ecumenics, preaching and teaching, will all find something in the Library to suit their tastes. A collection of Anglican tracts from Great Britain, Canada, and the United States, is an important feature of the Library, and there is also a valuable section devoted to current theological magazines.

SPRING CONVOCATIONS HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL

The greatly accelerated activity of the Department of Missions was stressed at the annual Spring Convocation meetings held throughout the Diocese during April.

Speakers at the urban Convocations included the Rev. Louis L. Mitchell, Jr., the Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, and Christ Church, Patterson, and the Rev. William Reisman of St. David's, Highland Mills, St. Ann's, Washingtonville, and St. John's, Arden. Both men presented the work and problems of the Church in suburban and rural neighborhoods.

Speakers at the suburban Convocations included the Rev. Ralph Krueger of St. Margaret's, Bronx, the Rev. John Wells of St. David's, Bronx, and the Rev. James Gusweller of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan. Each presented a phase of the work and problems of the Church in the inner city.

The speakers were introduced by the Ven. George F. Brätt, Archdeacon, in the suburban Convocations, and by the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, Archdeacon, in the urban Convocations.

Bishop Donegan and Bishop Boynton summarized the programs with an interpretation of the Diocesan concern and the reality of the partnership that must be encouraged and fostered between all parishes and missions in advancing the work of the Diocese.

CONVENTIONAL

UNFORTUNATELY many Diocesan Conventions are conventional, routine, uninspiring. From the sound of the opening gavel to the closing benediction all is cut and dried and those who come, sit and listen, arise and depart, having cast their ballot without knowing the results of their vote and feeling very much like automatons being moved by strings hidden somewhere in the background.

This was not so at Synod House on May 12th when the Diocese of New York in Convention assembled heard the exciting news of the diocese on the move with plans for celebrating the 175th anniversary of its founding. The diocese is really moving ahead as was evidenced by the vote of a venture of faith in the total diocesan coverage by the sending of the Bulletin to every communicant family in the diocese.

Delegates who remained throughout the day were rewarded by seeing the job through; responding to the serious business of the Church's work as reports from the front lines were given; hearing of the Bishop's concern over casual confirmation preparation and the fine beginning of his special commission for improving the situation; receiving reports on the wide-ranging service to the community through the Seamen's Church Institute, the Episcopal City Mission Society and other affiliated agencies, and the Department of Christian Social Relations.

While some complained of insufficient time, for debate there are few delegates who would be willing to give up two days for the Convention. A few speakers deplored the cut in diocesan appropriations to affiliated agencies, but the Bishop made it clear that most of the agencies had access to funds which the diocese did not; and that the diocese was still not paying its full quota to the General Church's Program.

The 178th Convention of the Diocese of New York was not conventional, as the reports in this issue of the Bulletin abundantly testify, but unless delegates make reports to their vestries and congregations, and follow-up votes and actions as they are implemented, it is possible for our conventions to become routine and deadly dull.

The Bishop is as good at wielding the gavel as he is the spade and the convention last month was promptly started and ended and all business on the docket was done decently and in order, with no speaker refused the floor and with general good humor and harmony prevailing.

SYNOD HOUSE WIDE OPEN FOR CONVENTION

ONCE a year at least the doors are opened to Synod House but seldom oftener. This beautiful house where the Bishops have their offices is the central gathering place for the Diocese and is impressive when the clergy and laity of the Diocese assemble some 600 strong to conduct the business of the largest diocese in the American Church.

With the lower floor reserved for official delegates, the press, the diocesan officers and staff members, and the gallery for visitors, during the morning session at least the Synod House was filled to capacity.

Broken only by the voting, early in the session, the interest held all those who were present until adjournment at 1:00. Noticeable for the first time was a goodly sprinkling of women delegates, since the Convention voted last year to seat them as official representatives from parishes and missions.

Seated on the rostrum with the Bishop of the Diocese, were two distinguished visitors, the Rt. Rev. Louis Bliss Whittemore, retired Bishop of Western Michigan, who has been assisting the Bishops of the Diocese in confirmations, and the Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells, England, who addressed the Convention late in the morning session.

The Bishop was flanked all day by his chancellor, Mr. Ludlow Fowler, and his secretary and assistant secretary, the Rev. Bradford W. Ketchum, and the Rev. Gordon L. Kidd, and carried on the business of the Convention with great dispatch.

Some of the highlights in the morning session are well worth reporting. In introducing the Bishop of Bath and Wells, Bishop Donegan made reference to the pictures which appeared recently in the New York Times and in Life Magazine of the recent session of a church assembly where several shots of English Bishops sound asleep were gleefully printed in English papers. Bishop Donegan said that in spite of the fact that the Church of England was described as "A Sleeping Giant" that certainly the Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells was wide awake and would bring greetings to the Convention. He did so in a most delightful manner and restored whatever reputation the English Bishops had lost through the recent unfavorable publicity.

DELEGATES CROWD INTO SYNOD HALL FOR OPENING GAVEL.

During Bishop Boynton's report of the Council and the departments of the Diocese the microphone went dead and it was very difficult to hear him. Along about the middle of his report the mike playback caused a very loud buzzing sound which annoyed both Bishop Boynton and the Convention delegates. However, he carried on as a good trooper, but when suddenly the buzzing stopped, he uttered a fervent "Thank God."

One item of business at the beginning of every convention is the reading off of the list of delinquent parishes and missions, who failed to get in their annual reports on time. However, this is always mercifully balanced by allowing them the privilege of the vote of convention if they have turned in their reports prior to convention, and a last ditch offer is always made to those who are willing to get in their reports immediately preceding the balloting. It seems however that the Diocese ought to hold to its deadline, take it seriously, and get parochial reports in.

Chaplain John Krumm of Columbia University presented a resolution commending the Bishop's address on its reference to the housing problem.

An American Dean

The Rev. Cuthbert Aikman Simpson, former sub-dean of the General Theological Seminary, has been appointed Dean of Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford, England, succeeding the Very Rev. John Lowe. He is the first American to be appointed dean of a cathedral in England.

Dean Simpson was professor of Old Testament at the seminary from 1940-1954. For the past five years he has served as canon of Christ Church Cathedral and as regius professor of Hebrew at Oxford University.

THE BISHOP AND THE CAMPAIGN

IN his 10th convention address as Bishop of New York, the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan pointed out that 175 years is a long time in the history of America and that those years can be of growth or decline. He made it clear that the Diocese has had its ups and downs of growing but we are very definitely in a growing era and for that he gave profound thanks to almighty God.

He devoted a portion of his address reporting on the status of the 175th Anniversary Fund and telling of the 175th Anniversary celebration next year.

The Bishop said in part: "I had hoped that at this Convention I could announce to you that the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign had been completed according to the plan adopted by the Convention in 1957. But I cannot make this announcement because there are still 100 churches which for varying reasons have not yet activated campaigns, although gifts from one or two individuals in 44 of them total $65,000. A number of these will complete campaigns before summer.

"I am happy to say that the 112 churches which have made purposeful efforts in the Campaign have produced gifts and pledges totalling $1,530,000 and there have been miscellaneous gifts of $146,000.

"The total of gifts and pledges to date is $1,741,000. This is a record of which everyone who has contributed can be proud. It is a challenge to those churches which have yet to take their full part."

The Bishop announced that construction of the first new church to be built in this city, as a result of this Campaign, is expected to begin this Fall. It will be the new St. Andrew's Church on Castle Hill Avenue in the Clason Point area of the Bronx. A ground breaking ceremony is scheduled for May 31.

"Two existing Bronx churches in critical areas of change and redevelopment will benefit by the expansion of their facilities. A new church house for St. Paul's Church in Morrisania is under construction and plans are being prepared for a new parish house for St. Margaret's.

THE BISHOP ADDRESSES CONVENTION

"In the convocations outside the city a site for a new church has been purchased in Washingtonville in Orange County. A rectory to provide a base of operations for determining the potential for a new work in the town of LaGrange, Dutchess County, has been bought. We have an option to purchase a site for a new church in northern Westchester. Commitments have been made to loan at interest in excess of $135,000, for a new church in Stone Ridge, Ulster County, now under construction, and for a new rectory at Lake Mahopac, Putnam County. Other loan applications now being studied will, if accepted, make possible the erection of two new church buildings in areas where existing facilities are outgrown.

"Altogether it is expected that the total cash of $800,000 on hand at the first of last month will be at work by this Fall. This is indeed the Church at work."

Following immediately on his report on the Campaign, the Bishop spoke of the 175 years of diocesan life, "The beginning of our church in this area goes back to 1697 when Trinity Church received its charter from the British Crown and began the distinguished record of worship and service which still continues. The Diocese, however, was not organized until 88 years later at the first convention held in St. Paul's Chapel in 1785 after the close of the War of Independence.

"Since the regular convention next year will be such a notable one in the history of our Diocese, I am appointing a special committee to arrange a Service of Thanksgiving, and to plan an appropriate celebration to commemorate this significant anniversary. The Rev. Dr. John Heuss, rector of Trinity Church, New York, has accepted appointment as honorary chairman of the 175th Anniversary celebration committee."

A few important statistics for Diocesan information were presented by the Bishop at the beginning of his address:

| 3,541 | Confirmed |
| 252 | Received from the Roman Catholic Church |
| 9 | Received from the Orthodox Church |
| 14 | Candidates for Holy Orders ordained to the Diaconate |
| 13 | Deacons ordained to the Priesthood |
| 74 | In preparation for the ministry |
| 424 | Clergy canonically resident in the Diocese |
| 91 | Clergy licensed to officiate in the Diocese |

The antiquity of the Diocese was made a point in the Bishops' address with the following anniversary celebrations: St. Peter's, Westchester Square, Bronx, 265 years old; St. Andrew's Church, Staten Island, and Trinity School, 250 years old; Grace Church, Manhattan, St. Paul's, Yonkers, and All Angels Church, Manhattan, 150 years old; St. Paul's, Ossining, and Seamans Church Institute, 125 years old.

The Bishop is deeply concerned with the social problems which confront the Diocese. Speaking of housing, he said: "All of you know from my Pastoral Letter of last December of my interest in housing and the role the Church should play in this. Signs of our continuing concern are the consideration given to housing at some of the recent convocation meetings. Also, the Committee on Christian Citizenship of the Department of Christian Social Relations convened a conference on the parish church and urban housing where over 50 clergy and lay leaders met with a panel of experts.

"This conference was unanimous in recommending that our parishes coordinate their efforts with other community groups to improve housing conditions. They also proposed an amendment to the Administrative Code of the City of New York to require the licensing of the agent for a landlord for each apartment building in the city. Attention was called also to the provisions of the program for middle income housing and to the possibility for parishes to participate with other civic groups in this program. I call the attention of the Convention to these three recommendations and hope they will receive careful consideration."

The Bishop aptly described the new archdeacon, who is responsible for diocesan aided churches in urban situations, as "possessed of kindly wisdom and devotion." Archdeacon McEvoy will certainly help to implement the Bishop's determination "to meet the fundamental problem of the inner-city ministry, which is to implant stability, responsibility, hope, leadership and a spirit of brotherhood and love, in local communities where people are surrounded by fear, frustrations, suspicion, insecurity and loneliness."

Bishop Donegan has inaugurated an award: the Bishop of New York Cross for distinguished service to the Diocese. Two years ago the first award went to Mr. Otto Koegel of Granite Springs and this year the Bishop made the second award to Mr. Eugene W. Stetson, of New York, for "his enthusiastic, sincere, whole-hearted and most generous support of the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign . . . as a visible expression of our gratitude."

At the conclusion of his address, the Bishop asked for consent to elect a second suffragan bishop to help carry the load of the Diocese. He reminded the Convention that it had been the custom for many years to have three bishops and with the increased work of the Diocese it was essential now for several retired bishops to be brought in to help carry out the confirmation schedule.

The Rev. Frederick M. Morris, rector of St. Thomas Church, presented a resolution asking for permission, which the Convention gave unanimously. After the necessary consents from the Bishops of the Church the Bishop will set a date for an electing convention.

The Bishop covered a lot of territory in his address, all the way from a fine eulogy on Bishop Gilbert and Dr. Pitt to a survey of the significance of the Lambeth Conference and General Convention, with a reminder that the Council of the Diocese is only seven years old, to an emphasis on the Day of Witness with "Christ for the City" as its theme, and finally to announcing that a former abbott of the Roman Catholic Church has been received into the Diocese.

CALM ON SURFACE

The Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells told this story to the Convention: "English Bishops have been described as like swans on the River Severn, floating calm and serene, but underneath the surface they are paddling like hell."

3 GOVERNORS CHURCHMEN

A recent survey has developed that of the 49 United States governors only 3 are Episcopalians. They are Le Roy Collins of Florida, Albert B. Chandler of Kentucky, and G. Mennen Williams of Michigan.

GLEANINGS FROM THE SUFFRAGAN'S NOTEBOOK

ONE of the many responsibilities of the Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York is to act as secretary for the Diocesan Council. This important and exacting job requires not only devotion and accuracy but a comprehensive knowledge of the Diocese and what is happening in it.

The Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton possesses all of these requirements in a remarkable degree. His report at Convention was a general bringing together of the reports of the various departments of the Council and a resume of their accomplishments during the past fiscal year. The highlight of his report was the exciting presentation of the work of the Department of Missions.

"Two matters of extreme importance were brought to the attention of the Council by its Department of Christian Education at the October meeting.

"The first dealt with the request for the appointment of an Executive Secretary for the Division of Youth.

"The second item concerning the Division of College Work was presented to the Council by the Rev. Dr. Robert E. Terwilliger, chairman of that division.

"Concerning the request for a full time executive for the Division of Youth, the Council voted to receive the report with interest and commended it to the Department of Finance for consideration even though this item had not been included originally in the 1959 asking budget, and further, expressed the hope that this item might be included in the 1960 budget.

"The matter of departmental status for the Division of College Work was debated on principle, rather than on any financial considerations which would be involved in implementing the creating of a new department. But the Council definitely felt that since college work is, in its very essence, integrally a part of the total scope of Christian Education, therefore, it should remain a division of the appropriate department, rather than become a departmental entity in itself. In this context, the Council voted not to recommend to the Convention the organization of a Department of College Work.

"There is not the slightest question in the mind of the Council that the Church's mission to the colleges should be promoted as vigorously as possible, and that the number of workers, clerical and lay, on our college campuses should be increased.

"The January meeting of the Council each year is, by and large —if I may be permitted to use the term—the "heart-breaker," for it is at this meeting that the total budget of the Council for the current year must be adjusted to the declared expectations from all sources for that year. Your Council's task last January was to adjust the total of the already revised askings of the departments, and the arbitrary amount budgeted for social agencies, namely $443,313, to the expectation figure of $378, 399. In other words (and I want you to hear these words), $64,914 worth of anticipated work, approved by last year's Convention, had to be abandoned!

"The Council is convinced that priority must always be given to such portions of its work as depend entirely upon the contributions to the program of the Church, rather than to the affiliated agencies which have generous sources of support other than that derived from Council funds.

"There are 44 missions and aided parishes in the Diocese, which receive aid from the Department of Missions. These are located in all of the seven convocations. One is in Richmond; four are in the Bronx; five are in Manhattan; six are in Westchester; eight are in Dutchess. There are nine in Ramapo, and eleven in Hudson!

"Forty-three dedicated clergymen minister to these 44 congregations.

"During the past year, 9,538 public services of worship were conducted by these 43 for their people!

"There are three independent dioceses and 12 missionary districts in the American Church, each of which has fewer baptized members than has this 44-church missionary enterprise of the Diocese of New York.

"There are 12 dioceses and 24 missionary districts in the American Church, each of which has fewer congregations and/or clergy than has this 44-church missionary enterprise of the Diocese of New York.

"Stipends, including pension premiums and other basic perquisites, of our Diocesan missionary clergy add up to an impressive annual sum of $205,000. Of this amount, $145,000 is contributed by the Department of Missions, and $60,000 by the congregations served.

"In addition to stipends, $192,000 was provided by the Department of Missions toward the support of this missionary work, and $115,000 was contributed locally towards self-support. These latter figures, added to the $205,000 stipend figure, represent a diocesan missionary operation of more than half a million dollars!

"One further statistic of dramatic proportions concerning the missionary enterprise, wholly within the boundaries of the Diocese of New York—the Board of Managers, which is the corporate title of the Department of Missions of the Council, owns or controls 40 church buildings, 20 clergy residences, 24 parish houses, and four other buildings, including the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, which it also operates.

"The replacement cost, less depreciation, of this missionary real estate is in excess of four and one half million dollars!"

There were of course many other facts to note in the Suffragan Bishop's report which can only be summarized in epigramatic form.

The general giving of the Diocese is improving each year as the clergy make stewardship more and more the watchword.

One of the most significant events of the past year was the appointment of a second archdeacon by Bishop Donegan, the Rev. Richard McEvoy, former rector of St. Mark's In-the-Bouwerie, who has special responsibility for the urban work of the Diocese.

The director of the Department of Promotion has resigned because of illness. The Bishop accepted the resignation of Mr. Harrison Fiddesof with regret.

Mr. Eric Ley has been appointed executive director of the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign.

The Department of Christian Social Relations was chosen to make a full scale report to the Convention. This report was given by the Rev. Hugh D. McCandless, chairman.

The Episcopal Service to the Aged was terminated and its work referred to the Department of Christian Social Relations.

DIOCESE SHARES SPOTLIGHT AT ARDEN CONFERENCE

EIGHT DELEGATES appointed by the Bishop, attended the Ecumenical Conference, sponsored by the Protestant Council of the City of New York, at Arden House, Harriman, New York, April 24th and 25th.

The conference, attended by 83 leaders of Protestant denominations in the 22 county metropolitan area, was called by the Protestant Council "to give opportunity to denominations to think through their mission in the metropolitan area in relationship to each other."

The following are highlights from the Bishop's statement:

" . . . The mind of the Anglican Communion on the World Council has been stated in several places, of which the following from the recent Lambeth Reports is typical:

'It is a matter of no small importance that the delegates of all the churches represented in the World Conference on Faith and Order held at Lausanne — including the Eastern Orthodox Churches — should have agreed with enthusiasm upon the message which the Church (the Gospel) is commissioned to deliver to the world.

'It is upon the basis of this unanimity with regard to the Gospel Message that we can enter into cooperative action with non-Episcopal churches.' (1930)

'The World Council of Churches is a fellowship of churches which accept Our Lord Jesus Christ as God and Saviour. The Council has helped the churches to come closer together; and this has been achieved without involving any compromise in the sphere of doctrine or any limitation in the sphere of autonomy.' (1948)

"The interest and concern of the Episcopal Church in the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States of America is clearly evidenced by its continuing participation and support of its program.

"To the end that this cooperative spirit can be openly demonstrated and fostered, and a united impact brought to bear on the community as a whole, the Diocese of New York affirms its place as a member-unit of the Protestant Council of the City of New York.

"We also affirm our conviction that the true basis for cooperative enterprise is the strength of the participating churches, the representatives of which should take their place in cooperative action in the fullness of their own heritage rather than in a minimizing of their historic faith and order.

"Each communion can only exist by the development of a sense of loyalty within its membership. The Protestant Council therefore must avoid the establishment of programs based on divided loyalties at the local level. We affirm as a sound strategy cooperative planning and work which develops programs through denominational channels.

"Since the primary characteristic of a cooperative council rests in the fact that it has no entity except the entity of its member units, and no purpose except that it be the expression of what its member units desire to do together, the relationship of the members of a Christian cooperative council, whether named by a Church or by some other member unit, are members of Churches and should prepare themselves to participate in the Council by maintaining a close relationship to the thinking and policies of their own denomination.

"In the light of the above I urge the clergy and laity of the Diocese of New York to welcome all opportunities to work together with their fellow Christians toward the fulfillment of that oneness for which Our Lord prayed."

Delegates in attendance representing the Episcopal Church were: Arthur A. Atha, Albert E. Brownbridge, the Rev. Dr. James W. Kennedy, the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, Theodor Oxholm, and the Rev. J. Stuart Wetmore.

ENGLISH CHURCH USING FUND PROFESSIONALS

"The Christian Century" magazine has an interesting report from London as follows: "The professional fund raisers are busy among our (English) Churches. Their know-how in planned giving is refashioning haphazard methods of church support. The Church of England sent to its 12,000 parish parsons a 96 page booklet "The Christian Stewardship of Money" which comes out boldly on the side of planned finance. The present average Anglican gives only 36 cents a week to his church which relies on endowment for another 33 cents. The goal is to lift the basic standard of giving in the parishes where half the money is raised and spent. Such an accomplishment will amount to a revolution in a church which has relied too long on a financial heritage not adequately renewed by living givers."

*BISHOP DONEGAN CALLED THE ATTENTION of the Convention to a most unusual circumstance in the Diocese in that there are 5 clergymen, each with a son at General Theological Seminary. The Bishop called each of the fathers and sons to the platform to be recognized by the Convention. Fathers and sons are shown in the above pcture with Bishop Donegan. They are: l. to r. front row: Henry Douglas Coleman, Lawrence Bernard Larsen, Jr., the Rt. Rev. Charles F. ## St. Mark's In-the-Bouwerie

THE REV. MICHAEL ALLEN will become rector of the historic St. Mark's In-the-Bouwerie on August 1, succeeding the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, who resigned in December to accept the post of archdeacon in the Diocese of New York.

Born in 1927, Mr. Allen received his early education at Friends' Seminary and Riverdale Country School, New York. In 1945, after a year at Harvard, he entered the armed services. Following one year of duty in Japan as an officer in the Corps of Engineers, he returned to Harvard and graduated in 1950. After some graduate study at the Sorbonne in Paris, he joined the staff of LOOK magazine in 1951. He resigned as department editor in 1954 to enter the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass. After graduating from seminary in June, 1957, he was ordained by Bishop Donegan and joined the staff of Grace Church, Manhattan. Following the death of the Rev. Dr. Louis W. Pitt in April, Mr. Allen was named priest-in-charge at Grace Church. He is married to the former Priscilla Morison of Baltimore, Md. They have three children.

Grace Church, Manhattan

THE RT. REV. Benjamin M. Washburn, retired Bishop of Newark, will be in charge of Grace Church, Manhattan, during the vacancy caused by the death of the Rev. Louis W. Pitt. He will assume his duties in early summer.

Bishop Washburn, whose first charge as a clergyman was as a curate of Grace Church, retired in November, 1958, after 26 years as Bishop of Newark. He previously served parishes in Kansas City, Missouri and Boston. He is chairman of the Board of Trustees of the General Theological Seminary and has served as president of the Church Pension Fund.

Resurrection, Manhattan

The Rev. Charles Owen Moore, presently assistant minister at St. James, Manhattan, will join the staff of the Church of the Resurrection, from which he was a postulant, on September 1.

St. Thomas, Mamaroneck

The Rev. Wiley W. Merryman, presently serving as chaplain at St. Luke's Hospital, will become associate minister of St. Thomas's Church, Mamaroneck, New York, on September 1.

Intercession Chapel

The Rev. Roger O. Douglas, presently curate at Grace Church, Orange, New Jersey, will join the staff of the Chapel of the Intercession on June 1st. He is a graduate of Trinity College and General Theological Seminary.

NEWS OF EPISCOPAL CHURCHWOMEN . . . BLESS THEM

THE women of course, and we bless them because of what they mean to the Diocese. Here is a report from the Convention held on May 2nd at the Cathedral, where the women did sit, speak and vote.

Episcopal Churchwomen in the Diocese of New York were commended for their many accomplishments in furthering the work of the Church, by the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York, who addressed the group at their annual meeting held Saturday, May 2, in Synod Hall.

The Bishop noted the change in name from "Auxiliary," and said he was glad the women had attained their rightful status since for many years they have shared equally with the men in accepting responsibility and getting things done.

"The quality of the Church is yours and mine," he said, referring to the daily witnessing of Churchmen and women willing to let God work through them, and utterly dependent on Him.

Newly-elected officers on the diocesan board were installed by the Bishop: Mrs. Gurney Williams, president; Mrs. Donald K. Stevenson, vice-president; Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherford, assistant to the president; Mrs. William L. Gardner, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John F. Whylie, vice-president in charge of public relations.

Chairmen of Departments: Mrs. R. F. Mattesich, Church Periodical Club; Mrs. Frank R. Stich, Education; Mrs. W. Stanley Edgar, Jr., Mission Supply; Mrs. Woodson D. Scott, Youth and College Work.

Chairmen of Convocations: Mrs. William Van Benschoten, Hudson; Mrs. Robert Mikus, Ramapo; Mrs. R. Russell Brown, Richmond. Interim appointment by the president: Mrs. William McDonald, Westchester.

Chairman of nominating committee, Mrs. Landes Lewitin.

Preaching at the morning service the Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist at the Cathedral Church, noted the significant duties and responsibilities of Church women down the ages, especially those who were active throughout Christ's ministry.

During the brief business session, the revised constitution was unanimously approved and the treasurer reported for 1958:

|---|---|
| Cash receipts | $68,854.10 |
| Disbursements | $65,087.14 |
| Balance | $ 3,766.96 |

Three hundred women attended the meeting.

FALL SCHOOL OF WORSHIP

THE eighth annual Diocesan School of Worship, to be held the first four Mondays in November, 1959, will continue the study begun last Fall on the sacraments. Morning and evening sessions are sponsored jointly by the Bishop and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine and Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of New York. The morning school will be held in the Cathedral Church and identical evening sessions will be conducted in four mid-Manhattan parishes.

Clergy, laymen and women are welcome to attend either the day or evening school. The announcement of hours and parishes for the evening school will be published in the October BULLETIN.

THE BLUE BOX

APPROXIMATELY 15,000 women in the Diocese of New York have Blue Boxes for use in making the United Thank Offering, a tangible record of thankfulness for the blessings of daily living.

Users of the Blue Box live in parishes located from one end of the diocese to the other, but they have one thing in common—all have found a way to express the gratitude which rises in their minds and hearts on many diverse occasions.

Each parish has a custodian, who has in her custody the Blue Boxes.

Each convocation of the Diocese has a district officer who aids and advises the custodians in her area. These women are the channels of communication between diocesan and national officers, and those in the parishes.

Twice a year each custodian asks the women of her parish to bring the contents of their Blue Boxes to be offered to God as a parish offering.

Twice each year the custodian brings the gifts of the women in her group to a Diocesan Ingathering held at the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine.

The tangible gift of money is received and recorded by the diocesan treasurer of the United Thank Offering, and after each Ingathering it is forwarded to the treasurer of the National Council for safekeeping. Every third year, at the time of General Convention and the Triennial Meeting of the women of the Church, the offerings of the women of all dioceses are offered at the great Triennial Presentation. Placed on the golden alms basin by the diocesan treassurers, these gifts represent a great chorus of thanksgiving and a great outpouring of loving concern for others.

The gifts of the United Thank Offering are chiefly used for two purposes: first, for women workers, their training, equipment, salaries, and after service retirement pensions; second, for capital gifts, buildings, repairs and equipment. The end result is the maintenance of many workers stationed across the world, from a training center in New York and an Indian reservation in Wisconsin, to the mountain province of the Philippines and an education center in Liberia.

The gifts of the United Thank Offering are the gifts of life.

The Spring Ingathering amounts to $30,103 to date.

THREE MORE TO COME

Mrs. Gurney Williams, the president of the Episcopal Churchwomen for another three years, in her annual report made it clear the the new official name was "Episcopal Churchwomen, Diocese of New York." She reported on the program theme for the year, "One Family in Christ," and how widespread the use of it has been throughout the Diocese. Mrs. Williams reported in detail on all phases of the women's work of the Diocese including the United Thank Offering, the devotional life, the work of the convocations, and all other areas of the women's concern.

In the field of Christian Social Relations, Mrs. Williams said: "Fields of interest and action which involve many parishes, convocations and the Diocese, include work connected with the refugee program; world relief; support of Youth Consultation Service; Seamen's Church Institute; the Episcopal City Mission Society; volunteer work in hospitals, institutions, schools; interest and support of the migratory farm labor program. Projects are often jointly sponsored by inter-church groups or agencies, One such unusual venture is that of rehabilitation work among the women of Westfield State Farm in Bedford. Started by Episcopal Churchwomen, this assistance is being organized on an interdenominational basis.

TWO OF THE newly elected officers, Mrs. Gurney Williams and Mrs. Jamie Kerr.

"Miss Alice Palmer, our Port and immigration worker, continues to report case histories of persons and families for whom her office takes responsibility. In the past three months, 23 families have been kept together by the services of this office in the adjustment of status under the Immigration Law. Cases are referred to the office by hearing inspectors, consular officers and social agencies unfamiliar with immigration procedure, members of the clergy, relatives and by shipping officers. The port and immigration work has been a Christian social service project of the Episcopal Churchwomen for many years. It is supported by pledges from each parish branch in the Diocese."

One of the most significant contributions to the women's work of the Diocese is the Leaders Training Courses held in all convocations each year. More than 500 women have taken these courses since the inauguration in 1954."

In concluding her address Mrs. Williams pointed out that, "In back of coordinated program planning, one theme for basic reference, one Diocesan emphasis for focus, is the striving for an ultimate achievement: To simplify our manifold activity in order that we may more efficiently carry on our part of the Church's work and to create a truly Christian family atmosphere in our parishes in which every woman may find an 'inside place' to strengthen her for the work of the Church 'outside'."

NEW SEMINARY PLANNED

The recent National Council Spring meeting approved a report submitted by the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York, chairman of the planning committee on the Caribbean Seminary to be built at San Juan, Puerto Rico. The report established a board of trustees for the seminary, which will select a dean, subject to the approval of the National Council's committee on appointments.

Posthumously

GOD IN US by Miles Lowell Yates; Edited by W. Norman Pittenger and William H. Ralston, Jr., Seabury Press, $4.25.

I read The King in His Beauty and marvelled over the insights and clarity of expression. I was surprised however to learn that only those who were his students and colleagues at General Theological Seminary had the privilege of being in contact with the author. Ever since that slender volume of Advent meditations was published by Seabury Press, many have come to know Miles Lowell Yates and appreciate his worth. He died unexpectedly in Eastertide, 1956. Therefore no other volume was ever expected from his pen with the same power of devotional expression, and traces of poetry and mystics to enrich it.

It was a wonderful surprise when W. Norman Pittenger and William H. Ralston, Jr. put together God In Us from the material Miles Lowell Yates left behind. It was taken mainly from his lectures in ascetical theology, but the contents are so full of practical helps and homey illustrations that one forgets he is reading a book on theology. One feels rather as if he were being taken on a walk by a friend who knows the way, and all the beauties to be seen along it. This book is really an attempt to give a theory and practice of Christian devotion. It is an ideal introduction for the layman, as well as for the clergyman, to the life which is "hid with Christ in God" that Miles Lowell Yates so perfectly exemplified.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY 178th CONVENTION

MUSIC STUDY

The resolution on Church Music offered by the Reverend Hugh H. Henry was referred to the Cathedral staff for implementation. The resolution as offered by Fr. Henry follows:

Whereas, there is a tendency on the part of some clergymen to introduce modern music into the worship of the Church, and

Whereas, some have attempted to lower the standard of church music to the level of worldly music, be it therefore

Resolved: that this Convention authorize the calling of a conference of the best musical minds among the organists and clergymen in this Diocese to study the liturgical music for Morning Prayer, the Litany, and the Holy Communion, with a view to producing something modern, but worthy of the tradition, dignity, prestige and worship of the Episcopal Church.

URBAN HOUSING

The Rev. John McG. Krumm, Ph.D., underscored the emphasis in Bishop Donegan's address on the Church's concern for adequate housing and asked the Convention to commend the findings of the recent conference on the parish church and urban housing and directed the Department of Christian Social Relations to circulate them to all parishes and missions in the diocese.

HOBART COLLEGE NEEDS

The convention passed unanimously the resolution offered by the Rev. Dr. Albert A. Chambers commending the needs and opportunities of Hobart College to the clergy and laity of the diocese.

CANON 10 AMENDMENT

Another resolution presented by Dr. Chambers, amending Canon 10, Section 3, was revised by the committee on canons to read:

1. Amend Canon 10, Sec. 3, by deleting the period at the end of the second sentence of the first paragraph and adding the following:

"... together with a note not to exceed twenty-five words, setting forth the lay candidates' professional or business connections and any important activities or other qualifications."

2. Amend the second sentence of the second paragraph of Canon 10, Sec. 3, so that it shall read as follows: "(The Secretary shall include in the Calendar of Business a list of the persons nominated, their places of residence, parish or mission affiliations and in the case of the lay candidates, their professional and business connections and any important activities or other qualifications.)"

PRAYER BOOK CHANGES

A proposed alteration in the Prayer Book, namely the publication of a Book Of Propers For The Minor Holy Days, and several constitutional changes were referred from General Convention to our Diocesan Convention.

This would increase the observance of special days in the church calendar and pin-point certain articles and sections of the constitution.

This proposal was referred by General Convention and was published for information only. No action was required. Final action will be taken by the 1961 General Convention.

TO THE OWNER OF A LEAKING BUILDING "bids" mean little. Don't let anyone tell you that water infiltration in masonry can be cured with magical "coatings". That's the easy technique employed by itinerant "waterproofers" who attempt to lure you with low prices. The only way to stop leaks and seepage PERMANENTLY is to remove disintegrated mortar from all weak areas and repoint the joints with properly compounded mortar. Rockwell Newman brings to this problem over 38 years experience, plus the skills of highly trained men equipped with modern tools. Our clientele is comprised of people who seek, and are willing to pay fair prices for PERMANENT corrective workmanship. We can prove to you that our charges are ultimately one of the lowest.

NEW WING DEDICATED

Holy Trinity, East 88th Street, has just completed remodeling the interior of St. Christopher's House and adding a new section called the Bodman Wing. The new work was dedicated by Bishop Donegan on Sunday, May 17th.

The work on St. Christopher's House was dedicated to the memory of the first rector of the church, the Rev. James A. Paul. The new wing was dedicated to the memory of Louise Clarke Bodman. The additions make available extra facilities for office space, cafeteria, Christian Education, and recreation facilities.

ANNUAL CHOIR FESTIVAL

The choirs of sixteen parishes from various parts of the Diocese joined with the Cathedral Choir in the fourth annual Diocesan Choir Festival held in the Cathedral Church on Sunday, May 3. All Angels Church Manhattan, founded 100 years ago, went back through the years with its annual fair. The theme for the fair was: "To Broadway With Love — A Century of Memories."

Sales booths were named for such Broadway landmarks of 1859 as "Steward and Co.", "Genin's Bazaar", "Niblo's Garden", and the "Hippodrome." The Drama Guild presented a review, featuring popular songs of the past century.

SINCE THE GROUND BREAKING on April 5, construction of the new Church House for St. Paul's Church, Bronx, has progressed at a fast pace. As seen above window frames are being placed on one side of the first floor. Theodor Oxholm, diocesan treasurer, discusses the construction project with the job foreman.

DAFFODIL SPECTACULAR

Flowers are blooming all around the Diocese. Particularly noteworthy were the daffodils blooming beside the Church of the Incarnation in New York City. Some 700 bulbs were presented to the parish. The Rev. John A. Bell saw to their planting and took full credit for their growing. His pulpit admonition, "So as you pass enjoy them do, but please don't take them home with you."

ST. PHILIP'S PLANS FAIR

The 175th Anniversary Fund will be the chief beneficiary when the Clares and Friars, young adult group of the Church of the Resurrection, presents the Resurrection Choir in Gilbert and Sullivan's "Princess Ida" on the evenings of June 3, 4 and 5 in the parish hall.

The Resurrection Choir is highly skilled in the presentation of major musical works. Many of its members have performed other Gilbert and Sullivan operas in previous seasons under the direction of David Hewlett, organist and choirmaster.

The tenor lead will be sung by Richard Krause, former leading tenor of the American Savoyards for several seasons. He also toured with the NBC Opera Company. The Rev. John Talbot, curate, worked with the Savoyards in Maine last summer in several bass roles.

The general public, and members of congregations in Manhattan and nearby convocations, are urged to support this worthy cause and at the same time see a fine production, with an outstanding cast. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. The parish hall is at 115 East 74th Street, Manhattan. Donations are $2.50 each person.

GROUND BROKEN FOR CLASON POINT CHURCH

TWICE within the past two months ground has been broken for new projects under the 175th Anniversary program. Bishop Donegan broke ground on May 31st for the new Church of St. Andrew at Castle Hill and Lafayette Avenues, Bronx.

About 200 people attended the ceremony marking the beginning of the first new church building in the urban phase of the program.

The new church will be approximately 110 feet long by 50 feet wide, accommodating 210 on the main floor of the nave and 40 in the balcony. The design combines a highly functional arrangement with the traditional requirements for worship. Facing east, the wall design is such as to admit light through large windows which are not seen by the worshipper except when leaving the nave. The altar rail is curved in a large arc, as is the east, or front wall of the church.

Church School and parish hall facilities will be located in the undercroft. Again, the unusual wall design gives a sense of division and privacy which lends itself to separation of classes.

An apartment for the rector will be provided at the west end of the Church in what will be the nucleus of a future addition for the Church School.

ELEVATION SHOWING NEW ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH. The new 250 seat church will face east on Castle Hill Avenue, running west along Lafayette Avenue. The new church will be just a short distance from the 2,000 family Castle Hill housing project.

BULLETIN 'NEW DEAL' MEANS SATURATION COVERAGE

RESOLVED: that this Convention approves the recommendation of the Council of the Diocese with respect to its proposed plan for a wider distribution of the Bulletin; and be it further

RESOLVED: that the Convention requests the Committee on Diocesan Finances to add the sum of $14,800 to the Council budget for 1960 for this purpose and requests the Council in its final adjustment of the 1960 budget to give a high priority thereto; and be it further

RESOLVED: that the Convention urges every parish and mission to comply with the request of the Department of Promotion when it comes for a list of its contributing families, with the understanding that the list will be used solely for the purpose of distributing the Bulletin.

A FEASIBLE PLAN for sending the Bulletin into every home in the Diocese received the unanimous approval of Convention. The Rev. James W. Kennedy, chairman of the Department of Promotion, presented the recommendations to the Convention after having already received the approval of the Finance Committee and the Diocesan Council, opening the way for the Department of Promotion to move ahead and develop what the committee considers to be the "most effective and practical method of communicating with the bulk of Episcopal families in the diocese on a regular basis."

A special committee of the Department of Promotion made a long and careful study of the problem under the chairmanship of Mr. Joseph E. Boyle, assisted by the other members of the department. From a puny 7% distribution in the diocese the Bulletin as of the January issue will be at saturation coverage with 35,000 families receiving a copy each month thereafter. Since it is important that the Diocese in general know the details of this new deal a part of the approved Bulletin plan is included in this issue.

Dr. James W. Kennedy

We believe the Bulletin should have as its primary purpose the education of our Church people to the mission of the Churh in this Diocese.

Within the framework of this general purpose, we hope that each issue will carry a reasonable amount of material about the diocesan program, diocesan institutions, other diocesan activities.

We hope that the magazine will be well balanced between materials which could be classified as: educational, informational, and inspirational.

We think financial matters relating to the Diocese should be reported in the magazine but that direct appeals for funds should be minimized. We must look for financial results through parochial channels as a consequence of an informed and educated laity, not from direct contributions through the Bulletin.

We suggest a reasonable amount of material in each issue on outstanding developments in the life and work of our parishes and missions.

The ultimate objective of such an editorial policy would, we believe, be an informed and educated laity. If we can attain this long range objective to any reasonable degree, we feel sure that the support of the missionary program of the Diocese, and the work of our parishes and missions would be substantially increased.

We are well aware of the challenge which will be ours. But we believe a great Diocese like New York, the largest in the American Church in numerical strength and one to which the Church as a whole logically looks for leadership, cannot delay longer in undertaking this "Mission in Print" as a means of communicating with her Church people.

The benefits, as we envision them, from mailing the Bulletin to all 35,000 families in the Diocese:

Encourage a diocesan family spirit.

Spell out diocesan programs and thus achieve more cooperation.

Make possible nine calls a year on all contributing families.

Keep the diocese in touch with parish leaders.

Create understanding and activation of diocesan objectives.

Get news of important diocesan work to all members.

Permit play-back of parish results from the diocesan program.

Inspire follow-through on the part of other parishes.

Help eliminate criticism through complete information.

Develop a greater sense of stewardship on the part of our people.

Communicate the diocesan story continuously and inexpensively.

The Council has allocated to the Department of Promotion $20,453 in 1959 and $21,953 in 1960 specifically for the Bulletin.

Preliminary estimates from printers on the kind of publication we are thinking of, indicates that each issue would cost us, including printing and mailing, about $2,000 for 35,000 copies; in short, about $1 per family, per year.

The additional cost, including the salary of the Director of the Department and professional writing help, we estimate at $14,800 or a total estimated budget of $36,753 for the year 1960.

This represents an increase of $14,800 over the present budget, including the initial addressograph plates needed for mailing the Bulletin.

We believe you will agree with us that this additional sum is relatively small when it is considered that we would thereby be enabled to reach regularly virtually all Church families in the Diocese. The advantage thus gained far exceeds the present cost of the magazine and Department.

We would not, of course, decline to accept subscription payments but we do not believe it practical or possible to put the magazine distribution strictly on a paid subscription basis. The experience of other dioceses, and other Churches, bears this out.

Neither do we believe we should look to advertising as a source of revenue. In fact, we believe the advantages of having no advertising outweigh the relatively small amount that would accrue from advertising, especially when the cost of solicitation and handling the advertising are considered.

We plan to proceed with this plan, as outlined, and seek to put it into full force on January 1, 1960. We propose to seek at once for a professionally trained managing editor who would be on the staff as of September under the current budget.

The convention voted unanimously to approve the recommendations for a wider distribution of the Bulletin, added the sum of $14,800 to the 1960 budget for this purpose and requested the Council in its final adjustment of the budget to give a high priority to this project and urged every parish and mission in the diocese to comply with the request of the Department of Promotion when it comes for a list of its contributing families with the understanding that the list will be used solely for the purpose of distributing the Bulletin.

Dr. Kennedy in moving the resolutions pledged the full cooperation of the Department of Promotion of the Diocesan Council and its staff in carrying out this great step forward in the life of the diocese.

CHURCH ACTS TO BETTER URBAN HOUSING

THAT the city church must concern itself with the housing problems of its community was the consensus of four speakers at the "Conference on the Parish Church and Urban Housing" held at Cathedral House under the sponsorship of the Committee on Christian Stewardship of the Department of Christian Social Relations.

The conference, attended by over 50 members of the clergy and lay leaders in the Church, heard the Rev. James A. Gusweller, rector of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan, warn that unless the Church gives active support to solving the housing problems in its immediate area congregations will continue to dwindle.

With variations the same statement was offered by Mrs. Paul Flatow, member of the Urban Renewal Sub-Committee of the Morningside Citizen's Committee; Victor Remer, assistant executive director of Lenox Hill Neighborhood Association; and Jay V. Grimm, attorney; for the Housing Clinic of St. George's Church, Manhattan.

A decision was reached to urge the parish churches in the Diocese to co-ordinate their efforts with other responsible community and civic organizations to improve housing conditions. Agreement was voiced in support of a recommendation by Fr. Gusweller that the administrative code of the city of New York be amended to license the agent for the landlord of each apartment building in the city. Such licensing would provide a central index of all legally responsible persons connected with the ownership or management of each apartment building in the city. Under the provisions of the proposed amendment an operator, owner or agent would be required to carry a minimum of $5,000 in liability insurance and no license would be issued or renewed for an individual to manage an apartment building on which violations exist.

Parishes were urged to participate with civic and other groups for the provision of better housing through use of the "Limited Profit Housing Companies Law" for families with low incomes.

PUERTO RICAN PROBLEMS AIRED AT CONFERENCE

A conference on the problems of Puerto Ricans in the United States and on the opportunities challenging the Episcopal Church in its work among them was held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York City, April 14 and 15. The conference, sponsored by the Home Department's Division of Racial Minorities, and hosted by the Cathedral and the Christian Social Relations Department of the Diocese of New York, was attended by some 180 clergy and laymen from about a dozen States, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

The task before the Episcopal Church was discussed by a panel including the Rev. James A. Gusweller, rector of St. Matthew's and St. Timothy's Church, New York City, whose recent disclosures of housing graft brought national publicity and civic promises of investigation, and the Rev. William Wendt, vicar of St. Christopher's Chapel, one of Trinity Church's Lower East side missions.

Keynoting the Church's task was the Rev. Donald F. Gowe, who served for twenty years as a doctor in Puerto Rico and is now vicar of the Church of St. Edward the Martyr, in New York City's heavily Puerto Rican-populated East Harlem. Dr. Gowe termed as "fiction" the attitude that Puerto Ricans are and should be Roman Catholics and that their religious allegiance is therefore the problem of that Church alone.

The roundtables at the conference raised such questions as whether Puerto Rican work should be viewed as a separate entity or as part of the Church's total urban or rural mission, and the role of the national Church administration and that of the dioceses and the provinces in such work. No definite conclusions were reached, but it was recommended that further conferences of Episcopal clergy and laity be held by the dioceses.

FIRST FLOATER FOUND FINGERS MEMPHIS CLERIC

A message in a bottle found by a fisherman in the Azores will bring the Rev. Richard MacDonald of Memphis, Tennessee to New York to be the guest of the Seamen's Church Institute for a week.

Last fall at General Convention in Miami, some 415 visitors stopped at the booth of the Seamen's Church Institute and signed a bottle-message which read: "To the finder: this bottle was one of several hundred cast into mid-Atlantic in December, 1958. If this slip is the first returned to Seamen's Church Institute of New York, 25 South Street, New York 4, New York, the sender will have won a free trip to the Institute for the pastor of his or her church. The finder will receive an original seascape by marine artist Linwood Borum."

The messages were placed in bottles and dropped by the steamship Excambion in the Atlantic.

A fisherman, Tomas Pereira da Rosa, on the west coast of the island of Fayal in the Azores found the bottle containing the message of Mrs. Agnes F. White of Grace—St. Luke's Church, Memphis, Tennessee.

The message was forwarded to the Seamen's Church Institute and the invitation has gone to the Rev. Mr. MacDonald through his parishioner Mrs. White.

Since the finding of the first bottle, some twenty others have been found—mostly on the shores of various islands in the Azores. The bottles contained messages from several parts of the country including California, Puerto Rico, Mississippi, South Carolina and Florida.

DIOCESE IN THE NEWS

Canon Leaves on Leave

"Around the world in 500 days" might be the accurate description of the Canon Theologian's trip to every part of the Anglican Communion beginning this month. Under the sponsorship of the Presiding Bishop's Advisory Committee on Anglican Relations, Canon Johnson is going to write a definitive volume on the work of the Anglican Communion, which, as he says, will be an adventure story, "The Anglican Communion As I See It." The Bishop has granted Canon Johnson a two year leave of absence for this special project.

Two titles humorously suggested for the book, which will be published in time for the next Anglican Congress (scheduled for Toronto in 1963): "From See to Shining See" and "The World is my Ambulatory."

City Mission Society Gives Students On-Job Training

Coler Memorial Hospital and Home on Welfare Island.

Also they announce that 13 Episcopal seminary students have enrolled for Clinical Pastoral Training at Rikers Island Penitentiary and Bellevue Hospital for the months June through August.

SUMER IS ICUMEN IN

The old English poem "Sumer is Icumen In" is strange sounding to our ears, but the very quaintness of the words makes them easily remembered. Now the above cartoon certainly hints at one way to pass the summer. Churchmen can think of additional ways of keeping in touch while off on vacation for a week-end or a season. Of course we will worship wherever we are and do a bit of extra religious reading with perhaps the summer issue of "Forward Day by Day" as a handy guide for daily devotions.

The Christian's life is not seasonal although the seasons help to keep the basic doctrines in proper order and prospective. Church going, bible reading, praying, loving ones neighbor, seeking guidance for conduct, living by our Lord's precepts in the Sermon of the Mount, keeping relationships straight, all by God's help, must still go on, howbeit in a different setting.

It is harder to keep regular habits in the summer, when we live away from routine, even away from Church, and life is relaxed and body centered, but lets make a pact to keep in contact with your religion and your church even though "Sumer Is Icumen In" and return in the Fall refreshed and eager for another concentrated year of Christian worship and work together in your parish Church.

Stewardship -- More than Money

Ask the average churchman what the word "stewardship" means and he'll probably reply that it has to do with how much money you give to the church. And that is the truth — but only part of it. Real stewardship involves much more than our pocketbook.

Stewardship, in the sense that the Church uses it, is the concept that none of us really owns anything. We come into this world with nothing and we go out with nothing. While we are on this earth, God gives us material things, skills and talents, and well over half a century of time. The sum total of all that we have is what God has entrusted to us, what he has given us to administer, to be steward over. What we do with all these gifts determines our level of stewardship.

Governments, as well as individuals, have stewardship responsibilities. The United States had no concept of stewardship of its timber resources until it passed laws that stopped the slaughter of our forests. It had no concept of stewardship of its land resources until it took action to prevent soil erosion. Conservation of our natural resources is a direct and vital form of national stewardship.

There is not a person alive who does not have stewardship responsibilities, for every one of us has time, talents and material goods. Determining our own level of stewardship toward the Church takes only a few moments of self examination. How much of our time, talent and money do we give to the the Church? An hour each Sunday? That's less than 1% of our waking hours. Do we have talents or skills that we use in our business or our home that we deny to the Church? Do we give a fair share of our income to the Church? Do we give to salve our conscience or because we understand the concept of true stewardship?

In the coming weeks many of our churches will be holding their Every-Member Canvasses. When you fill in the amount on your pledge card, think about what God has given you. Then decide what you will give back to Him.

Mutual Carrying Council Programs

Two radio programs sponsored by the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church have been accepted by the Armed Forces Radio Network. They are "Viewpoint" and its summer replacement, "The Search."

Although both programs have been picked up by the Mutual Broadcasting System, a network orginating in New York, Manhattanities will not have an opportunity of listening to them over the local outlet. The explanation for this seeming discrimination is quite simple. According to the Division of Radio and Television at the National Council, the great numbers of Protestant churches with headquarters in the city forces radio stations to limit their selection of religious programs to three sources, the Roman Catholic Church, the Jewish Church and the National Council of Protestant Churches. Since the National Council embraces so many Protestant sects, a regular series is hard to place and still allow equal time to the rest of the churches.

However, the programs have been used on radio stations outside the city, where there are not so many different groups wanting air time. About 30 Mutual stations located in New Jersey, Long Island and upper New York state will be broadcasting the programs.

"Viewpoint," which returns to the air this month, is a 15-minute discussion program which will feature such personalities as Senator John F. Kennedy, (D., Mass.), Robert Moses, and Carlos Romulo, the ambassador from the Philippines. Moderating the program will be the Rev. Dana F. Kennedy, executive secretary of the Division of Radio and Television at the National Council.

"The Search," "Viewpoint's" summer replacement, is a 15-minute dramatic series, hosted by Robert Young and starring Joseph Cotton, Herbert Marshall, Robert Ryan and Boris Karloff.

The Every-Member Canvasser — How to Greet and Treat Him

Much has been written on how to make an Every-Member Canvass call, but little on how to be called upon. So let's look at the Every-Member Canvass from inside the front door, rather than from outside it.

The first thing we can examine is our attitude toward the canvasser. Do we think of him as "somebody coming around asking for money," or do we have the correct view—that he is someone who is voluntarily giving up part of his free time to help his, and our, church. Remember, too, that the canvasser not only gives his time to the church canvass but his pledge as well.

It isn't easy being a canvasser, but you can make his task more pleasant if you extend him a friendly welcome when he calls. Just a simple greeting like, "Come in, I've been expecting someone from the church to call," will do much to introduce a congenial atmosphere.

If your canvasser phones for an appointment, try to set a time at which both you and your wife or husband will be home. A canvasser is often asked to come back because the person being called on wants to "talk it over" with other members of the family.

Really listen to what the canvasser has to say. It's all too easy to just pledge the same amount as last year without trying to understand the real meaning of stewardship or the plans of your church.

Show the canvasser that you appreciate what he is doing by giving him a word of encouragement as he leaves. Make him glad that he called on you. After all, you may be calling on him next year.

There's two ways you can examine your stewardship. You can ask yourself how much you should give to the church—or how much you should keep for yourself. The latter question really gets to the heart of the matter.

One of the discussion groups, led by Canon J. Stuart Wetmore, gathers on the grounds of St. John's-in-the-Wilderness Church. Purpose of these discussions is to allow the campers to ask questions, air their views on the day's topic. Each discussion group is led by an adult staff member.

Wilderness Conference-Work and Worship

A group of teen-age boys and girls dressed in work clothes was digging a ditch. A rather well groomed blonde girl sauntered up to the group and watched them disdainfully.

"Come on, give a hand," one of the boys called to her.

"I don't work with my hands," the blonde replied, "I have a maid at home."

One of the girls, dressed in tattered blue jeans, stuck her shovel in the dirt and said philosophically, "My mother has a maid too." She paused and then added, "Me."

This happened during one of the Wilderness Conferences for teen-agers at the work camp at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness, Bear Mountain, N. Y. By the end of the week's conference the haughty young lady was enthusiastically boasting about the blisters she got from helping to dig the ditch.

These conferences differ from the usual Bible study and panel discussion groups one thinks of when the phrase "religious conference" is mentioned. At St. John's-in-the-Wilderness, young people, 13 years and older, are taught to see the relationship between Christian worship and their daily lives. The work they do at the camp is the vehicle used to demonstrate that relationship. Throughout the conferences, they learn that religion is not restricted to Sunday and dress-up clothes. They learn that work, when approached in a Christian manner, is one of the most devout and active forms of worship.

In order to have as many as possible attend the camp, the Diocese sponsored five conferences of one and two week's duration during the past summer. Approximately 24 campers attended each conference. The camp is under the direction of the Department of Christian Education and was open to teen-agers from all parishes at a cost of $15.00 per week.

The fact that this camp differs from other work camps is demonstrated by the unusual dedication ceremony which marks the opening of each conference. On the first morning of the conference the tools which the campers will be using throughout the week are brought into the church and laid on the altar to be blessed. Among the tools are shovels, picks, brooms, a frying pan and some pots. The very act of blessing these tools, some of which represent the most menial of tasks, has an impact on the minds of the young people which cannot be produced through the written word or through high flown theological discussions.

The campsite, which is located across the road from St. John's-in-the-Wilderness Church, has only two permanent buildings, the Barn (a converted farm building) and a wash house. Inside the Barn is the kitchen and a large common room with a fireplace at one end. Here the campers eat and hold their evening discussions.

A path leading from the Barn branches off in two directions. Each branch leads to a tent area, one for girls and one for boys. There are four tents in each area —three for campers and one for their two counselors.

The camp day begins at 6:45 a.m. After Holy Communion, the kitchen squad hustles up breakfast. Eight boys and girls under the supervision of Thelma (Miss Tillie) Caruso lay the table, pour the juice, bring out the cereal and milk and usually one child is asked to volunteer to bake the coffee cake.

After breakfast the young people are called back to the church for meditation. One of the campers reads a Bible lesson which is related to the subject of the day's thought.

After prayers, the Rev. Donald S. Cheetham, the camp's director, or one of the staff members, conducts the meditation, relating it to the teachings of the Church. The children leave the church with the day's theme firmly in their minds. They are asked to think about it during their working periods and to be ready to discuss it later in the day.

WORK AND MEDITATE

After meditation the work begins. The campers are split into groups. The kitchen squad goes back to the stove and dish pans, while other groups paint or work in the tent areas clearing out rocks and bushes. Everyone works, from the camp director down to the youngest camper. The work periods total about three hours a day.

Recently one of the crews constructed a flight of steps up to the girls' tent area. The job was completed mainly through the efforts of one boy, who appeared to be uncommunicative and sullen when he first arrived at the camp. He stayed at the camp for three conferences and by the third week was promoted to junior camp counselor.

At noon the church bell rings. Everyone, no matter where he is, stops work, pulls out a prayer card and meditates. A few moments of silence descend on the camp.

One day the Good Humor man happened to be in the kitchen

The Barn, a converted farm building used as a dining room and gathering place for the campers. It also serves as a parish house of St. John's-in-the-Wilderness Church, just across the street.

making his delivery when the noon prayer bell rang. In the general rush for cards, which somehow managed not to be in everyones' pocket, someone shoved a card into his hand. After the moment of silence was over and the man had recovered from his surprise he said quietly, "That's a nice idea."

MISCONCEPTIONS IRONED OUT

Lunch is served around 12:30, and the camp sinks into a lull while everyone rests from his labors.

Next comes the discussion period. Led by members of the staff, including the counselors, the campers talk about the day's theme which they were given during the morning's meditation. These discussions help to clarify any misconceptions the children may have. They are asked to give their own interpretations, which are then hashed out and sometimes even argued over. At one session a war between the sexes nearly developed when the boys put all the blame on Eve for Man's original sin. The girls felt that Adam should shoulder some of the guilt. The group discussion leader deftly changed the subject.

Following the discussion period the kitchen crew goes to nearby Sebago Beach for a swim and the rest of the campers return to the tasks they were working on earlier. When the kitchen crew returns the others are taken to the beach.

After dinner is served and the dishes washed, the entire group gathers in front of the fireplace for a final discussion of the day's theme. At this point the young people sum up what they have learned from thinking about the day's theme. Father Cheetham patiently answers questions and guides the discussion.

After the discussion is finished the children cross the road to the church for evening prayers. This service is led by one of the counselors with the help of one of the campers.

By 10:30 p.m. the campers are in their tents, too tired to do anything but drop off to sleep.

At this point a word should be said about the staff. Canon J. Stuart Wetmore, director of the Department of Christian Education, spends a good bit of his summers at the camp working with the regular staff and the campers. The Wilderness Conferences are pretty much Canon Wetmore's brainchild, and he looks forward to a long life for them. Last summer, the first year of regular, organized conferences, he was not so sure about the future. On the first day of the first conference, there were four staff members and three campers. This summer, though, there's been nearly a full house at every conference.

Father Cheetham is greatly responsible for making the work camp the only one of its kind. After attending a work camp leaders' training course in Indiana, he added some of his own ideas to the things he learned there. Probably no other work camp puts so much responsibility for day-to-day existence into the hands of children.

Miss Caruso's responsibilities are hard to define. She obviously must see to it everyone is fed and properly sheltered. Yet she does more and is all things to all people. She also takes her turn leading meditation and discussion periods.

This summer two seminarians, Richard Rogers from General Theological Seminary and Robert Willing from Nashotah House, worked as counselors. Also working as counselors were Miss Jane Mead from Hunter College and Miss Joan Baxter from Colby College. Not only did the counselors supervise the children, but they pitched in and worked right along with them. They also joined the other staff members in leading discussion sessions and meditations.

The conferences have attracted volunteer help from lay people. Miss Eleanor Dickie from St. Bartholomew's parish, Manhattan, heard about the conferences and volunteered half of her vacation time to help out. She in turn told a friend of hers in the same parish about her experience and Miss Eleanor McKay turned up to help out. Mrs. Ruth Gomez from St. Luke's, Bronx, also helped.

ROUGH, RUGGED AND ROCKY

The Wilderness Conference camp site is certainly no paradise. Matter of fact, it's rough, rugged and rocky—no place for a child who just wants to take it easy. Literature on the conferences call them "pioneer work camps for rugged young people."

Why do boys and girls who normally lift nothing heavier than pencils and books gladly shoulder picks and shovels? The basic reason is that they are taught the meaning of work, the relationship of work and worship.

Also, the young people are given an opportunity to show what they can do on their own. They are allowed to work not for an adult but with one.

The most heartening thing about the Wilderness Conferences to the staff is the pride that the campers take in the place. It is their camp, and they are determined to make it the best camp possible.

An example of this interest happened this summer when two boys who had been at a conference a few weeks before came back for a visit. Anxiously they asked: "The grass that we sowed—did it grow?"

The unusual experience that a youngster undergoes at a Wilderness Conference often has a permanent effect on his outlook. Many campers now say the noon prayer regularly; many write back that their whole attitude toward work and worship have changed. One boy who had never worked in his parish called on his priest as soon as he returned from a conference. "Maybe I can't do much," he said, "but I want to do two hours of work every week on the church grounds." The priest took him up on his offer, and in that parish there's a neatly trimmed lawn—a lawn that represents the worship of one small boy.

A lively water fight at Sebago Beach, about two miles from St. John's-in-the-Wilderness. The campers go to the beach every afternoon.

Eugene Stetson Dies

Eugene Stetson, who was awarded the Bishop's Cross at the May, 1959, Diocesan Convention, died of a cerebral hemorrhage this past summer. Mr. Stetson, ex-chairman of Guaranty Trust, had a life-long interest in Episcopal missions and through his leadership did much to stimulate parish work in missions.

Bible School Attracts Children of All Faiths

A two-week Daily Vacation Bible School, sponsored by the Church of St. James the Less, in Scarsdale, attracted children from several religious denominations. Of the 61 boys and girls attending, 36 were Episcopalian, 17 Baptist, four Methodist, two Lutheran, one a Presbyterian and one from the Dutch Reformed Church.

Under the direction of Brother Charles from the Order of the Holy Cross, Rev. George F. Kempsell, vicar of the church, and his assistant, the Rev. Robert O. Weeks, the children were given instruction in the Bible and the Creed. They also were taught various arts and crafts. Hymn singing was taught by the choirmaster and organist, Robert N. Roth.

Emery New Assistant To Diocesan Treasurer

Frederick I. Emery, Jr., has been appointed to the newly-created position of Assistant to the Treasurer of the Diocese. His new duties, which he assumed June 1, are concerned mainly with building construction and maintenance.

Acting as "owner's agent," he secures bids and checks performance for all major repairs and improvements to Diocesan property. He also is the Diocesan contact with architects and builders on all new construction sponsored by the Department of Missions.

Mr. Emery's duties take him all over the Diocese and involve everything from checking the progress of a new building to the vexing problem of prying a shoe out of a rainspout. In addition, he is responsible for keeping a continuous check on all insurance matters pertaining to Diocesan property and Workmen's Compensation.

Mr. Emery brings to his new job a background of diversified experience. He has been chief of the maintenance department of the S.S. Pierce Co., Boston; in charge of purchasing hard-to-find items at the Radiation Laboratory of M.I.T.; in the lumber business; and he has built three houses himself. Immediately before coming with the Diocese he was with the Diebold Co., where he worked on the building alteration aspects of installing vaults.

A resident of Tuxedo Park, Mr. Emery is a vestryman of St. Mary's-in-Tuxedo, fire commissioner, a member of the Board of Education, and a member of the Tuxedo Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery have two children, a boy, seven, and a girl, five.

House of Bishops Meets This Month

The Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan and the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton will attend the House of Bishops meeting in Cooperstown, N. Y., October 17.

The House of Bishops, which is comparable to the U. S. Senate in the structure of the Church's government, cannot pass any legislation during the meeting. Legislation is acted upon in conjunction with the House of Deputies at the General Convention, which meets every three years.

During the October meeting, bishops from all over the United States will sit down together and discuss mutual problems of policy and administration.

On this year's agenda is a proposal to elect a missionary bishop to the Dominican Republic. At present The Rt. Rev. C. Alfred Voegeli, the Missionary Bishop of Haiti, is in charge of the Church in the Dominican Republic.

The House of Bishops is permitted by canon to elect or transfer missionary bishops. It can also reorganize and create new missionary districts.

At the end of the meeting a Pastoral Letter is usually drawn up to be read in all the congregations of the Episcopal Church. The letter is a joint commentary by the bishops on the state of the Church and Christianity.

School of Worship

"Living Thankfully" will be this year's theme of the eighth annual School of Worship which opens in November. Sponsored by the Episcopal Churchwomen in cooperation with the Bishop and the Chapter of the Cathedral, the school will endeavor to increase understanding of Baptism, Confirmation and Holy Communion. The sessions are open to everyone in the Diocese.

There will be duplicate morning and evening lectures. Morning sessions will all take place at the Cathedral, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., at 10:30 a.m. on the same dates as listed for the evening sessions.

Evening sessions will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the following churches in Manhattan:

Nov. 3—Church of the Incarnation, Madison Ave. and 35th St. Nov. 9—St. Thomas' Church, 5th Ave. and 53rd St. Nov. 16—St. James' Church, Madison Ave. and 71st St. Nov. 23—St. Bartholomew's Church, Park Ave. and 51st St.

The Rev. Samuel J. Wylie, associate director of the Division of College Work of the National Council, will deliver the first lecture on "Baptism."

The second lecture, "Preparing for the Sacremental Life," will be given by Dr. Dora P. Chaplin, assistant professor of Pastoral Theology at General Theological Seminary.

The Rev. Edward N. West, canon sacrist of the Cathedral, will address the third session on "Confirmation," and the fourth lecture, "Living Eucharistically," will be presented by the Very Rev. John B. Coburn, dean of the Episcopal Theological Seminary.

Speakers will be available to individual parishes to talk about the School of Worship during this month.

Arrangements for evening speakers may be made by calling the chairman of the evening sessions, Mrs. Landes Lewitin, at REgent 4-1501. For speakers at other times, call Mrs. William N. McDonald, chairman of day sessions, at PElham 8-3973, or Mrs. Henri Barjou, registrar, at CIrcle 5-1800.

All Convocations to Meet Oct. 25

Episcopalians from all over the Diocese of New York will gather at 4:00 p.m. on Sunday, October 25, for fall Convocation meetings unlike any that have been held before in the Diocese.

Each of the seven Convocations will meet on the same day and at the same hour, and will conduct the same service — a special service set forth by the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York.

UNITY AND FELLOWSHIP

This will be the first time that all Convocations will meet on the same day. The simultaneous meetings, designed to demonstrate the unity and fellowship of all Episcopalians in the Diocese, will be addressed by bishops from several parts of the world — demonstrating the world-wide scope of the Church.

Every Episcopalian is invited to the meeting of his Convocation. A Convocation is a geographical sub-division of the Diocese.

Here are the locations of the Convocation meetings and the bishops who will address them:

HUDSON—St. George's, Newburgh; The Rt. Rev. Reginald H. Gooden, Missionary Bishop of the Canal Zone.

WESTCHESTER—St. James the Less, Scarsdale; The Rt. Rev. David E. Richards, Missionary Bishop of Central America.

MANHATTAN — St. Thomas, Manhattan; The Rt. Rev. Harry S. Kennedy, Missionary Bishop of Honolulu.

DUTCHESS—Christ Church, Poughkeepsie; The Rt. Rev. George H. Quarterman, Bishop of Northwest Texas.

BRONX — St. Peter's, Westchester Square; The Rt. Rev. Joseph S. Minnis, Bishop of Colorado.

RICHMOND—Christ Church, Staten Island; The Rt. Rev. Arnold M. Lewis, Missionary Bishop of Salina (Kansas).

RAMAPO — Christ Church, Suffern; The Rt. Rev. Richard S. Watson, Missionary Bishop of Utah.

The Diocese's Convocations meet twice a year — in the spring and fall. Canon 19 of the Diocese specifies that the spring meeting of the Convocation "shall be its Annual Meeting at which shall be conducted the election of its officers." The fall meeting "shall be especially planned to aid in the presentation of the Program of the Church for the following year."

New Cope Has Unusual History

The last of many gifts presented to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine by the late Rev. Dr. Walter Lowrie was several yards of silk brocade which was fashioned into a cope this past spring. The history behind the brocade is almost as fascinating as the history of Dr. Lowrie himself.

KIERKEGAARD INTEREST

It began with Dr. Lowrie's keen interest in Soren Kierkegaard, a 19th century Danish philosopher and theologian. His interest led him to master the Danish language and become the principle translator of Kierkegaard's works. Over the years, Dr. Lowrie gave financial aid to other scholars of Kierkegaard, enabling them to study in Denmark and to purchase books. One of the scholars aided by Dr. Lowrie was a Japanese Buddhist, who expressed his gratitude by giving him the silk brocade. Dr. Lowrie in turn gave it to the Cathedral for a frontal.

When it was discovered that there was not quite enough yardage for a frontal the material was used for a cope. The Rev. Edward N. West, canon sacrist of the Cathedral, created the design.

Dr. Lowrie, who died last August, served 23 years as rector of St. Paul's-Within-the-Walls in Rome. In 1915 he was awarded the Gold Medal of Valor of Italy for his part in the reconstruction of two villages which had been destroyed in an earthquake.

He retired in 1930 and settled in Princeton, N. J. During 27 years of his retirement, he produced 27 books—hardly an inactive retirement. In all, Dr. Lowrie wrote 38 books and 59 major articles. He also helped in translating some of Dr. Albert Schweitzer's works into English. He was 91 when he died.

Spanish Classes Begin This Month

A series of Spanish classes open to all priests in the Diocese will begin on Monday, October 5.

Classes will be held every Monday from noon to 2:30 at St. Edward the Martyr, 12 E. 109th Street, Manhattan. The course will run until next June, though classes will be suspended during the Christmas and Easter seasons and other busy church periods.

Because the classes will be of the participation and discussion type, rather than lecture, enrollment must be limited to 14. There is no fee, though participants are asked to bring their lunch, with coffee being supplied.

Leader of the course will be the Rev. D. F. Gowe, who was a parish priest and physician in Puerto Rico for 16 years. He is now vicar of St. Edward the Martyr.

This will be the second Spanish course that Fr. Gowe has conducted for priests of the Diocese, the first being last year. Emphasis in the course will be on conversational Spanish, especially the language that a priest would be likely to use in discussing religious subjects and in counseling.

Though the course is open to all priests in the Diocese, it is intended primarily for priests who are working or plan to work in Spanish speaking communities.

Just off the plane from Bombay, Miss Sarla Shah arrives at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cotton in Rye. Waiting expectantly are the two Cotton boys, Lee and Tom, who stayed at home while Mr. and Mrs. Cotton went to Idlewild to meet their Indian house guest.

'Getting to Know You' Motto Of Foreign Student Committee

When Sarla Shah stepped off the airliner at Idlewild International Airport last month she got her first glimpse of the United States. She was half a world from home and alone. Before bewilderment and confusion had a chance to take hold of her emotions, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cotton of Rye, N. Y., rushed up to the passenger gate to greet her. Although they had never met her before they helped her through customs and then took the young student from India home with them. This is part of the program of the Episcopal Committee for Foreign Students.

LASTING RELATIONSHIPS

Sarla is now enrolled at New York University, studying for her master's degree in social science. The Cotton's helped her find living quarters and get settled before school started. Until this was accomplished she stayed at their Rye home.

Sponsored by the National Council, the Church Society for College Work, the Episcopal Churchwomen, as well as Province I, II, and III, the committee is dedicated to establishing lasting relationships between people of other countries and cultures, and the clergy and lay people of the Church.

REAL HOSPITALITY

According to the executive secretary for the East Coast committee, William H. Kennedy, these lasting relationships can be established by offering hospitality to newcomers to the U. S. "By hospitality, I don't mean one Sunday dinner or an evening at the movies," Mr. Kennedy said, "I mean including foreign students in daily activities such as shopping at Macy's or going to the supermarket."

The reason committees have been set up to handle the job in large metropolitan areas is that there are just too many foreign students and too many educational institutions to have a smoothly operating program if each parish worked individually. The Committee for Foreign Students in the New York area acts as a central clearing house and works with the foreign student committees in individual parishes. In New York alone there are over 6,000 foreign students attending the various colleges and universities located here. That's a lot of people and a lot of places. The same is true of Boston and Washington, D. C.

HOW THEY FUNCTON

The committees in these areas are made up of two to four Episcopal chaplains from different educational institutions, any number of volunteers—who are responsible for contacting parishes—and three consultants, who are well versed in the academic needs of the students.

When the names and addresses of incoming foreign students are obtained, they are given to families who have volunteered to take in a student. The families then write the students inviting them to their homes and offering to help them get settled into their academic life in America.

This sometimes leads to a baffling situation. Since a majority of the foreign students come from the Far and Near East, letters inviting them into American homes sometimes go unanswered. The whole concept of R.S.V.P., which is a Western concept, is lost on the average person from those areas. Not a few noses have been put out of joint because some unsuspecting student in India or Japan failed to acknowledge an invitation. In those countries homemakers are accustomed to entertaining at all times—particularly since they usually have several generations of their families living with them. The business of having to buy an extra steak and clear the engagement calendar is quite foreign to them.

One of the functions of the committees is to hold Welcome Parties for the foreign students to introduce them to the different parishes. The committee here in New York will be holding a welcome party for 100 foreign students at the Institute of International Education this month.

One of the biggest headaches for those involved helping students get settled is the problem of finding housing. Rents are high in all metropolitan areas, and the operating funds of most of the students is low. Then too, there is the knotty problem of racial discrimination. The solving of these problems takes time and patience, but if the student can get settled with a minimum of embarrassment, then something has been achieved in international relations.

The program of hospitality works two ways. It gives Episcopalians an opportunity to really know something of a foreign culture, and it also gives the foreign student a chance to know Americans as they really are. For instance, to go back to the Cottons and Sarla, during Sarla's first meal in the Cotton household, Mrs. Cotton noticed she wasn't eating her vegetables. She asked the girl to be frank and tell her why. It turned out that Sarla was unaccustomed to American seasoning. So she was invited to prepare the vegetables for the next meal. This little incident probably demonstrated to Sarla the basic friendliness of Americans. It also gave the Cottons a chance to taste vegetables Indian style, as well as an opportunity to find out that Sarla was willing to participate in their family life.

For further information about the program contact Mr. William H. Kennedy, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., New York 25, N. Y. or call UNiversity 6-1430.

Identification Cards Greeted Favorably

Identification cards for the entire clergy serving in the Diocese of New York were sent out from the Department of Promotion last month. Already responses have come back commenting favorably on the cards.

The idea for a card came from the Rev. C. Schaller, Jr., from St. George's, Manhattan. When the Bishop heard about it he enthusiastically endorsed the proposal and asked the Department of Promotion to make them up. Eric Ley, director of the 175th Anniversary Fund, is responsible for the design.

Some of the comments about the cards are as follows: "A clerical collar is no longer adequate indentification in many areas of the city . . . ." "I have felt the need for such (indentification card) already and am pleased to have it." "It is thoughtful, useful, and I imagine, will save some time and embarrassment, particularly on occasions when one has neither the mood nor time to be delayed."

Seaman's Institute to Have Open House

The annual open house of the Seamen's Church Institute of New York will be held on Sunday, October 18.

Visitors will see the expanded International Seamen's Club at the Institute, 25 South Street, and the shore center's modernized lobby, the "Times Square of seafaring."

Program features will include guided tours of the 13-story building (starting at 1:30 p.m.) an auditorium program, a display of 300 ship models, chapel services and refreshments.

Guests wishing to have Sunday dinner or supper at the Institute should call BO 9-2710 for reservations.

Episcopal Churchwomen . . . .

Provincial Meeting Syracuse Oct. 13-14

The annual Provincial Meeting of women from each of the eight dioceses in Province II will be held in Syracuse, October 13 and 14. Representing the Diocese of New York will be: Mrs. Gurney Williams, Westchester; Mrs. Donald K. Stevenson, Manhattan; Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherford, Dutchess; Mrs. John F. Whylie, Bronx; Mrs. Ralph F. Stott, Dutchess.

The program will dovetail with that of the clergy and laymen's Provincial Meeting which will be in session at the same time.

PROVINCIAL PROJECTS

Each year the Episcopal Churchwomen in the eight dioceses which help to make up Province II cooperate in giving aid where it is most needed in the province through a fund known as Provincial Projects. Items in this budget change from year to year, but usually the most substantial amounts go to special work in one of the six Caribbean missionary districts which are also a part of Province II.

Last year the fund provided a theological scholarship of $1,000 toward the education of a native priest in the Dominican Republic, $300 to St. Michael's Center in Ponce, P.R., $200 to the financing of a delegate's trip to the National Canterbury Club Conference, and $100 to the Seabury House Guild.

WHAT'S A PROVINCE?

There are eight provinces in the Protestant Episcopal Church of America. They were set up by the General Convention which met in 1913 in the Synod House of the Diocese of New York—the last general convention to be held there. The object of creating provinces is to pool ideas, provide educational facilities to diocesan officers, and accomplish work which one diocese could not do alone.

New Handbook Out

The 1959-1960 "Handbook for Episcopal Churchwomen" in the Diocese of New York is now available. This 83rd edition of the yearbook has undergone a change in content from former editions.

During a meeting at the Bishop Donegan Conference Center, Tuxedo Park, last winter, the board members pooled their ideas to revitalize the yearbook. This year's book seeks to inform women in the Diocese how their association is participating in the whole life of the Church, through prayer, worship, study and action.

Each chairman has defined the objectives of her department, reviewed its resources and made suggestions for parish officers.

This year the handbook is prefaced by a message from the Bishop commending the Episcopal Churchwomen for their continuing contribution to the Church and its work.

The handbooks are available at Diocesan meetings and from Convocation chairmen for 25 cents.

Miss Frances M. Young of Baltimore, Md., has been named to succeed Mrs. Arthur M. Sherman as executive director of women's work throughout the Episcopal Church.

The announcement of Miss Young's appointment was made today by the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop.

Miss Young has been director of Christian Education at the Church of the Redeemer, Baltimore, since 1947. # Bulletin Gets New Managing Editor

Miss Virginia S. Briggs has joined the staff of the Department of Promotion as managing editor of The Bulletin.

The new editor comes to the Diocese from Boston University, where she received a B.S. degree in journalism last June. While in Boston, she attended the Church of the Advent.

Before college she spent six years in the WAVES as a journalist. Her duties included the editing of two Navy newspapers, plus extensive writing and public relations work.

Miss Briggs was born in New Rochelle and grew up in Connecticut. Her grandfather, the late Clare Briggs, was the creator of the "Mr. and Mrs." comic strip, which is still a regular feature of the New York Herald Tribune.

Starting with the January, 1960 issue, The Bulletin will be mailed free to all contributing families enrolled in parishes and missions of the Diocese. All churches have been asked to supply The Bulletin with the names and addresses of their contributing members, in order that mailing lists may be compiled. These lists will be used solely for mailing of The Bulletin.

Present subscribers will be carried through the December issue, even though their subscriptions may expire prior to that time.

Recent Juvenile Violence Shocks New Yorkers - - Even the Gangs

The heat is off. The temperature has dropped and and the children are back in school. But in this year of 1959 it will be a long time before New Yorkers forget the summer's seige of juvenile violence. People are still asking why it happened and there are all kinds of answers to that question.

The Rev. W. A. Wendt, priest in charge of St. Christopher's Chapel on Henry St. in Manhattan, has some opinions of his own. His opinions are based on eight years of work in the Lower East Side.

WHY?

"On the surface a 'rumble' may start over a girl or an imagined insult," he said, "but that isn't the real reason." Father Wendt then described the tensions which have arisen because of the changing population. There are racial tensions as well as tensions created by over-crowding and poor housing. Combine these tensions with the lack of parental supervision and summertime idleness, and the reason why starts to make sense

CODDLING?

The Youth Board and missions which have been working with the gangs have been accused of coddling the boys by various civic and religious groups. Father Wendt vigorously denies the charge. "When we get in with a gang, the boys know we'll go to the police if we find evidence of guns or any other weapons," he said. When a real "bad apple" turns up for prosecution, Father Wendt has often gone to the judge to plead for a stiffer sentence in order to get the boy out of the neighborhood. "Even the boys themselves don't want a psychopath in their gang," he added.

ACTION—REACTION

How did the gangs react to the killing of Theresa Gee? According to Father Wendt, they were shocked. The particular gang he is working with won't even talk about the incident. "They had a close call," Father Wendt said, "and they know it." The "close call" he is referring to is the fact that his gang had negotiated to buy the gun which killed the young negro girl a week before the killing, but the boys couldn't raise the necessary $20.00.

"The boys are shocked and I think at the point where they themselves are looking for help," Father Wendt said. He feels that the confusion and bewilderment of the boys will propel them towards the agencies which have been trying to help them in the past few years. Meanwhile, his youth program, which is already accelerated, will work even more vigorously to bring in the boys.

ADULTS

Cooperation from adults in Father Wendt's youth program is slow in coming. The Puerto Ricans are still preoccupied with the upheaval in their personal lives. That is, they are still in the process of learning a new language, learning new ways of living, and striving for economic betterment. This leaves little time or interest for youth work. The dwindling Italian and Jewish population in the neighborhood tends to resent the intrusion of the Negroes and Spanish into what was once their exclusive territory and they are not too cooperative in aiding the young people. Negro parents, however, have started coming to the mission and offering to do volunteer work among the boys.

THE FUTURE?

"The future is uncertain," says Father Wendt, "it'll be a long time before people forget what's happened. But I consider it hopeful." Meanwhile Father Wendt, Father C. Kilmer Myers from St. Augustine's Chapel, and the Youth Board will continue to go out into the streets and attempt to interest the boys in other things besides gang warfare. Long range plans call for breaking up the gangs and organizing the boys into groups. The word "gang" implies something anti-social, according to Father Wendt. "We want to get the boys into groups where their activities can be channeled into more socially acceptable behavior."

Canon H. A. Johnson's World Tour Postponed

The Rev. Howard A. Johnson, canon theologian, who was scheduled to leave on a two-year world tour, was forced to postpone his trip because of the death of Dr. Walter Lowrie, see page 9.

Canon Johnson was appointed literary executor of Dr. Lowrie's works. This is no mean task, since Dr. Lowrie's writings have been translated into several languages. Canon Johnson is now in the process of checking copyrights in each country where Dr. Lowrie's works were published to see that they are renewed and don't expire during his, Canon Johnson's, absence. Dr. Lowrie published 38 books and 59 important articles.

If you haven't calculated what percentage of your income you're giving to the church, you may find that it's as little as one percent. You're giving one percent, almost exactly, if you make $5,000 a year and contribute a dollar a week to the Church. Of course, you're also giving one percent if you make $10,000 and contribute two dollars a week, $15,000 and three dollars a week, or $20,000 and four dollars a week.

St. Mary's Hopes To Complete Unit Started in 1929

It seems incredible in these prosperous times that a building which was started 30 years ago has not yet been completed. But when one sees the progress in other areas that St. Mary's School for Girls in Peekskill, N. Y., has made since its founding in 1868, it can be understood why funds for day-to-day maintenance could not be diverted to construction.

What happened to the original funds? The same thing that happened to so many peoples' pocketbooks when the Depression hit the nation in 1929. The money simply wasn't there.

EMPTY SHELL

This year the school is determined to do something about finishing the building. As it stands today, the unit which needs to be completed is a shell sandwiched between two older buildings. But when it is finished it will contain an informal lounge large enough for the entire student body, a reading room, and another classroom. Two floors in the same unit will provide urgently needed space for dormitory facilities.

2,000 GRADUATES

Everyone, from Sister Superior Mary Regina down to the youngest student, is interested in seeing the unit finished. St Mary's can't compete with other educational institutions which boast a large alumni with an equally large endowment. In all, there are 2,000 graduates from the school scattered throughout 38 states and in foreign countries.

Three years after the Sisterhood of Saint Mary's formed, it opened the first St. Mary's School in a rented building on West 45th Street in Manhattan. Later it was moved to a larger building on East 46th Street. Because of the school's centrality, lectures were frequently given by prominent priests from England as well as the United States.

In 1909 St. Mary's merged with St. Gabriel's School in Peekskill. A new building was erected to house the school. This building, incidently, is, in a way, related to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The man who drew up the Cathedral's present French Gothic plan also designed St. Mary's School.

St. Mary's School for Girls in Peekskill, N. Y. School buildings were designed by Ralph Adams Cram, who is responsible for the present French Gothic design of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

In the years which followed the move, St. Mary's has become a fully accredited school. The curriculum is being expanded, particularly in the field of science. Enrollment has risen from less than 50 to well over 100 students.

Growth and change have become an integral part of St. Mary's tradition. And by means of this year's Development Program, which will cost $280,000, the school will continue to uphold its tradition.

PASSING BY ON THE OTHER SIDE

ART LINKLETTER is right. People are funny. But too often they are "funny" in the sense of being strange and hard to understand, rather than in the sense of being humorous.

For instance, how can you explain the fact that thousands of people will make contributions to such far away causes as aid to flood victims in Greece, but will pass right by someone on the street who has been injured or taken ill. This happens all the time, this "passing by on the other side."

In talking with people about this subject, we found several examples of flagrant disregard for the plight of others. One man told us of discovering a hit-and-run victim lying in a Manhattan street on a bitter cold night. The only notice being taken of the man was the fact that all the motorists carefully drove around him, literally passing by on the other side. Fortunately, our friend is a practicing Christian and called an ambulance and comforted the seriously injured victim until it arrived.

Another instance. Three cars were in a collision on a New Jersey highway during the morning rush hour. The accident blocked one lane, piling up traffic for four miles. But there was still one lane open, so car after car passed by on the other side. When at last someone stopped, he found one driver in shock with an ugly gash in his forehead, and the other two so stunned as to be almost helpless. A call to the police brought aid to the scene in three minutes. And, incidently, resulted in the cars being moved off the highway and relieving the traffic jam.

Still another example. An elderly man got off a Trailways bus at a large terminal and immediately collapsed. Scores of people stared; only one thought to call an ambulance.

But not only injured or sick people need the help of a Good Samaritan. A woman whose car broke down at a busy intersection was helped, not by all the impatient motorists honking their horns, but by someone who pushed her off the street and phoned the AAA. A family going on a vacation had a breakdown on a desolate road. A passing motorist took the father to a garage.

We suppose many people don't help strangers because they "don't want to get involved." Yet the whole basis of Christian living is a matter of involvement with our fellow man. Christ continually became involved in other people's troubles.

Today, tomorrow, you may be faced with a decision. "Shall I be a Good Samaritan, or shall I simply pass by?" Whatever your decision, at least One besides yourself will know.

Second Suffragan Bishop to Be Elected

Convention Convenes Dec. 15, Synod House

The Bishop has called a special meeting of the Convention of the Diocese for the election of a second suffragan bishop. The election will be held on Tuesday, December 15, at 10:00 a.m. in Synod House, on the Cathedral grounds. It will be preceded by a celebration of Holy Communion in the Cathedral Church at 8:15 and breakfast in the undercroft of Synod House.

The duties of a suffragan bishop, as defined in the Canons of the Church, are as follows:

"A Suffragan Bishop shall act, in all respects, as the assistant of the Bishop of the Diocese, or Missionary District, and under his direction."

Any clergyman who has been ordained a priest, who is in good standing, and is not a diocesan bishop or a bishop coadjutor, is eligible for election as suffragan bishop. He must be at least thirty years of age at the time of his consecration.

The Diocese of New York now has one suffragan bishop, the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton. Canon law permits a maximum of two, except by special consent of the General Convention.

The first order of business at the December convention will be the report of the Committee for the Nomination of Bishops. This committee will present the names of not more than five candidates. If any of these candidates should withdraw, the committee may substitute the name of another candidate. Other nominations may be made from the floor, at any time after the report of the nominating committee except when a vote is being taken.

The Convention, which is the legislative body of the Diocese, is composed of all canonically qualified clergymen, not more than three lay delegates from each parish in union with the Convention, and one lay delegate from each organized mission. The total number of clergymen qualified as of this date is 375. The permissable number of lay delegates is 540.

Each clergyman has one vote. Each parish delegation may cast one vote. The vote of the delegate from a mission is counted as one-half a vote.

Voting for the suffragan bishop will be "by Orders," meaning that clergymen and lay delegates vote separately. To be elected, a candidate must receive a concurrent majority of all votes cast in each order. Should one order cast a majority for one candidate and the other order not do so, both orders must vote again.

Here are the approvals required by Canon Law if the man elected is:

A priest—approval of his consecration by a majority of the Standing Committees of all the dioceses and by a majority of all the bishops having jurisdiction in the United States.

A missionary bishop—approval of his election by the same committees and bishops as above.

First step leading to the election of a second suffragan bishop was taken in May at the annual convention of the Diocese. At that meeting, The Bishop received approval of his request for the election. The required consent was then received from a majority of the Standing Committees of all the dioceses and from a majority of the bishops having jurisdiction in the United States.

Consent Received

The Committee for the Nomination of Bishops, organized according to a Standing Resolution of the Diocese of New York, wrote to all rectors and priests-in-charge of congregations, asking them to inform their parishioners that suggestions for nominations might be sent to the committee. Any communicant in good standing could suggest candidates to the committee.

Nominations

The deadline for receipt of such names was September 17. The committee then held a series of meetings to consider the names sent in and those its members put forth.

The chairman of the Nominating Committee is Mr. Ludlow S. Fowler, Chancellor of the Diocese.

The other members, listed alphabetically, are: the Rev. Osborne Budd, Rector of St. John's, Tuckahoe; Mrs. George W. Burpee, past president of the Episcopal Churchwomen; the Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish; the Rev. John H. Johnson, Rector of St. Martin's, Manhattan; the Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, Rector of St. James, Manhattan; and Mr. Andrew Oliver, attorney.

The committee's nominations, together with brief biographical sketches, will be sent (not later than 30 days before the special convention) to all clerical members of the Convention, to all parishes in union with the Convention, and to all organized missions. The same material will be sent to all lay delegates and provisional lay delegates whose names have been received at least two weeks before the Convention.

Speaks at Cathedral, Church Club Dinner

The Archbishop of New York, Dr. A. Michael Ramsey, preached at the 11:00 a.m. service in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine Sunday, November 1. On Monday he conducted a Quiet Morning at the Cathedral for the clergy of the Diocese. On Tuesday evening, November 3, Dr. Ramsey spoke at a Church Club of New York dinner in his honor at the Hotel Plaza.

Dr. Ramsey has just concluded a series of Hale Memorial lectures at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill. He also delivered the matriculation sermon at General Theological Seminary here during Evensong, October 30.

The Archbishop, second ranking prelate in the Church of England, is recognized throughout the Anglican Communion as a theologian and scholar.

Consecrated as Bishop of Durham in 1952, and translated York in 1956, Dr. Ramsey was ordained in 1929. He has served as curate of St. Nicholas', Liverpool, subwarden of Lincoln Theological College, examining chaplain for the Bishop of Chester, lecturer of Boston Parish Church in Lincolnshire and vicar of St. Benedict's, Cambridge.

In 1940 Dr. Ramsey went to Durham, where he was canon of Durham Cathedral and professor of divinity at the University of Durham. At the time of his selection to the See of Durham, Dr. Ramsey was a Fellow of Magdalene College and Regius Professor of Divinity at the University of Cambridge.

During his stay in New York, Dr. Ramsey and his wife stayed with the dean of General Theological Seminary, the Very Rev. Lawrence Rose, S.T.D.

'Light the Dark Streets' to Be Filmed

The Rev. C. Kilmer Myers and Mrs. Myers talk with Martin H. Poll (left) producer of "Light the Dark Streets," and script writer Lee Stone. Shooting of the film, which is based on Fr. Myers' book of the same title, is scheduled to begin December 1.

Hope to Get Newman For Role of Fr. Myers

"Light the Dark Streets," a book by the Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, is being made into a full-length motion picture for showing in public theatres.

Fr. Myers, whose book was published by Seabury Press in 1957, is vicar of the Lower East Side Mission of Trinity Parish.

It is hoped that the principal character of the film, Fr. Myers, will be played by Paul Newman. Mr. Newman, known for his many leading roles in films and television plays, has been a volunteer youth worker with Fr. Myers on the Lower East Side and is greatly interested in youth activities.

Martin H. Poll, independent New York producer, has purchased the film rights and will produce "Light the Dark Streets" in black and white at Gold Medal Studios in the Bronx. Script is by Robert J. Crean, who has written for Kraft Television Theatre and other well known television programs, and by Lee Stone, a writer and producer who has been associated with Fr. Myers as a volunteer youth worker.

Shooting on "Light the Dark Streets" is scheduled to begin December 1.

"Light the Dark Streets" is the story of Fr. Myers' work with a bopping (fighting) gang of youths known as "The Knights."

Speaking of the film to be made of his book, Fr. Myers said:

"The production of the motion picture 'Light the Dark Streets' indicates that punitive action against delinquency is not enough. It is important that this be pointed out at a time when an indifferent public is crying for an increase of such action. Groups such as the New York City Youth Board and the Lower East Side Neighborhood Association have contended that the needs of our youth should be met with adequate services. It is our hope that the movie will bring to the fore the position of the many churches and settlement houses of the Lower East Side and elsewhere."

DIOCESAN BOOKLET BEING DISTRIBUTED

A new booklet explaining the activities and organization of its five departments has been published by the Council of the Diocese. Title is "1047 Amsterdam Avenue", address of the Diocesan offices.

Prepared by the Department of Promotion, the booklet is designed to acquaint churchmen of the Diocese with the Departments of Missions, Christian Education, Finance, Christian Social Relations, and Promotion. There is also a short section on the Diocese as a whole.

All churches of the Diocese were invited to place orders, at no charge, for enough copies to send one to each member family. Orders have been received for nearly all of the 40,000 copies printed. Distribution to the parishes was begun early this month.

Printed in two colors, "1047 Amsterdam Avenue" has 12 pages, including covers. Page size is 7½" by 10½".

Though it contains a great deal of factual information about the departments of the Council, the booklet is written in a light, easy-to-read style. Large, dramatic photographs and liberal spacing add to the "open" appearance of the booklet.

Mrs. Marshall Named To Post at State Farm

Mrs. Mildred Marshall, of St. Philip's, Manhattan, has been appointed staff worker for the Episcopal City Mission Society at Westfield State Farm, a prison and reformatory for women in Bedford Mills, N. Y. She succeeds Mrs. Elizabeth Meyers, who held that position for 35 years. A graduate of Hampton Institute, Va., Mrs. Marshall will help the women at the farm with their daily problems and upon their release help them find jobs and places to live.

175th Anniversary Fund Reaches $1,865,782

The 175th Anniversary Fund has reached a total of $1,865,782. Ninety-one percent of this amount ($1,701,488) represents gifts and pledges from about 15,000 families and individuals in 166 parishes and missions in the Diocese.

The remaining 9% of the total ($164,294) is from sources not identified with specific parishes, such as foundations, Episcopal Churchwomen, New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, non-parochial clergy, Diocesan and Cathedral staffs, earned interest, and special collections.

Several parishes have not yet completed campaigns. Bishop Donegan has asked that all parishes and missions strive to participate in increasing the Fund before the end of the year.

Commitments for expansion, new construction, and Revolving Fund loans are made as quickly as cash becomes available. (Most of the donors have pledged payments over a three-year period.)

Present urban projects underway include the new church house at St. Paul's, Bronx; the new St. Andrew's church, parish house and rectory, Clason Point, Bronx, and the new parish house for St. Margaret's, Bronx.

Loans from the Revolving Fund have been granted to several suburban and rural congregations and are to be paid on a mutually agreed-upon schedule. Among those receiving loans are: All Saints, Valley Cottage, for a new church and parish house; Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, for a new rectory; St. Peter's, Stone Ridge, for a new church, parish house, and rectory; St. John's, Ellenville, for a new rectory and additions to the parish house.

Site Fund purchases include a house and lot for use as a rectory at Red Oaks Mill in the town of LaGrange, Dutchess County, and a four-acre site at Washingtonville, Orange County, for future use of St. Anne's mission.

Encouraging News . . .

Pioneer Project Apparent Success

An important step toward more inter-parish cooperation among Episcopal Churches was achieved this year when five parishes got together and opened a training school for Sunday School teachers and interested laymen. If the school turns out to be a successful venture, according to E. A. Grant, headmaster of Grace School, where the classes were held, "perhaps there will be more inter-parish cooperation in other fields"

Beyond Expectations

The school offered a series of five lectures, given by the Rev. Edward N. West, canon sacrist of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Sunday School teachers and laymen from Grace Church, Calvary, Ascension, St. George's, and St. Mark's in-the-Bouwerie were invited to the lectures.

Leaders of the school were delighted when the number of laymen increased and surpassed the number of Sunday School teachers (who may have felt obligated to attend). As word spread about the school, the number attending increased and included laymen who were not usually leaders in the Church.

"God Speaks, We Respond"

The Training School was not designed to make better Sunday School teachers out of those who were already teaching or better church leaders out of those who were already leading.

According to Mr. Grant, the aim of the program was summed up in the title of the concluding lecture, "God Speaks, We Respond." The response expected of those who attended was not defined and therefore not confined.

The school began September 29 and concluded October 27. The rectors of the five parishes are now studying the results of it to determine if the program will be run again next year.

It Could Have Been A Wet Sunday

Hudson River Crossing Part of Celebration

New York has been celebrating the 350th anniversary of Henry Hudson's first voyage up the Hudson River. This celebration has sparked a number of anniversary programs throughout the state. Two parishes located along the Hudson joined to commemorate an event shared by both churches back in 1842. They are St. James Church in Hyde Park, and the Church of the Ascension in West Park. The event — the founding of the Church of the Ascension.

In the early days of St. James Church, it served parishioners not only in Hyde Park but also in West Park, across the Hudson. On Sundays hardy West Park parishioners piled into boats and rowed to morning worship in Hyde Park. One Sunday, according to local tradition, a boat capsized, drowning one of the parishioners.

The Rev. Dr. Sherwood, who was rector of St. James at the time of the accident, decided that it would be safer to establish a church on the other side of the river. After the Church of the Ascension was established, he served as its priest, crossing the river weekly until the parish was able to obtain the services of a full-time clergyman.

This event was celebrated by members of both parishes. Men, women, and children from Ascension dressed up in costumes of the period and rowed over to attend services at St. James.

Fall Convocations Attended by 2,300

The fall meetings of the seven Convocations of the Diocese were held at 4:00 p.m. on Sunday, October 25, with a Bishop of the Church addressing each meeting. Total attendance, including clergy, was estimated at 2,300.

Each of the meetings, which were held simultaneously for the first time in the history of the Diocese, took the form of a special service set forth by Bishop Donegan.

One of the best attended Convocation meetings was that on Staten Island (Richmond). Held at Christ Church, the service was participated in by 550 persons, who filled the church and adjoining rooms. The procession included 90 vestrymen, in vestments, and choirs totaling over 200 members. Clergy attendance was 100 percent.

Preachers at the services were: Hudson—the Rt. Rev. Reginald H. Gooden, Missionary Bishop of the Canal Zone; Manhattan—the Rt. Rev. Harry S. Kennedy, Missionary Bishop of Honolulu; Dutchess—the Rt. Rev. George H. Quarterman, Bishop of Northwest Texas; Bronx—the Rt. Rev. Joseph S. Minnis, Bishop of Colorado; Richmond—the Rt. Rev. Arnold M. # Women Score Another First

For the first time in its 128 years of existence the Episcopal City Mission Society will have women from all corners of the Diocese working with its chaplains and social workers.

Some 100 women have been selected to serve in hospitals, homes for the aged, prisons, and the temporary shelter for children at St. Barnabas House.

The program will be officially launched during a luncheon at the Plaza Hotel on November 13.

The women have been asked to serve in only the most practical ways. For instance, Miss Alice Palmer, who works on immigration problems for St. Barnabas House, badly needs assistance in family counselling. Many families are threatened with separation through ignorance of immigration laws. One person cannot tackle all the problems single-handedly.

Women who have some knowledge of domestic law are needed to advise inmates at Westfield State Farm, one of the largest combined women's prisons and reformatories in the United States. They are also needed to help these people find employment and places to live after they are released from the institution.

Bishop Donegan, president of the Society, has appointed Mrs. Thomas F. Vietor, of St. James', Manhattan, as chairman of the newly-created Women's Council. Mrs. Vietor, long active in church work, is a member of the Committee for Inter-Faith Neighbors, the Parents' Guild of St. James', and treasurer of the women's association of her parish.

Also serving with Mrs. Vietor on the Council is Mrs. Gurney Williams, president of the Episcopal Churchwomen in this Diocese, Mrs. John Heuss, president of the New York Altar Guild, Mrs. Fred R. King, chairman of the Bellevue Hospital Chaplains' Committee, and Mrs. William C. Dickey, president of the Midnight Mission.

St. Michael's Opens Remodelled Clinic

The Child Health Service at St. Michael's, West 99th Street, recently reopened in a completely remodelled clinic. Located in the parish house, it has new examination rooms, conference rooms and more office space. 2,700 square feet of additional work space was added to the clinic by replanning areas which were not being utilized efficiently.

Staffed by qualified pediatricians and nurses, the enrollment of the clinic has grown from 500 to 2,700. The children receive immunization shots, undergo health examinations, parents are given medical advice on feeding, and guidance on emotional and family problems.

Parish Life Conference Begins Nov. 17

The Bishop Donegan Conference Center, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., will again be the site of a Parish Life Conference. Under the leadership of Canon J. Stuart Wetmore, director of the Department of Christian Education, the conference will take place November 17, 18 and 19.

A Parish Life Conference is designed to relate the nature and purpose of the Church to its parishioners. Its ultimate aim is to develop leaders among the people. It is open to everyone in the Diocese of New York.

The conference center, located on one of the highest peaks in Tuxedo Park, is an ideal spot for people to gather for worship and study. Away from the hustle of the city, they have the opportunity to study, hear lectures and participate in informal discussion groups.

Because these Parish Life Conferences usually raise questions and give people food for afterthought, they are often followed up with a meeting back at the parish some few weeks later. The Rev. E. J. Rooney, associate director of Leadership Training, travels around the Diocese holding these post-conference discussions.

Anyone interested in enrolling in the Parish Life Conference may do so by contacting Father Rooney, Box 92, Katonah, New York.

ROOM FOR MORE

A newly extended balcony in the Chapel at St. Luke's Hospital, Manhattan, was dedicated recently. The extension was made so that more patients might attend the various services. Expansion of the balcony was made possible by gifts from St. Thomas, Manhattan, Charles E. Dunlap, who is a trustee of the hospital, and several gifts in the memory of the late Laurence M. Marks.

The Rev. Frederick M. Morris, rector of St. Thomas, officiated at the dedication.

CELEBRATION YEAR

An historical and pictorial booklet commemorating the 110th anniversary of Christ Church, Suffern, is on the presses. The booklet, edited by Robert A. Lowndes, will be available to the parish January 11, 1960.

Archdeacon George F. Brätt, who is in charge of rural missions for the Diocese of New York, will deliver a precentennial sermon at Matins, November 29.

Among the various activities planned throughout the year 1960 are dinners, an Epiphany music festival, an old timers' reunion, a post-Easter sale, and a pageant.

MIXED COMMITTEE

The Rev. Herald Swezy, rector of Ascension Church, West Park, has been appointed chairman of the Speakers Bureau of the newly established Ulster County Society for Mental Health. Serving on the committee with Father Swezy is a Roman Catholic priest, a Jewish rabbi, another Protestant minister, a lawyer, and a doctor.

JACKIE ROBINSON

Jackie Robinson, former Dodger first baseman and the first Negro in major league baseball, will deliver the Annual Men's Day message, Sunday, November 8, at St. Philip's Church, Manhattan, during the 11:00 a.m. service.

ALL SEATS FREE

The weekly parish bulletin of the Church of Epiphany, Manhattan, is noted for its unusual covers. One published last month featured what appeared to be a tapestry design. But it wasn't the pictorial matter that was so attention-getting. It was the simple words under the title: "Open daily . . . . All seats free."

TO EACH HIS OWN

St. Thomas' Church, Mamaroneck, has announced a change in the names of its various choir units. The adult group will continue to be called "the St. Thomas' Choir," but the boys group will be known as "the St. Gregory Choir." The former Red Choir will be known as "the St. Mary Choir" and the senior section of this group as the "St. Elizabeth Chorale."

COMMUTER

Windham House, a graduate training center for women in Christian Education, on West 108th Street, is sending one of its second year students to St. Barnabas, Irvington, where she will complete her fieldwork training. Miss Jane Evans journeys to Irvington every Sunday and Wednesday to assist in St. Barnabas' parish program.

Exception to The Rule Acquires City Block

As a rule, churches don't often acquire entire city blocks free of cost. But St. John's in Larchmont is an exception.

Funds to purchase a block of land immediately to the rear of the church were given to St. John's by William Coykendall. He gave the funds to the church in memory of his wife, who died last year. Mr. Coykendall a vestryman, hopes that the property will give St. John's the additional space it will need for expansion in future years.

The land, containing a house which will serve as a rectory for the Rev. William R. F. Thomas, has been named the Jesse Rowland Coykendall Memorial Gardens. Mrs. Coykendall was an active member of the Episcopal Churchwomen.

SPEAKER

The Rev. Harold R. Landon, of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, traveled to Great Barrington, Mass., to address the fall meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of Massachusetts. Mr. Landon spoke on his years in the Diocese of the Upper Nile (Uganda).

GROUND BROKEN FOR CHAPEL AT IDLEWILD

The Protestant International Chapel. The low rectangular part of the structure n front of the chapel will house the library and offices. The central entrance and foyer lead to the chapel in back.

Will Cost $250,000

Ground was broken for the new Protestant Chapel at Idlewild International Airport last month. Speaking before some 300 persons who assembled at the north end of the temporary terminal building, Mayor Wagner said he was "gratified to see Americans flocking to churches and synagogues" in these troubled times.

Work on the chapel will begin next spring.

The chapel, sponsored by the Protestant Council of the City of New York, will cost $250,000. All Protestant churches have been asked to help raise the money. Over $70,000 has already been pledged and this came before the campaign began officially.

The Rev. James W. Kennedy, who is heading the church division in Manhattan for the Campaign, said he could not stress enough the need for the chapel. He said "The Roman Catholics have completed their chapel and the Jewish chapel is now under construction." Dr. Kennedy, who is rector of the Church of the Ascension, added "It's time that Protestants had a chapel of their own."

During the ceremony, Dr. Gardiner C. Taylor, president of the Protestant Council, dedicated the ground which the Chapel will occupy.

The ceremony marked the kick-off of a $1,000,000 campaign, $250,000 of which will be spent for construction and the remainder to be used for equipment and maintenance.

Seminary Sponsoring Play Writing Contest

A contest to find an original play written around a religious theme is being sponsored by the Union Theological Seminary in cooperation with the National Broadcasting Company.

Prizes for the winning play range from $50 to $250.

Rules of the competition require that the play be based on a religious theme, not more than one hour long, unpublished, written since January 1959, written in English, author must be living in North America, or on neighboring islands and Hawaii, manuscripts must be typed in accordance with normal standards for submission to a publisher, and accompanied by a stamped self-addressed envelope for their return.

Contestants should send their manuscripts to Robert E. Seaver, Director of Program in Religious Drama, Union Theological Seminary, 3041 Broadway, New York 27, N. Y.

Union Theological Seminary reserves the right to the first stage performance of the work any time within one year after the award is made. NBC also has the same rights should they produce it on radio or television.

Church Signs Slated For Use in Scotland

The now familiar sign, "The Episcopal Church Welcomes You," posted at Episcopal churches across the United States, will soon be seen in Scotland.

The provost of St. Andrew's Cathedral in Aberdeen, the Very Reverend W. P. Shanon, on a visit here recently, was so impressed by the signs that he took the idea back to Scotland with him.

The Representative Church Council of the Episcopal Church of Scotland also liked the idea and passed a resolution to exhibit uniform signs outside their churches throughout all Scotland.

The National Council of the Episcopal Church in the U. S. started selling the signs in 1951 and now handles orders for new ones at the rate of about 25 a week.

The Scots are not the first to borrow the idea. The Anglican Church of Canada borrowed it in 1955.

'Mighty Thankful' UTO Total Reveals

Mrs. William E. Leidt, Diocesan treasurer and chairman of the United Thank Offering, has announced the final totaling of contributions received at the Spring Ingathering last May.

A total of $32,382.16 was collected from 9,219 Episcopal Churchwomen throughout the Diocese. A breakdown by convocations is as follows:

| | No. of Women | amount |
|---|---|---|
| BRONX | 968 | $ 1,623.23 |
| DUTCHESS | 740 | 1,593.54 |
| HUDSON-RAMAPO | 949 | 2,090.65 |
| MANHATTAN | 2925 | 16,059.16 |
| RICHMOND | 525 | 1,158.92 |
| WESTCHESTER | 3155 | 9,689.09 |
| OPEN OFFERING | | 154.83 |
| GIRLS' FRIENDLY | | 12.74 |
| | 9219+ | $32,382.16 |

The use made of the offering is well illustrated by the work of Miss Claire E. Ogden, director of the Bella Vista Children's Home at Ancon, Panama Canal Zone. The home provides a place where homeless children may grow up surrounded by love and care.

Miss Ogden has been directing the work for 37 years. She was decorated by the Panamanian government for her service.

In the city of Kobe, Japan, stands another illustration of the use of the United Thank Offering. A new cathedral is rising on the former site of St. Michael's Church. St. Michael's, at the time of its wartime destruction along with three-fourths of the city, was the largest church in Kobe. For three months, services were held in a shelter contrived from salvage.

Later a large wooden structure was erected, which has served the fast-growing congregation. The new cathedral is planned to accommodate 700 people and to provide offices and space for parish activities. A grant of $20,000 from the United Thank Offering is one-fourth of the total cost.

Old Diocesan Offices Now Apartment Building

A group of apartment dwellers living at 416 Lafayette St., downtown Manhattan, may be surprised to learn they are living in the old Diocesan offices of the Episcopal Church. The remodelled building, which has just been completed, was originally owned by Catherine Lorillard Wolfe, a member of the Lorillard tobacco family, who gave it to the Church in 1887.

In the early days before the growth of so many parishes, the archdeacon and his staff served their missions from the building, which not only housed their offices but was their residence. The Bishop at that time was living in Greenwich Village.

In 1900 the offices moved up to Morningside Heights where they are now located.

In the days that followed, the old mansion was used by Christian Social Relations and later by the City Mission Society.

Lafayette Street was once one of New York's most distinguished sections. Before the giant warehouses changed the face of the neighborhood, it was the cultural and religious center. The opening of the new apartment may be the first step toward revival of the section.

Diocesan Meetings Resumes in December

The Episcopal Churchwomen resume their regular schedule of Diocesan Meetings with the United Thank Offering Ingathering and an Advent meeting, on Tuesday, December 1.

After the United Thank Offering at 10:30 a. m. in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, sandwiches and coffee will be available in the undercroft of Synod House, where Bishop Donegan, Bishop Boynton, and the Cathedral clergy staff will join the women.

The Advent meeting will convene at 1:00 p. m. in Synod Hall. Mrs. Arthur Sherman, executive director of the General Division of Women's Work at the National Council, will give a talk about today's family in Japan. She has recently returned from a trip in that country.

FRIENDSHIP

St. Stephen's, Manhattan, has been named a beneficiary in the will of a Congregationalist. A. Edward Lester bequeathed $3,000 to the First Congregational Church in his home town of Pachaug, Conn., and $1,000 to St. Stephen's. It seems that Mr. Lester's best friend was senior warden there. Every Christmas and Easter, Mr. Lester contributed to the church. Even after his friend's death, Mr. Lester continued his contributions and made a final remembrance to St. Stephen's in his will.

MEETING THE NEED

The newly reorganized Men's Club at St. Francis of Assisi, White Plains, is endeavoring to discover the immediate needs of the community and then take action to help do something about them. One of the most glaring needs already discovered by the Club is that of a recreational program for young people. A program is now underway and a room in the parish house is being furnished with ping-pong tables and other equipment.

Thanksgiving Day will be a happier, more meaningful day...

for a "thank-you visit" to your Church

IT's a story we all know and love—the first Pilgrim Thanksgiving. The excitement in their little homes must have been pretty much as it is today—the tantalizing smells of roast turkey and pumpkin pie—the bustle and rush of eager children—it must have been a wonderful day!

But before the Pilgrims sat down to their feast they observed the true meaning of Thanksgiving. They all gathered together in their meetinghouse to give thanks for the good they had received, for survival through a long year of hardship, and to pray for the strength and courage to keep their faith in this strange, new land.

This Thanksgiving, why not take your family to your house of worship. A quiet hour of prayer and thanks will make your holiday so much more meaningful.

Wherever you are . . . whatever your beliefs may be . . . take time to offer your words of thanks . . . just as the Pilgrims did more than 300 years ago.

THE BISHOP'S CHRISTMAS MESSAGE

When we celebrate a birthday we think of the life which the birthday commemorates. So on Christmas Day we remember not only Bethlehem and its manger, but also Nazareth and its carpenter's bench, Galilee and its lake, Calvary and its cross, Emmaus and its breaking of bread. What does it all mean; what tremendous truth did the whole of the life of the Lord Christ reveal?

The most important knowledge we can have, is knowledge of God. We are meant to grow daily in that knowledge until, after this life, we see him face to face and know, even as we are known.

Who and what is God are the most significant questions we can ask. Earnest people have answered that God is justice, intelligence, omnipotent power, creator, and ruler of the universe. The meaning of Christ's life includes all these truths, but goes immeasurable distances beyond it. By his words, still more by his deeds, Jesus convinces us that God is love.

We know what human love can be, the sacrifices which human love can make, the power of human love to restore and renew. Christ was born, lived, and died, and rose again to show us that such love is not only the most potent factor in the life of man, but also that it is the very key to our knowledge of God himself.

Everyone is aware of the difficulties. We encounter pain and tragedy which seem purposeless, and see evil triumphant, and goodness defeated. We ask why are these things allowed to happen. Our question may not be answered fully, but with the Christmas faith that God is love, our questioning becomes unimportant.

The child who was born at Bethlehem on Christmas Day made clear the mind and purpose of God, and at the same time, throughout his life, was love manifested—love without reserve, which knew no limits, and embraced all mankind, so that we can say, "Here is divine love; in this personal love we see God." The life of Christ cannot be explained except as the outward and visible assurance of the love God has for all creation.

Henceforth, knowing Christ, we know that God is love. Mysteries and problems there will always be, but the central question is answered. "So God loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, to the end that all that believe in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

I wish you a Christmas blessed by the thankful remembrance of the love of God manifested in Christ Jesus our Lord. May his love abide in your hearts and guide you through all life.

Faithfully and affectionately, your Bishop,

Santa Takes a Back Seat in Choir Boy's Life

Christmas Means More Than Sugar Plums

By midnight of Christmas Eve most little boys and girls are fast asleep dreaming of sugar-plum fairies and what Santa is going to leave in their stockings. But the 39 boys who live at the Choir School of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine are up and singing the midnight service.

This is symbolic of the difference in the lives of choir boys and the lives of other children.

Do not be misled. A choir boy's life is not entirely a solemn one. He is as mischievous, noisy, angelic and quiet as the boy next door. It's his routine that is different.

The Choir School of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, located just behind the east end of the Cathedral.

Excitement Mounts

Preparation for Christmas, in a sense, has been going on since the school term opened in October. What with two rehearsals a day, plus the 13 times the boys sing in the Cathedral during the average week, they're all primed for Christmas services.

Excitement begins to mount when the boys are taken on a shopping tour to buy presents for each other and their families.

On Christmas Eve they are given a special dinner. Then they exchange presents and are hustled off to bed in order to get a few hours of sleep before singing the midnight service.

Double Christmas

They don't leave for home until after the 11:00 o'clock service on Christmas Day. The nice part of this is that they get two Christmas celebrations — one at the school and one at home.

A choir boy follows a rigid routine which begins at 7:10 a.m. By 8:30 he has been inspected for dirt behind the ears, eaten breakfast and is at Morning Prayer in a chapel of the Cathedral. By nine, he and his schoolmates are in the rehearsal room with Alec Wyton, headmaster and master of choristers, brushing up on their arpeggios. Classes begin around ten.

In addition to the usual subjects most children learn in public schools, the choir boys receive instruction in Latin and French. This begins in their second year, equivalent to the fifth grade. Because the Choir School is a Church school, they also receive religious instruction.

Fun on a Rainy Day

The school has five persons working full-time on the faculty and four part-time.

The last class ends at 2:00 p.m. when the boys are given time for recreation. Not many children play in the shadow of the imposing Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Sight-seers are awed by the huge cathedral, but to the average choir boy it's where he sings and a wonderful place to roam about on rainy days. After the recreation period, it's back to the rehearsal room for another hour of practice. This is followed by Evensong in the Cathedral. By nine, the boys are in bed, and the staff heaves a collective sigh. "They do everything with enthusiasm," according to Mr. Wyton. "When they play pranks on one another they do it whole-heartedly. By the end of the day we're happy to see them in bed."

Choir boys get only a one-day weekend. When other children are happily indulging in their Saturday activities, the choir boys are still at their books or singing in a service. Their weekend begins after they've finished singing Evensong on Sunday. Monday is their free day. Unless a boy's family lives close by, he is not permitted to go home. To occupy Mondays, special outings are arranged, and this presents quite a problem.

"It's either the inconvenience of the day or the ages of the boys (9 to 13) which makes it so hard to arrange for things to do on Mondays," sighed David O'Leary, principal. Most of New York's

To most children the whole pre-Christmas season is one of anticipation and excitement . . . mostly anticipation of Santa Claus. But the choir boys are more fortunate. Along with anticipation and excitement, they have an opportunity to realize the true, the religious, significance of Christmas.

The Rev. Dr. J. V. Butler Rector, Trinity, Princeton

The Rev. Dr. John Vernon Butler, rector of Trinity Church in Princeton, N.J., has been appointed Dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The appointment, by Bishop Donegan, was confirmed by the Cathedral's Board of Trustees.

The Rev. Dr. John V. Butler

When Dr. Butler is installed, probably in February, he will become the executive head of the largest cathedral in the United States and the second largest in the world. He will be responsible to Bishop Donegan.

Dr. Butler succeeds the Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, who in 1958 became the Bishop of California after six years as dean. The new dean is 53 years old, married and the father of two children.

Ordained deacon in 1930, Dr. Butler was appointed curate of Christ Church Cathedral, Springfield, Mass. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1931 and in that year became curate of the Chapel of the Intercession of Trinity Parish, Manhattan.

He was at the Chapel of the Intercession for two years, and the following nine years was rector of St. Peter's Parish in Springfield, Mass.

In 1942 he became rector of St. Martin's Church, Providence, R.I., and was in this position until

OPEN DOOR POLICY IN THIRTIETH YEAR

Affords Minor Problems In Decoration & Heating

The open doors of the Church of the Ascension, Manhattan. Although simply designed, note that the decoration is on the inside of the doors. Never locked, the doors have no key hole.

Usually, church doors are decorated on the outside, so that when they are closed they are eye-appealing. The Church of the Ascension, Manhattan, had a different problem in door decoration. Since its doors are not closed at any time, how should they be decorated? Simple. They are decorated on the inside. Since they are never closed and never locked, the keyhole has also been eliminated.

Ascension, "the church of the open door," celebrated the thirtieth year of its hospitality policy last month. The man who established the policy one night during the Depression, the Rt. Rev. Donald B. Aldrich, came out of retirement to preach at the special service marking the occasion.

The open door policy naturally presents problems. The cost of heating and the additional hours of electricity are higher than most churches pay. But these costs are minor when compared to the amount of spiritual and physical salvation the church can give.

When asked about the problem of vandalism, the Rev. Dr. James W. Kennedy, present rector of the church, said that provisions had been made against it. Small church articles such as candlestick holders are made of substances which are of little value on the market. Altar pieces are not removable. Also, there is a watchman on duty at all times.

Ascension, the first church to be built on Fifth Avenue, is noted for its social consciousness. In 1865 it erected model tenement houses; in 1888 it founded a nursery for children of working mothers; and later it built a small chapel open to anyone with a death in the family who desires the services of the church. When Bishop Aldrich opened the doors of the church on November 9, 1929, Ascension became a haven for hungry and homeless men. The pews were rearranged so the men had a place to sleep.

Today, most of the people who take advantage of the open door policy at Ascension are not in any need other than spiritual. Many come in just to sit and meditate quietly. The late Olin Downes, famed music critic of the New York Times, was a regular visitor to the church. He made a practice of stopping by after attending concerts to meditate before writing his reviews.

But for those who have real physical needs, the watchman at the church keeps a pocketful of cards good for a meal and a place to sleep.

Since an article was published about the church in the Reader's Digest last year, Dr. Kennedy has received scores of letters from clergymen of several faiths inquiring about the open door policy. They are curious letters asking timidly about special problems, such as vandalism, almost as if such a thing shouldn't be discussed. But all the letters are highly admiring, for who can criticize a church for never closing its doors?

But where are the cows?

These buildings were once the center of a dairy farm. Today, they are part of St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining. Structure at far right now serves as storage area. Long building at right was once a stable, now a Sunday School building. Small building adjoining was the only one constructed in the remodeling program. Housing the kitchen and other facilities, it connects the Sunday School and the combination church and parish house, once a hay barn. At far left is corner of the former milking parlor, which will be made into a church.

Parish Finds Buildings Can Be Converted, Too

St. Paul's, Ossining, Former Dairy Farm

Nobody at St. Paul's-on-the-Hill thinks it strange that the vestry is planning to convert a milking parlor into a new church. After all, the present church was once a hay barn.

This unusual remodeling program was undertaken in 1956, when the parish decided to leave its downtown Ossining location and move to an abandoned dairy farm on the edge of town. The church name was changed, too, though unofficially. "St. Paul's became "St. Paul's-on-the-Hill," in keeping with its new location atop a high hill.

The dairy buildings that St. Paul's-on-the-Hill converted into a church were once part of a large estate. In about 1954, the estate was sold to a developer. Approached by the Department of Missions of the Diocese, he agreed to give an option to acquire the farm buildings for church purposes.

The Department of Missions then made an offer to St. Paul's that the Department would acquire the property if the parish would move there and convert the buildings into a church plant.

The need for a relocation of St. Paul's had long been apparent. Located in downtown Ossining, it was only three blocks from another Episcopal Church, Trinity. Besides being poorly located, it had inadequate facilities, and even these were obsolete. To top it off, many of its parishioners had moved farther out.

The new location, on the other hand, would offer ample space, plenty of land for parking, new facilities, and a church surrounded not by a business district but by scores of homes.

But not all of the parishioners were in favor of selling the old church and relocating. As the present rector points out, "Selling a church is like selling your grandmother. She may be old, but there's a lot of sentiment attached."

The vestry of St. Paul's finally decided to make the move and engaged Walter Jago, a member of Christ Church, Tarrytown, and the Sevs Construction Co. of Irvington, N. Y.

What the architect had to work with were five well-constructed buildings. All were erected in 1941 following a fire that destroyed the former buildings.

One structure was a hay barn, all brick with a slate roof. There were no windows, however, and only two large farm doors for entrance ways. By replacing the large doors with windows, installing other windows, putting in a new entrance way, and carrying out other remodeling, the hay barn was converted into a combination church and parish house.

Another building was formerly a stable for the cattle. This was converted into an attractive and functional Sunday School building.

Lantern Shop

The former garage, which is also brick, and strongly resembles one of the many outbuildings at Colonial Williamsburg, was converted into a little shop operated by the ladies of the church. Known as the Lantern Shop, it is also used for Sunday School classes.

Across from the Lantern Shop is another Colonial-looking building. Too small and low for other uses, it will serve as a storage area.

The fifth building was once the dairy's milking parlor. This structure has not yet been remodeled and stands as the only reminder that St. Paul's-on-the-Hill was once part of a dairy farm. The parish hopes to begin work in 1960 to convert the all-brick structure into a new church and to use the former hay barn as a parish house only.

Only One New Building

In the entire conversion process, it was necessary to put up only one new building. This is a small structure that connects the combination parish house and church with the Sunday School building. In it are a kitchen, a vesting area and rest rooms.

All of the work done at St. Paul's-on-the-Hill to date has been paid for, using unrestricted capital funds the parish had on hand and the proceeds from the sale of the old church.

The new facilities were first put into use in the fall of 1956. To enable the parishioners gradually to become accustomed to the new church, however, services were held at both churches for the next two years, until the old church was sold.

Before the move, the church purchased a new rectory. Situated about 50 yards from the new church, it is an attractive split-level. Rector of St. Paul's-on-the-Hill is the Rev. J. J. Sharkey, who came to the parish last May after being rector of Zion, Wappingers Falls.

How and Why

Except for the rectory, the Department of Missions still holds title to all the land and buildings at St. Paul's-on-the-Hill. Conveyance of the property to the parish will be made in 1963.

When this conveyance takes place, it will be the climax of a story that began with the sale of another Ossining church, Grace Hall Chapel. It was because of this chapel that the Department of Missions had funds to purchase the old dairy property.

The chapel was built by members of the family of the late Henry Codman Potter, Bishop of New York, 1887-1908. For many years it was served by the Rev. Charles W. Baldwin, former rector of St. Mary's, Scarborough. Later it became a mission of the Diocese, but because of poor location and dwindling attendance, the Department of Missions decided to close the church and dispose of the property.

It was the wish of the founders of Grace Hall and those who provided its endowment, that if its work ceased, the income from the endowment be used for Episcopal Church work in Ossining.

The most pressing church needs in Ossining were those presented by St. Paul's, an independent parish founded in 1833. So the Department of Missions decided to help this parish, using money derived from the sale of Grace Hall and its endowment income to buy the dairy property.

THE EPISCOPAL MOTORAMA, a traveling exhibit carrying basic facts about the Church to the general public. It was put into service this summer, touring the Missionary District of North Dakota.

Mobile Exhibit Takes Church to People

Motorama Tours N. Dak.

A traveling exhibit designed to acquaint the general public with the Episcopal Church has been put into service by the National Council.

The first mobile exhibit to be used by the Episcopal Church, it was on tour throughout North Dakota this past summer and will be used in other sections of the country in the coming months.

Known as the Episcopal Motorama, the unusual missionary vehicle is a former city bus. It served as a mobile chapel in North Dakota before National Council allocated money to convert it to its present use.

Inside the Motorama are photographs, art treatments and text that give basic facts about the Episcopal Church and its program in this country and overseas. One panel tells about the diocese or missionary district in which the bus is touring.

Rotating teams of two clergymen man the exhibit and drive the Motorama from town to town. The itinerary is drawn up and the clergymen are supplied by the diocese or missionary district being toured.

In North Dakota, the Motorama was parked on streets in county seat towns, at pageants and county fairs, and at other places where large crowds could be expected. Local clergy and laymen helped man the exhibit and place advance publicity in newspapers.

In an interview with The Bulletin, the Rt. Rev. Richard R. Emery, Missionary Bishop of North Dakota, said that the Motorama has been highly successful in his area. Other church groups have made inquiries and are considering similar mobile exhibits.

Bishop Emery reports that the Motorama drew more traffic at county fairs than when it was parked on the street. "People come to fairs for the express purpose of looking over exhibits," he said.

The population of North Dakota, Bishop Emery points out, is largely Roman Catholic and Lutheran. The Episcopal Church, which has only 3,500 communicants among the state's population of 619,000, is not well known.

Because the Episcopal Church is so little known in North Dakota, many questions were asked by people visiting the exhibit. Two of the most common questions were: "Is this the Church of England?" and "Isn't the Episcopal Church like the Roman Catholic?"

The Rev. H. R. Landon Appointed Canon

The Bishop has appointed the Rev. Harold R. Landon to be a Canon Residentiary of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine. The appointment, which was confirmed by the Cathedral's Board of Trustees, makes him a member of the Cathedral Chapter. This is the body responsible to the Bishop for the Cathedral's services and program.

Canon Landon served as priest and theological tutor of Buwalasi College in Mbale, Uganda, for three years prior to his appointment as assistant minister at the Cathedral in 1958. His African experience has made him in demand as a speaker throughout this Diocese as well as in other areas.

Canon Landon is fond of recalling his days in Africa, where he was called "father" and Mrs. Landon was called "mother" by the native students.

Ordained to the priesthood in 1944 by Bishop Tucker of Ohio, Canon Landon was in charge of St. Thomas Church, Port Clinton, Ohio, rector of St. Paul's Church, Steubenville, Ohio, and in charge of education at Christ Church Christiana Hundred in Greenville, Ohio.

Monday, December 7, has been designated National Civil Defense Day. This observance is being brought to the attention of all Americans to symbolize the need for nationwide survival preparedness.

On the Distaff Side . .

Newly-formed Council To Give Time & Talent

The first Women's Council of the Episcopal City Mission Society was inaugurated last month during a seminar and luncheon at the Plaza Hotel. The 250 women who comprise the Council were asked by the Bishop, who is president of the Society, not for donations of money, but of time and talent. "We need you in the most important way," he said in his address to the women. "We need you to work in the institutions helping the chaplains and we need you to work in the other departments of the Society."

"Church interests have prior claims on the talent and time of our people," the Bishop said.

The women of the Council, especially chosen by the Society, have been asked to meet newcomers to the U.S. and help them during their first confusing days in this country. They have been asked to help find jobs for retired people who want and need work. They also have been asked to recruit people to work with youngsters at St. Barnabas House and to act as counselors at the Elko Lake camps. Each department head in the City Mission Society described the needs of his department to the women in plain language. The variety of needs are such that there is a job for everyone, no matter what her interests may be.

My God and My All, the life of St. Francis, by Elizabeth Goudge, $4.95.

Mrs. Malcolm Tuttle, children's book consultant for the Episcopal Churchwomen, suggests the following books for the younger set.

Where Is God?, by Joan Gale Thomas, Lothrop, Lee, Shepard, $1.00. The story of a little boy looking for God in one place, and discovering that He is everywhere.

And It Was So, illustrated by Tasha Tudor, Westminster Press, $2.50. God's creation manifests itself in this book.

Periodical Club Starts Annual Appeal

The Church Periodical Club, which supplies religious, educational, and recreational books for seminarians, church libraries and schools, is making its annual appeal through the Episcopal Churchwomen this month.

Parish branches of the club have been asked to contribute to the CPC's chief project, "The Seminarian Book Fund." This fund supplies every postulant and candidate for Holy Orders from this Diocese with the nucleus of a theological library and also supplies books to needy theologians in the mission field.

Inquiries may be sent to Mrs. Rudolf F. Mattesich, director of the Church Periodical Club, 233 East 69th Street, New York. Contributions to the CPC should be forwarded to Mrs. Jamie Kerr, treasurer of the Episcopal Churchwomen in New York, 1480 Midland Ave., Bronxville, New York.

A Blend of the Secular and Spiritual

Deaconesses in N. Y. Serve in Many Ways

In her summer uniform a deaconess looks more like an English nannie than a part of the Episcopal Church. In her winter uniform she looks more like a sister of a Holy Order. This peculiar blend of the secular and spiritual in her outer appearance characterizes the unusual office of a deaconess in the Church.

This is why.

A deaconess is not part of the ordained clergy of the Church, yet she can perform many of their tasks. For instance she may prepare candidates for Baptism and Confirmation. In the absence of a clergyman, she may baptize infants. With the approval of the Bishop in the diocese or missionary district where she is stationed, she may read Morning or Evening prayer and the Litany in the church should there be no rector available.

Yet the spiritual side of her life does not take up all her time. For some deaconesses, worldly duties include nursing in a hospital, social work in a home for unwed mothers, parish work, or administration of a scholarship program for future deaconesses.

There are 86 deaconesses scattered throughout the United States and its territories. In the Diocese of New York there are four in active service.

Deaconess Phyllis T. Spencer, serving on the staff of Holy Trinity, E. 88th Street, is deeply involved in parish work. In addition to conducting Confirmation classes, running the Sunday School and setting up the Released Time schedule, she visits shut-ins and sick parishioners who cannot get to regular services. Deaconess Lydia Ramsey, at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, serves in a similar way.

Another deaconess, Agnes R. Bradley, serves in Dana House, a home for unwed mothers, as a full-time nurse.

Deaconess Ruth Johnson administers a scholarship program for the training of future deaconesses and other Church workers.

The service of women in the Church dates back to the early apostolic days. The term "diakonos", from the Greek meaning "servant", applied to both deacons and deaconesses. St. Paul used the term when he referred to "Phoebe, a diakonos of the Church which is in Cenchraea," (Romans 16:1). It is known that there were 40 deaconesses serving in the principal church of Constantinople about the year 400 A.D.

Bishop Donegan sets apart a deaconess. A deaconess is "set apart" by the "laying on of hands." She is not ordained, nor does she profess obedience to a particular Holy Order. The only vow she makes is to endeavor to fulfill the duties of her office and to obey her Bishop.

During the Middle Ages the office fell into disuse and was revived in England by the Bishop of London in 1861 and later in the United States in 1889.

A deaconess is paid like any other clergyman, yet, unless she is working under a National Council appointment, there is no Church pension plan for her.

A Retiring Fund for Deaconesses was set up in 1927 to help those who need assistance after retiring from active service. Funds for the grants come from the deaconesses themselves, women's groups, the General Division of Women's Work of the National Council, as well as from individuals who are interested in the work of the Deaconesses.

Until the Church sets up a pension plan, the Retiring Fund will carry on its important mission.

Gifts to the fund may be sent to the following address: Retiring Fund for Deaconesses, c/o First National City Trust Co., 22 William St., New York 15, N. Y.

SOCIETY IN IT'S 150th YEAR

The New York Bible Society is commemorating its 150th year with a series of special events and church services which will extend through December.

Added interest in the Read-the-Bible campaign, conducted by the society, has been generated by the recent upsurge in juvenile delinquency. The society initiated a crash program to distribute Bibles in the troubled areas.

Trinity Church has 1,846 communicants and 763 in its church school. During Dr. Butler's rectorship, the church has built and paid for a new parish house costing $250,000. Under construction is a new parochial chapel, All Saints. Located in Princeton, it will be completed next summer at a cost of $700,000. A funds drive for the new chapel was successfully concluded this year.

Active on the national level of the Episcopal Church, Dr. Butler was a member of the National Council from 1952 to 1958 and during this time also served as chairman of the Curriculum Development Division. He was a deputy to the General Convention in 1946, 1949, 1955 and 1958.

In the Diocese of Western Massachusetts, Dr. Butler was for four years a member of the Diocesan Council and chairman of the Department of Christian Social Relations.

He later held the same positions in the Diocese of Rhode Island, serving on the Council four years and as chairman of Christian Social Relations two years.

In his present Diocese, New Jersey, he is a member of the Standing Committee and a member and former president of the Board of Managers of St. Martin's Retreat House, Bernardsville. He has also been a member of the Cathedral Chapter and the Board of Missions.

Dr. Butler has been a trustee of General Theological Seminary since 1945 and since 1951 chairman of the Standing Committee of the Board of Trustees.

He is also on the Board of Trustees of Seabury Press and represents the Episcopal Church on the General Board of the National Council of Churches of Christ.

Dr. Butler was born in Worcester, Mass., and is a graduate of Amherst College and the General Theological Seminary. He holds Doctor of Divinity degrees from Ripon and Amherst Colleges and a Doctor of Sacred Theology degree from General Theological Seminary. He is an honorary canon of the Cathedral of the Diocese of Aberden and Orkney, Scotland.

Inter-Parish Program A Growing Movement

The movement toward more inter-parish cooperation is gaining momentum. Five suburban churches have joined forces and organized an exchange dance program for young people. The dances were initiated last October.

Churches sponsoring the dances are: Church of the Redeemer, Pelham; Christ Church, Pelham Manor; St. John's, New Rochelle; St. Luke's, Eastchester, Tuckahoe; and St. James the Less, Scarsdale.

The dances rotate to the parish hall of each of the churches participating in the program. This month's dance will be held at Christ Church in Pelham Manor and the one next month at St. Luke's, Eastchester in Tuckahoe.

The young people do all the decorating and supply Cokes and cookies.

Response to the dance exchange has been enthusiastic. The October dance at the Church of the Redeemer attracted over 100 high school youngsters. Last month's dance attendance at St. John's in New Rochelle jumped to around 150.

According to the Rev. Douglas S. MacDonald, Jr., curate of the Church of the Redeemer, the program was set up to combat juvenile delinquency "before it ever gains a solid foothold in our towns."

THE BISHOP'S NEW YEAR MESSAGE

At the beginning of a New Year we always do well to remember the timeless warning of the Old Testament that it is only false prophets who cry "peace, peace where there is no peace."

It is not that anyone then or now lacks the desire for peace, rather the problem lies in the definition of the word.

There are two kinds of peace — the world's peace, and God's peace.

The world's peace means the simple human desire to be let alone — to live without any external interference, with our own established and satisfactory pattern of life.

If one considers peace as the desire to have what one wishes without let or hindrance, then every nation in the world is a peace-loving nation. Any nation would be quite content to achieve all it wishes for, and not to have to go to war for it.

But the difficulty with this wordly definition of peace is that nations, in common with human beings, too often want something at somebody else's expense.

The old-fashioned word for this was covetousness. To want something that somebody else has and, in addition, to want other persons not to have it, is a fundamental violation of the laws of God.

God's peace is not simply the absence of war, strife and tension; it is truth, justice and love in action in the lives of men and nations in their relations with one another. God's peace is not confined to words and prayers. It must be expressed in deeds — in a ceaseless striving for the betterment of all mankind in healing the sick, feeding the hungry and enlightening those who are in darkness.

A united world of nations living together in brotherhood and mutual understanding and respect and trust is possible, but only as men and nations are seeking God's peace — a peace which requires sacrifice, unselfishness, discipline, humility and generosity.

We have recently been warned by our leading economists that our nation will soon be so rich, its citizens so prosperous, that we shall be in grave danger of perishing unless we voluntarily take on those restraints and disciplines which make it possible to live with the rest of the world in terms of brotherly concern and common interest.

If history shows us any one thing, it is that there can be no security or survival for an exceedingly wealthy nation surrounded by hungering, underprivileged, overpopulated countries. Prosperity entails responsibility.

As your Bishop, I wish for you, for our country and for all mankind, God's peace.

Faithfully and affectionately, your Bishop,

Horace W. B. Donegan

"Happy Bishop's Day..."

The Wetmore family at their home in Scarsdale. On the sofa are: Canon Wetmore, Mrs. Wetmore, Mary, 4, Ted, 15, and Nancy, 18. On the floor are Andy, 9, and the family dogs, Robbie and George.

Canon Wetmore, Suffragan Bishop-Elect

Of all the congratulations that the Rev. Canon J. Stuart Wetmore received on his election to suffragan bishop, the one that he prizes most came from his four-year-old daughter, Mary. When the Bishop-Elect came home after the election, the little girl threw her arms around him. "Happy bishop's day, Daddy!" she beamed.

When you get to know Mary, as we did on a recent visit to the Wetmore home, you can believe that her greeting came without prompting. She is as uninhibited and affectionate as the two dogs which burst upon you when you walk in the Wetmore front door.

Mary is one of the four Wetmore children, the other three being Andy, 9, Ted, 15, and Nancy, 18. The three younger children live at home. Nancy is a "freshette" at the University of Kings College, her father and mother's alma mater in Halifax, Nova Scotia. Another member of the household is Mrs. Wetmore's sister, Miss Mary Robinson.

The family lives on Fox Meadow Road, Scarsdale, in a white two-story frame house surrounded by large trees. They have lived there since 1955 and before that were in Bronxville for two years. In Bronxville, Andy was a constant companion of Randy Parr, daughter of television star Jack Parr.

When the Wetmores sit down for a meal, they just about fill the large dining room table. But there's always room for one more, such as Miss Anu Oola, Nancy's college roommate from Venezuela who was a house guest during the Christmas holidays. It's quite an occasion when the chair at the head of the table is occupied at supper. It happens only about two nights in seven.

The Wetmore living room is large and comfortable looking, with a fireplace made of quartz stone at one end. In the room at present is a trophy awarded to Mrs. Wetmore and Andy for their painting of a store window in a Halloween contest. On the walls are several oils, pastels and line drawings by Mrs. Wetmore. Nancy is also an accomplished amateur artist.

It was snowing hard when we interviewed the family in front of their crackling fire; and this was an appropiate setting, for the Wetmores are Canadians.

Canon Wetmore grew up in Hampton, New Brunswick, a town of about 600 in beautiful farm country. There were four children in his family, he and three sisters. Their father was superintendent of education for Kings County. Their mother still lives in Hampton, though she spends the winters with her children.

Canon and Mrs. Wetmore met while they were enrolled at the University of Kings College. They were both graduated in 1939, he with a licentiate in theology degree and she with a bachelor's degree. A year later, while he was on his first assignment as a priest, they were married.

A large, well-built man, Canon Wetmore was active in college athletics, playing varsity football, ice hockey and basketball. He was also on the debating team, in the dramatics club, director of the choir and a company commander in the officers training corps.

"In all honesty, though," the Canon pointed out, "it wasn't too difficult to make the varsity at Kings. There were only 110 boys and 18 girls."

"How did you happen to go into the priesthood?" we asked the Bishop-Elect.

"Well," he replied, "it came about very naturally. My father was always active in our church and served on the vestry for many years. I was in the choir and in various youth groups. Then, too, our rector encouraged me to go into the priesthood."

It was quite a departure for a member of the Wetmore family to go into the priesthood, for the men of the family had been mostly teachers. He became the first priest in the family's direct line since the Rev. James Wetmore, who was rector of Christ Church in Rye, N. Y., from 1723 to 1760.

It was in 1939 that Canon Wetmore was ordained to the priesthood. He was a curate for two years and a rector for six years before becoming connected with the General Board of Religious Education of the Anglican Church of Canada in 1947. He was with the board for six years, the last two as assistant general secretary.

One day in 1953 he received a letter from the Rev. Dr. John Heuss, now rector of Trinity Parish and at that time chairman of the Diocese's Department of Christian Education.

"Would he consider becoming director of the Department?"

The proposal came as a complete surprise, for Canon Wetmore had not seen Dr. Heuss for two years. But the two men had known each other for six years, having met while Dr. Heuss was director of the National Council's Department of Christian Education. In 1951 they had spent a week together while Canon Wetwore was an observer for the Anglican Church of Canada at the national offices of Christian Education in Greenwich, Conn.

And that is how Canon Wetmore happened to come to the Diocese of New York, following an ancestor who had been in the Diocese's area nearly 200 years before.

Soon he will mark another milestone, becoming a suffragan bishop. The family will probably continue to live in their present home, and the head of the household will probably continue to be away from home a great deal. One thing will change though. The Wetmore family will be even more proud, for, as little Mary put it, "Daddy's going to be a bishop!"

Parishioner Stands For Holy Communion

Thomas McQuade is the only parishioner at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan, who must stand to receive Holy Communion. He's a hemophiliac. In other words, his blood won't coagulate properly; the slightest bump anywhere on his body can cause internal hemorrhaging. To protect his legs he wears heavy braces which prevent him from kneeling at the altar.

For the past several weeks, his church has been appealing for blood donors to replace the amount he has had to use this past year. Ever since Mr. McQuade became a communicant at Heavenly Rest 19 years ago, parishioners have helped keep a ready supply of blood on hand.

Although response for donors in the past has been very high, the number has recently decreased, possibly due to the busy Christmas season.

Anyone who would like to donate may do so by making an appointment at the Red Cross, 323 Lexington Ave., (MU 9-1000), and contributing to the Heavenly Rest unit of the bank.

Canon Wetmore New Suffragan

The Rev. Canon J. Stuart Wetmore, director of the Department of Christian Education, has been elected a suffragan bishop of the Diocese of New York. His election took place at a special meeting of the Convention of the Diocese held December 15 in Synod House.

As a suffragan bishop, he will be an assistant to the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York. The Diocese now has one suffragan bishop, the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton.

Before Canon Wetmore may be consecrated, approval must be received from a majority of the diocesan standing committees and from a majority of the bishops having jurisdiction in the United States. The actual date of consecration will be set by the Rt. Rev. Arthur C. Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop.

Canon Wetmore's election came at 5:30 on the seventh ballot, climaxing a convention which began at 10:00. Most of the morning was taken up with nominating and seconding speeches. The first ballot was taken just before a luncheon recess; and the results of this ballot were announced when the convention resumed at 1:30.

There were five candidates, four put up by the Committee for the Nomination of Bishops and one from the floor. Those nominated by the nominating committee were: Canon Wetmore, the Rev. John A. Bell, rector of the Church of the Incarnation, Manhattan; the Rev. Dillard H. Brown, Jr., rector of St. Luke's, Washington, D. C.; and the Rev. Dr. Albert A. Chambers, rector of the Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan. Nominated from the floor was the Ven. John M. Burgess, archdeacon of the Diocese of Massachusetts.

About 750 clerical and lay delegates attended the convention, though laymen voted as parish and mission delegations rather than as individuals. On the first ballot, the total clerical vote was 261 and the vote of the lay delegations 165.

EDITOR'S NOTE — The following is a statement made by the Rev. Canon J. Stuart Wetmore concerning his election to the office of Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York.

I am both humbled and delighted by the decision of the Convention and would like my first word to be one of thanks to the clergy and laity for the trust and confidence their voting displayed. In the days that lie ahead I probably will have frequent opportunity to remind myself and you that I was elected not primarily because of my own desire but because of your registered vote and choice. I hope the time will never come that any of us will have cause to regret our action.

To Bishop Donegan and to Bishop Boynton I pledge my sincere cooperation and loyalty. We have worked closely together for the past six years, and it gives me great pride to be chosen to work with them more closely still.

I firmly believe that I was chosen not because of any personal quality or accomplishment but because of prevailing forces already working in the Diocese which caused the Convention to vote as it did. I am so bold as to think I know what some of these prevailing forces are, and am indiscreet enough to dare to mention some of them.

One force easily identified is the force that is cutting across the lines that usually have divided our clergy. In the days and weeks before the election, groups motivated along the lines of the traditional clergy groups have been active. The result of this present election clearly shows that new lines are developing and old lines have already begun to fade. It shows that already there prevails in this Diocese a force which is creating a new unity—a unity fashioned out of catholicism on the one hand which has less patience with the exclusiveness of party or the limitations of outward practice, and evangelism on the other hand which is based on a high doctrine of the Church. I dedicate myself to the fostering of this unity and live with the holy hope that this new unity can provide leadership to the Church not only in this Diocese but in the country.

A second prevailing force is the supreme importance of the pastoral ministry and the importance of personal relationships in the manner in which the Church meets to plan and carry out its work.

In particular, clergy are lonely people; their lives are so much caught up in the problems of others that they frequently postpone reaching out to the help they ought to be receiving for their own problems. Yet, they need to receive this help, and are ready to turn to those who are able to give it. I dedicate myself to that openness and availability our busy clergy need.

One more prevailing force: the growing conviction that a Diocese is essentially a Bishop and his people gathered together in parishes and missions. The pattern of delegated authority—from Bishop to clergy and laity and from congregations to delegates to Conventions—is a pattern that quickly identifies the local congregation as the basic corporate unit of the Church. All else that exists, whether it be convocational, diocesan or national structure, exists to enable the local congregation to see its task clearly and undertake it in faith and courage with increasing skill.

Historic Papers To Be Catalogued, Bound Into Books

Historians of Colonial America will, in the near future, have a new source of information. A valuable collection of over 2,000 letters and other documents exchanged between American clergymen and the Bishop of London will be completely catalogued and indexed.

Known as the Fulham Papers because they were for many years housed at Fulham Palace, residence of the Bishops of London, the collection is packed in forty cardboard boxes. The letters contain information about local Colonial population, trouble with dissenters and Indian unrest. One letter signed by a Narragansett Indian chief from Rhode Island pleads to King George to send his people a "pious and discreet clergyman."

The man chosen to carry out the task of sorting the documents is Dr. William W. Manross, librarian and lecturer in church history at the Philadelphia Divinity School. He has been granted a two-year leave of absence to complete the job. Funds for the project, sponsored by General Theological Seminary, will go toward the repair of damaged papers, their classification, binding them in some 75 volumes, and the publication of a catalogue giving a complete digest of each item.

Historians have known about the Fulham Papers and their importance, but because the loose documents have been unnumbered and without a permanent arrangement their use as a source for research has been limited.

An earlier attempt to list the papers was made in 1908 by C. M. Andrews and F. G. Davenport, but the listings were incomplete because of the discovery of many more papers.

The choir boys of St. Thomas, Manhattan, will present the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "Pirates of Penzance," February 19 and 20 in the gymnasium of the choir School.

Thompson, Priest-in-charge. Backs to camera are Mr. and Mrs. Earl Stratton, of St. Andrew's finance committee.*

Missions and Assisted Parishes Meet With Treasurer, Work on Budgets

"You mentioned a new set of dishes for your parish hall?" Speaking was George Adams, assistant treasurer of the Diocese of New York.

"Yes," replied Earl Stratton, a member of the finance committee from St. Andrew's organized mission in South Fallsburg, "but they're all paid for. The Ladies Guild raised the money."

"Well," said Mr. Adams, "we needn't include that on the statement of needs, then. Now, this next item . . ."

Scenes similar to this were repeated many times during the latter part of November and December, as representatives of 27 missions and assisted parishes met with the archdeacons and the staff of the Treasurer's Office to make financial plans for the coming year.

The meetings, first of their kind in the history of the Diocese, were held at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center in Tuxedo Park. Each of the 27 parishes was asked to attend one of five scheduled evening meetings.

At the beginning of each conference, Archdeacon George F. Brätt, who is in charge of rural missions, called everyone together in the temporary chapel and gave them the background of how missions and assisted parishes received support throughout the history of the Church.

Next, Dr. Theodor Oxholm, Diocesan treasurer, explained that almost the only source of Diocesan funds is the missionary giving of the parishioners of all congregations in the Diocese. "This fact makes members of the Department of Missions trustees of these funds, responsible for their distribution on the basis of proven need," he said.

The Treasurer pointed out that "every assisted church is expected to involve its people in a program of stewardship so that it may truly be said that each member of every mission and assisted parish has made a meaningful gift before outside aid is requested." Then, as in the case of St. Andrew's, South Fallsburg, local church organizations can limit their fund raising efforts to special needs not customarily found in a church budget.

A question period usually followed each presentation. The most frequently asked query was, "What is the difference between the Diocesan assessment and the quota and how are they calculated?"

ASSESSMENT

The Treasurer explained in simple language. "The Diocesan assessment is the tax every church pays for the privilege of being a part of the Episcopal Church; the missionary quota is the goal a congregation is asked to accept for itself as the measure of its concern as a body of Christians."

He continued: "The assessment supports the Episcopate and the Diocesan Convention, as well as the Diocesan share of the General Convention, the Presiding Bishop's expenses and salary, and the budget of the Synod of the Second Province.

QUOTA

"The quota money is used to support the entire missionary program of the church, both in the Diocese and in the field of the National Council."

In calculating the assessment and quota, mathematical formulae based on the operating expenses of each church are used, so that each parish is asked to pay only in proportion to what it spends on itself.

After the presentation, guests were served dinner. Following dinner, separate discussions with each group took place in the various conference rooms of the Center, to help each church prepare its statement of needs.

One member of a three-man team, consisting of Dr. Oxholm, Mr. Adams, and Frederick I. Emery, Jr., assistant to the treasurer, met with each group. Together they sought to iron out various parish problems. Through these conferences each party was able to gain an understanding of the problems faced by the other.

This new method of arriving at budgetary decisions attracted wide interest and curiosity throughout the Diocese. At one of the meetings Bishop Boynton and Archdeacon McEvoy dropped in to see for themselves how it was going.

LETTERS

Letters expressing pleasure in the meetings have been coming back to the Diocese from many groups which participated. Typical is one Archdeacon Brätt received from the Rev. David W. Arnold, priest-in-charge of St. Peter's, Stone Ridge. He wrote, "We came away renewed in the thought that so many of the Diocesan Staff were available to sit down with us and discuss our plans and needs . . ."

If this new method of determining needs appears successful, it may be used again in determining 1961 budgets.

WHO CAME

The missions and parishes that met November 19 were: St. Gregory's, Woodstock; St. Peter's, Stone Ridge; Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac; Christ Church, Patterson; St. Francis of Assisi, Elmsford; and St. Thomas, Amenia Union.

At the second meeting, November 24, were: St. Agnes, Balmville; St. Mark's, Fort Montgomery; and St. John the Divine, Tomkins Cove.

Attending the third session, November 25, were: St. Martha's, North White Plains; St. David's, Highland Mills; St. Anne's, Washingtonville; and Resurrection, Hopewell Junction.

The fourth meeting, December 8, was attended by: St. Paul's, Pleasant Valley; St. Andrew's, New Paltz; Holy Trinity, Highland; Grace Church, Port Jervis; St. Augustine's, Yonkers; All Saints, Valley Cottage; and St. John's - in - the - Wilderness, St. Johns.

At the final session, December 9, were: St. Francis', Sloatsburg; St. Andrew's, South Fallsburg; and St. Mark's, Chelsea.

"Donald The Arctic" Visits Manhattan

"Donald the Arctic" is an unusual way for a Bishop to sign his official letters, but the Rt. Rev. Donald Ben Marsh, Bishop of the Arctic for the Anglican Church of Canada, is an unusual prelate. In the course of his 33 years in Eskimo territory, the Bishop has played a variety of roles — carpenter, electrician, school teacher, doctor, navigator, weather forecaster, dog handler, hunter and cook.

Last month Bishop Marsh was guest preacher at St. James', Manhattan. In a press conference after the service, the Bishop described the impact of modernization on the Eskimos. They tend to live around the trading posts rather than the nomadic existence they led before. Eskimos are learning trades and are beginning to earn their living in fields other than hunting and fishing.

Bishop Marsh

The Diocese of the Arctic covers more than a million square miles. There are about 12,000 Eskimos living in the territory and 82% of them belong to the Anglican Church. Bishop Marsh, who has his office in Toronto, spends more than six months a year traveling among the Eskimos. His modes of transportation include planes, tractors, dog sleds and his own two feet.

Bishop Marsh was born in England. He originally wanted to do missionary work in Africa's Gold Coast, but was sent to the Arctic instead. First stationed at Eskimo Point in 1926, he later became Archdeacon of Baffin Island and Archdeacon of Aklavik. He was elected Bishop of the Arctic in 1950, succeeding the late Bishop Archibald Flemming, who was the first Bishop of the Arctic, and the first Bishop to append "the Arctic" to his Christian name.

What's it like . . .

To Play God

Basil Rathbone in "J.B." Here he plays Nickles (the devil), a role which he recently assumed after many performances as Mr. Zuss (God).

And Then Switch To The Devil's Role?

"What's it like to play God and then switch to the devil's role?"

The man to whom we directed this question was Basil Rathbone, who played Mr. Zuss in "J. B." for 144 performances on Broadway and then took over the part of Nickles. The Pulitzer Prize-winning play, which is based on the Book of Job, is now on a national tour after its highly successful Broadway run.

"Well, in the first place," the tall, lean veteran performer replied to our question, "the roles are not those of God and the devil. Mr. Zuss and Nickles are only actors who take on the roles of God and the devil to dramatize their personal disagreement about the meaning of suffering. I have never felt as if I were playing God or the devil, so the transition was not difficult. My reason for changing was simple. Nickles is a more challenging part."

Though Mr. Rathbone is not of the school of actors who "live their parts," he has been deeply impressed by his association with "J. B." In his 40 years on the professional stage, "J. B." has stimulated and moved him as profoundly as any play in which he has acted.

This is not hard to understand after you have talked with him for a few minutes, for Basil Rathbone, an active member of St. James', Manhattan, is obviously a man who thinks much about life and its meaning.

Audiences, too, have been singularly moved by "J. B." Dozens of people have visited Mr. Rathbone's dressing room after the play to discuss its meaning. Some of them have been in tears, the actor reports.

Explaining the drama's impact, Mr. Rathbone speaks of the identification that the members of the audience make with the character J. B.

"There is a little of J. B. in us all. What man has not cried out, in times of extreme stress, 'Why does it have to happen to me?' "

Not all people have been enthusiastic about "JB," however. The clergy has been critical on occasion, Mr. Rathbone says.

"I have talked to many clergymen of all denominations. While they like the play as a dramatic performance, many of them object to the stress laid on the devil's side of the argument. The devil has too good a part, they say.

"This criticism is unrealistic, for the devil does have a good part —in all of life. The arguments he puts forth in 'J. B.' are as old as the devil himself. Clergymen must recognize that people do ask questions like those posed by the devil."

Speaking quickly and with a crisp English accent, Mr. Rathbone asserted that some clergy seem to fear that people will be won over by the devil's arguments. Yet, he adds, not one person has told him that their faith in God has been shaken by the play. Many have said that it has been strengthened.

"I am afraid that many clergymen do not credit the people with enough intelligence."

St. Bartholomew's To Mark 125th Year

St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, celebrates it's 125th anniversary this month. Bishop Donegan will preach the sermon January 17, at the 11:00 service.

Throughout the week there will be several commemorative activities. The Parish Anniversary Dinner will be held Monday, January 18, at the Waldorf-Astoria. The guest speaker will be the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Presiding Bishop Emeritus.

On Wednesday night, January 20, Jack H. Ossewaarde, organist and choirmaster, will conduct the choir and a 50-piece orchestra in a rarely heard choral work by Beethoven, the "Missa Solemis."

Thursday night, January 21, historical exhibits depicting events in the life of St. Bartholomew's will be shown during a reception in the Community House.

The concluding event will be a service of Holy Communion on Sunday, January 24. The rector, the Rev. Terence J. Finlay, will preach.

Overflow

St. Mary's Launches Expansion Program

At age 85 or so, most parishes have settled down to a gentle, unexciting routine. And so had St. Mary's in quiet, rural Mohegan Lake. Scattered parishioners and occasional summer visitors liked its quiet charm and they always had a good choice of pews in which to sit.

Then suddenly, all heaven broke loose. Developers put up homes—people bought them—and practically every week a new family came to St. Mary's. They were not only Episcopalians; many had not been affiliated with any church. Today, 179 families with 230 children of Sunday School age attend St. Mary's . . . a church with a seating capacity of 120.

In September, St. Mary's purchased a sizeable piece of property adjoining the church. Originally it was the campus of the old Mohegan Lake School. Some of this property, including lake frontage, will be sold, leaving the church ample room for parking and new buildings. An extension of the present church building and construction of an additional classroom building, which will get underway in the spring, will double the capacity of the parish.

Ever since its organization by a handful of parishioners in 1867, St. Mary's has been self-supporting. Parishioner response to the current expansion budget demonstrates that its people really care about St. Mary's and feel a responsibility to the new people who are still moving into the area.

The Rev. Joseph L. Germeck, rector, has served St. Mary's for 25 years. Recently, the Rev. Frank C. Leeming was named assistant. He is also headmaster of nearby St. Peter's School.

St. Mary's present church building was started in 1867. It was designed by James William Martens, an architect who was a summer resident of nearby Shrub Oak. The building is said to be a copy of a medieval church Mr. Martens had admired in England. The new extension will retain the simple charm of the original building.

Fellowship Hears Talks On Delinquency

The Young People's Fellowship of St. John's, New Rochelle, and St. Luke's, Eastchester, Tuckahoe, recently held joint meetings on juvenile delinquency.

At the first meeting, Judge John Warren Hill, presiding justice of the Domestic Relations Court of the City of New York, gave the young people the court's point of view concerning juvenile delinquency.

During the second session, Douglas MacDonald, principal of Eastchester High School, moderated a panel discussion between the young people and their parents.

In the final meeting, Mrs. Emily B. Gould, director of the Westchester Branch of the Youth Consultation Service, stressed the importance of the family unit in the prevention of juvenile delinquency.

All the meetings were held in the parish house of St. Luke's.

Last month, before the new Suffragan Bishop was elected, St. Matthew's, Bedford, announced that he will be visiting the parish for Confirmation next June 12. That's what we call real advance scheduling.

Music Only An Enhancement

Should Not Distract

By: ALEC WYTON
Organist and Master of Choristers,
Cathedral of St. John the Divine

Music in corporate worship is both enormously important and completely unnecessary. It is perfectly possible for a congregation to make an act of corporate witness without the aid of music in any form. But if music is to be used, it must be, in the very best sense of the word, an enhancement of the worship and not a distraction from it.

Alec Wyton

The function of music in corporate liturgical worship is to take the worshipper out of the plane of everyday communications, to raise him to a level of receptivity at which he can approach Almighty God with a zeal and fervor befitting the presence of the King of Kings. Since, quite evidently, words are the most commonly accessible means of uniting a congregation in the direction of its thoughts, the music must always be the handmaid of these words and never the center of interest in itself.

This immediately imposes a heavy discipline on those responsible for music in worship. The music must be the finest of its kind, capable of the closest critical scrutiny which can be applied to it; it must be in every sense a fitting setting of the words, avoiding at all costs the danger of using the words merely as the vehicle of the composer's skill. It must be in keeping with the spirit of the liturgy, possessing reasonable awareness of the theology underlying the words to which it is set. It must be within the power of a congregation and choir to sing it well, so that no embarrassment either by the under or over-realization of a choir or congregation's ability shall be evident in its performance.

The achievement of all this will depend upon an understanding between clergy and musicians as to the role of music in worship, and the particular aim of a parish in the matter of its liturgical worship. A musician left entirely to his own discretion or, on the other hand, controlled to such an extent that the freedom of his artistic utterance is utterly inhibited, will be in no position to make a significant contribution to public worship. The ideal requires that an organist and choirmaster know something of theology and liturgical practice, and have an understanding of the history of the church, so that he may know precisely how certain things came to be done as they are. On the other hand, every clergyman should have an understanding of the part which music can play in corporate worship, and see to it that everything is done to make possible the realization of this potential in his own parish.

Quality has nothing to do with size or complexity. A simple hymn sung in unison by a small group of people doing the very best they know under careful leadership can be as moving as a performance of a great symphony or choral work by a group of highly trained professionals. If corporate worship is the offering of the best of which we are capable to God, in His service, then the function of music needs to be most carefully considered. In the last analysis, surely, worship requires neither words nor music, and when either of these is called into play, most serious responsibilities are involved.

Manhattan Teenagers Visit Massachusetts

A group of teenagers from Trinity Parish's St. Christopher's Chapel, Manhattan, were recently guests of the Diocese of Massachusetts. Twenty-seven of them traveled by bus to Boston where they took in the historical sights, visited the Church of Our Redeemer, Lexington, for lunch and went on to Grace Church, Newton, for supper and a service of Evening Prayer. All this activity was crowded into a single Saturday. They arrived back in Manhattan around midnight.

Special Service On Atomic Energy

A special service on the peacetime uses of atomic energy will be held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Sunday, January 10.

The program, which will be held during the 4:00 o'clock Evensong, will have the Rev. Canon Charles Martin as principal speaker. Canon Martin, head of St. Alban's School of the Washington Cathedral, is a member of the Committee for a Nuclear Reactor for St. Paul's University and St. Luke's Hospital, Tokyo. He was one of the originators of the plan whereby the Episcopal Church is donating a reactor to the two Japanese institutions.

The special service in the Cathedral will be in observance of "The Church in Human Affairs Sunday." This year's observance, designated by the Presiding Bishop, deals with atomic energy. Bishop Donegan has set forth a special prayer concerning the observance:

"Almighty God, who didst send thy most dear Son that the world through him might be redeemed; Grant, we beseech thee, that his mystical Body, the Church, may so continue his redeeming work, that all of the knowledge and power which have been revealed to the mind of man and made subject to his control may be turned to the healing of the nations, and thus prosper the affairs of the whole human family; through the same thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

The program has been arranged by the Bishop to help offset public fear about the potentials of atomic power. The Church's role in and attitude toward atomic energy will be one of the topics discussed by Canon Martin.

In addition to Canon Martin's sermon, there will be several exhibits in the the Cathedral. One of these exhibits will be a model of the Indian Point, N. Y., nuclear power plant. Franklin E. Vilas, a member of the Department of Christian Social Relations will explain operation of the plant and answer questions about it.

The Rev. Lanier Named To Head New Council

The Rev. Sidney Lanier, curate of St. Thomas, Manhattan, has been named to head the newly-created Council on Religious Drama in Manhattan. The council is part of the Protestant Council of New York.

According to Mr. Lanier, who has been on television and taken part in staging church plays, the council will be a central exchange for ideas and information. "There are many Protestant churches which put on plays in Manhattan," Mr. Lanier said recently, "and there are many more who would like to." By pooling information, churches wishing technical advice can receive it from the council.

The Rev. Dr. John Ellis Large, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan, has been elected a trustee of the Episcopal Radio-TV Foundation, which has headquarters in Atlanta, Ga. The foundation finances, produces, promotes and distributes Episcopal programs for radio and television.

Did You Know?

Why do we use x's at the end of letters to symbolize kisses? It began with the custom of using the sign of St. Andrew, or St. Andrew's cross, in pledge of good faith when signing legal documents. The emblem was named for the saint who died on an x-shaped crucifix, and a document was considered valid only after the signer affixed the mark of St. Andrew and kissed it as a guaranty of authenticity. In time the original meaning of the ceremony was forgotten, and the cross associated only with the kiss.

Unusual Ceremony For 500 Foster Parents

Over 500 foster parents renewed their dedication to give care to homeless children during an unusual service recently at St. George's, Manhattan.

The dedication ceremony was written especially for the occasion by the Rev. Carleton Schaller, Jr., assistant minister. Mr. Schaller is a member of the Riverdale Children's Association, which cooperated in the ceremony. The service was open to foster parents of all Protestant faiths and is believed to be the first of its kind ever held.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Hayden N. Smith, vice president of the Association's board of trustees, presented length-of-service awards to seven foster parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Galbraith Cook, of Yonkers, hold the distinction of being foster parents for 25 years. They are still active foster parents and have five children between the ages of seven and seventeen living with them now. Mr. Cook is 79 years of age. Mrs. Cook is 66.

Several of the Cook's grown-up children still come "home" to visit. One young man reared by the Cooks returned from the service after World War II to make his home with them for several years before striking out on his own.

Other awards went to: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jones, Brooklyn, 24 years; Mr. and Mrs. Essie Collins, Brooklyn, 20 years; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Morris, Bronx, 19 years; Mrs. Harriet Wade, Bronx, 17 years; Mr. and Mrs. Hans Browne, Queens, 16 years; and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Miller, Bronx, 15 years.

Founded in 1836 as the Colored Orphan Asylum, the Riverdale Children's Association is now one of the largest inter-racial foster home care agencies in the city, giving care to Protestant children referred by the Department of Welfare and the children's courts.

1960 Book Choice Is Written By Poughkeepsie Rector

Receiving The Word of God, by the Rev. Dr. Robert E. Terwilliger. Morehouse - Barlow, $2.75. Reviewed here by the Rev. Dr. James W. Kennedy, rector of the Church of the Ascension, Manhattan.

Variety adds considerable allure to the Bishop of New York's annual book choice. Over the last eight years the choices have ranged from a hard hitting evaluation of "Communism and Christ" to the 1960 choice, "Receiving the Word of God." The author is the rector of Christ Church, Poughkeepsie, and is chairman of the Division of College Work of the Diocese. Robert E. Terwilliger has an earned doctor's degree but writes like a pastor.

Dr. Terwilliger

As one reads this book there is a sense of assurance that the author knows far more than he tells you, and that every statement is backed up by a complete grasp and understanding of the concept he writes about. It is refreshing to find a new approach to Christian doctrine. "Receiving the Word of God" is a new approach, with the emphasis on the receiving end, where most of the people are. Dr. Terwilliger plows a straight furrow through a large open field which is "the Word of God." He brings this Word to life in the person of Jesus, in the Bible, in the Liturgy, in preaching, and finally in the individual Christian.

This book is brief, well written, and gives a basic review of the underlying doctrine of the Person of Christ. As I read the page proofs I circled many pertinent phrases which give new insight into old truths. In one paragraph, Dr. Terwilliger talks about "the profundity" of our conception of the human predicament and he says, "We have realized more deeply not only our individual but also our social involvement in fallenness. That is why the view of man in the Bible has come to satisfy the need for self-understanding of so many who have returned to the Christian faith."

I was glad to discover this phrase which I think is so true — "The recurrence of the seasons is a tremendous device for receiving the Word of God." Would that what Dr. Terwilliger said about a sermon were always true — "A sermon is an event. It is only secondarily a composition." I go along with him in concluding that, "receiving the Word of God is the most important experience in life. As it comes to us in its promised ways, as we truly accept its coming, every present moment of our life has meaning. We experience now by faith what we shall know by sight when we shall meet Him face to face."

He is a trustee of the United Seamen's Service, a director of the Greater New York Fund, chairman of the board of the Seamen's Church Institute, a director of the YMCA, a trustee of St. Luke's Hospital and the Church Pension Fund, and a warden of the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

Choirboy Stars on TV, Plays "Oliver Twist"

A combination of events and natural attributes started 12-year-old Frederick Clark on his way to an acting career.

Frederick, who is enrolled in the Choir School of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, played the title role in Dickens' "Oliver Twist," presented last month on the televised "Dupont Show of the Month."

The story began when Alec Wyton, headmaster and master of choristers, received a call from Talent Associates. They explained they were looking for someone to play the role of Oliver and wondered if there were any English boys attending the Choir School. Mr. Wyton sent two boys from the school to be auditioned along with boys from other places. Frederick got the role.

What the play director was looking for was a boy who who looked and sounded English and Frederick had those attributes, even though he was born in this country. His mother is English. In addition, Frederick had somewhat the appearance of a waif, because he had managed to get out of having his regular haircut.

Frederick's only acting experience had been in Boy Scout plays. But, according to his mother, Mrs. Phylis Clark, he has always liked to mimic other people.

Nuclear Reactor Is Slated As A Gift For Japan

The Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur C. Lichtenberger, signed a contract last month for the purchase of a nuclear reactor as a gift from the Episcopal Church to St. Paul's University, Tokyo. The signing cermony marked the climax of a campaign to raise $360,000 (cost of the reactor), of which more than $300,000 has been received in cash and pledges.

The reactor will be the first privately-operated one in Japan and will be used for medical, research and educational purposes.

"This is not simply a venture in scientific research," Bishop Lichtenberger stated. "The theological basis for this gift is to be found in the doctrine of creation. Nuclear energy is part of God's created world. As his people, we are concerned with the whole of God's creation. Here are great benefits that can be made to many people."

The gift consists of a Triga reactor and a building to house it. The building, to be erected by the Fuji Electrical Company, will contain office and laboratory space, plus equipment for producing radioisotopes produced in the reactor.

4 Elected to Board Of Mission Society

Four new members have been elected to the board of Managers of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, according to an announcement by Bishop Donegan, who is president of the Society.

They are: Peter Darlington, a partner in the investment firm of Hill Darlington and Co.; John C. Glidden, a member of Stone and Webster Securities Corp.; John David Lannon, department manager at Macy's; and John P. Lee, sales manager for South and Central America, Aluminium Limited.

The Episcopal City Mission Society is a 128-year-old major religious and charitable agency of the Diocese of New York.

Guild Is Responsible For 33 Altars in N. Y.

Most Altar Guilds have responsibility for the altars of only one church; but the Altar Guild of the Episcopal City Mission Society cares for the altars of 33. They're chapels in the city and state institutions that are served by chaplains of the Mission Society.

For over 50 years, the Mission Society Altar Guild has provided elements, candles, altar linens and hangings, vestments, and chapel appointments. These are used in chapels in hospitals, penitentiaries, reformatories and old age homes.

Each of the chapels is served by a chapter of the Guild. Members are women who live near the chapel they serve. Behind these separate chapters stands the Altar Guild as a whole, ready to provide the materials needed.

Membership in the Guild is open to all Episcopal Churchwomen, whether members of their own parish Altar Guild or not. Meetings are held monthly from October to May on the second Tuesday at 11:00 o'clock. Meeting place is St. James Parish Hall, 71st Street and Madison Avenue, Manhattan. Inquires may be addressed to: New York Altar Guild, Inc., Room 2751, 120 Broadway, New York 5, N.Y.

"TO EXTEND HER WITNESS..."

Our cover picture this month shows Bishop Donegan about to be admitted to the new church house at St. Paul's in the Bronx. This colorful scene was enacted at the dedication of the new building on January 24.

The completion of this first of the projects under the 175th Anniversary program is of tremendous significance. The new church house, and the other projects presently under way, are the result of the concern of the individual about the program of the Church within the geographical boundaries of the Diocese.

These projects are not the product of the Missionary Quota, that little understood mechanism by which the Diocese accumulates funds to carry out its program, after giving more than half to the work of the Church beyond the Diocese. These projects are possible because more than 25,000 families and individuals have heeded the Bishop's summons to prayer and action at the 1956 Diocesan Convention. His words at that time are worth repeating:

> "The fact is that we are not keeping pace with the growing population and changed conditions. All over the Diocese — in cities and suburbs, in newly-established communities — we need new churches, rectories, parish houses, if we are to do the task entrusted by our Lord to our branch of the Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church.
> ". . . In this time of unparalleled opportunity the Church cannot be laggard in rising to her responsibility to extend her witness . . . The opportunity will not last too long.
> "It is now we must act!"

Most parishes have by this time taken some action by which their people will have a part in this tremendous endeavor. It is to be hoped that those who have thus far delayed participation will soon join the ranks of those who see this 175th Anniversary Fund as a great opportunity to do a most important work.

Most congregations are using church buildings which they inherited from those who walked before them. They can do no less than to have a significant part in providing much needed facilities for less fortunate congregations and for those who will come after them.

St. Paul's new church house is a significant milestone in the life of the Diocese of New York.

THE COVER — Bishop Donegan strikes the door of the new church house at St. Paul's, Bronx, during dedication service. To his left is the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, archdeacon, and the Rev. Edward B. Geyer, Jr., who acted as the Bishop's chaplain.

St. Paul's New Church House Is Dedicated

First In Urban Phase Anniversary Program

A new church house built entirely with 175th Anniversary Fund money was dedicated last month at St. Paul's in the Bronx. It is the first project to be completed under the urban phase of the Fund's program.

About 275 persons attended the dedication service, which was held on Sunday afternoon, January 24. Bishop Donegan performed the dedication and preached the sermon. The Rev. Gerald V. Barry, dean of the Bronx Convocation and rector of Christ Church, Riverdale, and the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, Bronx Convocation co-chairman for the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign, also took part in the service.

Erected at a cost of $100,000, the new church house is a three-story and basement brick stucture. It houses the church offices, apartments for two clergymen and their families, living quarters for the sexton, and an adult lounge for 40 persons. The present 110-year-old rectory will be demolished.

Priest-in-charge of St. Paul's is the Rev. Samuel Snodgrass, who was unable to attend the dedication service because of illness. The Rev. E. B. Geyer, Jr., who will soon become Fr. Snodgrass' assistant, acted as the Bishop's chaplain.

The 175th Anniversary Fund was established in 1957 to raise money for a construction, expansion and modernization program in the Diocese. Total cost of the planned projects is $4,000,000.

The urban phase of the Fund's program is directed at modernization and expansion of present facilities and the construction of new facilities in areas where housing projects are being built.

St. Paul's is within the area where the City will build the Gouverneur Morris Houses, providing homes for 1,600 families. Most of the buildings surrounding the church are being demolished. When the housing project is completed, St. Paul's and a junior high school will be the only present buildings left standing in the area. A large recreational area will surround the church.

Bishop, Psychiatrist Speak at First Conference on the Pastoral Ministry

The role of a clergyman as a pastor and counselor was highlighted last month at the first Bishop's Conference on the Pastoral Ministry. The conference, attended by 40 clergymen of the Diocese, was held January 20-21 at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park.

Speakers at the conference, which lasted an evening and the following day, were Bishop Donegan and Dr. John D. Goss, Jr., staff psychiatrist at Mount Sinai Hospital.

Both speakers emphasized that pastoral counseling differs greatly from other types of counseling because of the profession of the counselor.

"People come to you because you are uniquely qualified to counsel in certain areas," Dr. Goss remarked. "They come to you because you are a priest."

Addressing himself to the same topic, Bishop Donegan declared: "Sometimes I get the impression that many of us need to accept ourselves and the unique opportunity we have to carry out the work of the pastoral ministry as clergymen and not as advisors, psychiatrists, analysts or psychological counselors."

The Bishop also pointed out the need for a pastor to minister to his entire congregation.

"Even though you are forced sometimes to leave the ninety-nine and seek after the lost one, you cannot forget your continuing responsibility to be the shepherd for all your people."

Calling for closer relationships between pastor and congregation, Bishop Donegan declared that, "Being a pastor is being a friend. You cannot be an effective pastor unless you are naturally, genuinely friendly."

Dr. Goss pointed out the need for a clergyman to devote the time and interest required to attempt a real understanding of the problems of a parishioner who comes to him.

"Most mistakes in pastoral counseling result from a lack of concern rather than from a lack of training."

What People Expect

Dr. Goss, who led the conference after the Bishop's talk the previous evening, declared that people, "don't come for 'pastoral counseling' in those terms, but for relief. The person expects some change to come about."

These changes Dr. Goss listed as:

1. Receiving something to add to himself (sacraments, advice).
2. Having something taken away (guilt, sins, loneliness, anxiety).
3. Having something done to him (praying over him, laying on of hands).

Interview Guideposts

On the subject of the interview, Dr. Goss set up several guideposts. Among these were: (1) proceed from the known and familiar to the unknown; (2) insure sufficient privacy; (3) make sure that your meeting place is a comfortable one; (4) speak quietly and move slowly; (5) be a good listener and observe signs; (6) demonstrate to the person that you are on his side; (7) be sure that you make clear the next step after the interview—don't leave the person dangling.

Dr. Goss cautioned pastoral counselors not to concentrate solely on the particular problem the person originally complains of.

"People are often too embarrassed to come right out with their real problem, which may be very intimate. It is your task to make it easier for them to speak of this real problem."

The value of enabling a person to work out his own problems was emphasized by Dr. Goss.

"As a respected advisor once told me, we all like to be helpful, but we need to be more modest about what we can accomplish or should attempt. We like to do something, to tell people things that are definite. It makes us feel better. However, it doesn't build up the person's muscles nearly so well as encouraging him to attempt solutions himself. Power is tempting, especially the power to help. Consider it a warning signal if you are feeling challenged in the counseling situation to denounce and fight evil on the counselee's behalf."

Referrals

On the subject of referrals, Dr. Goss cautioned clergymen to seek immediate outside help should the person speak of suicide or other forms of violence.

"You might think that a person is bluffing because he openly speaks of suicide, but a surprisingly large number are not. It is actually not possible to foretell."

After a referral for any reason, Dr. Goss said, the clergyman should not feel that his job is done. He should maintain close contact with the case, "if only to let the person know that his priest really cares about him." Along this same line, Dr. Goss called for a closer relationship between priest and psychiatrist. "A team operation is much more effective than either working alone."

In addition to being on the staff of Mount Sinai Hospital, Dr. Goss has a private practice, with his office at 123 E. 83rd St., Manhattan. A native of San Diego, Calif., he is 36 years old, married, and the father of a seven-year-old son.

An active churchman, Dr. Goss is a communicant of Trinity Parish and attends St. Luke's Chapel. For the past five years, he has been a member of the Cathedral Forum on Religion and Psychology, which meets regularly in Cathedral House.

Intent expressions during the Bishop's Conference on the Pastoral Ministry. Lively question and answer periods followed each session of the evening and a day meeting.

The January Bishop's Conference on the Pastoral Ministry is the first of three this year and is the first such conference held in the recent history of the Diocese. Two other conferences, with the same speakers and programs, will be held March 9-10 and March 16-17.

All clergymen of the Diocese were invited to attend one of the three conferences as the guest of the Bishop. Acceptances have been so numerous that all three conferences have been completely booked, with 40 clergymen attending each. The number unable to be accommodated is nearly enough for another conference.

Should the Church Speak Out on Public Issues?

People Should Know Pros, Cons of Issues

By the Rev. R. E. Gary
Vice-chairman of Christian Citizenship Department of Christian Social Relations

Why is the church concerned with public issues? Recent history reveals several motives. Occasionally, there are our own institutional reasons: favored tax considerations. At other times we are concerned with what are commonly regarded as "religious issues," such as legalized bingo or off track betting.

But there is a third reason which occasionally stirs us: support of certain legislation because it is right and just. Strangely enough, we are most likely to muster support from our own members and from the public for the first two reasons rather than for the last. These are commonly regarded as being in our legitimate self-interest or relative to our public role.

But we have uneasy feelings about this attitude. Strict conformity to the self-interest principle or to a "religious" role greatly limits the action of the church in areas affecting the broad common good. In fact, much of the pressure to keep the church limited to a private interest role comes from sources who by virtue of their own political involvement regard this as the church's only legitimate interest in legislative matters.

Besides those who deliberately seek to frustrate any expression of concern for public interest on the part of the church, there are other factors which tend to muffle the voice of the church. Politicians feel that there is no real lay support for public positions taken by church officials or committees. More often than not they are right. We would have to say honestly that our membership generally doesn't even know the interest or concern of the church in a given public issue. And even if they did, there is no real indication that it would make any significant difference to them. We do not vote as Episcopalians, or write letters to legislators as churchmen. This we do in our various roles as citizens, taxpayers, commuters, or organization members. This is as it should be, for we will always have to live and work in society as individuals, with our own particular interests.

The church should take a more active interest in general legislative matters, the author asserts. Here Governor Rockefeller delivers his annual message to a joint session of the legislature on January 6.

There is one important qualification, however. In the midst of all the pressures to satisfy our own personal interests, the voice of conscience—if only a troubled one—must be raised.

It is the vocation of the church to stir this conscience, to encourage its members to give serious thought and study to matters which are of general interest. The opportunity for our people to apply Christian ethics and standards should not be limited to special causes. On the contrary, the church should be wary of involvement with special causes. It should be concerned with the general welfare of our society.

For this reason, your Diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations will seek to confine its public statements to matters which affect everyone in general and no one group in particular. Where a question is not relevant to our common life as citizens, there will and should be a conspicuous public silence. Public posturing by the church on a multitude of questions is a line of easy morality none of us can afford.

On occasion, the Department of Christian Social Relations may speak for itself on certain issues. But it recognizes that it speaks only for itself.

The role of the Department is not to speak for the church but to the church. We consider it our function to inform churchmen about the pros and cons of public questions and to encourage them to make their own judgements on the basis of their Christian background and beliefs.

This informational function of the Department will be implemented by means of kits, booklets, letters and other materials sent to the parishes. Parish groups will be encouraged to study these materials and whatever other materials are available to them from other sources as a basis for open discussion.

The purpose of the Department's program is not opinion molding but opinion awakening. So-called public questions cannot actually be public questions until a great many people are sufficiently interested and informed to make their voices heard.

Cultural and Racial Unity Group to Meet

The first meeting of the board of directors of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity will be held Wednesday and Thursday, February 24 and 25, at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

The first session will be devoted to organizing an executive board and electing an executive secretary.

Thursday, at 2:00 p.m., a regional meeting will be held in conjunction with that of the board of directors. There will be a review of the proceedings at the Raleigh meeting last December, when the society was founded. Implementation of the new society's program will also be discussed.

An evening session will be held at 7:00 p.m. for those in the New York area who are unable to attend the afternoon meeting.

At Thursday Evensong, the Rt. Rev. John P. Crane, Bishop of the Diocese of Indianapolis, will speak about the aims and purposes of the Society.

Over 100 clergy and lay people are expected to attend the two-day meeting.

The meetings are open to anyone. For further information call the Rev. Walter D. Dennis, assistant minister at the Cathedral.

TO THE OWNER OF A LEAKING BUILDING "bids" mean little. Don't let anyone tell you that water infiltration in masonry can be cured with magical "coatings". That's the easy technique employed by itinerant "waterproofers" who attempt to lure you with low prices. The only way to stop leaks and seepage PERMANENTLY is to remove disintegrated mortar from all weak areas and repoint the joints with properly compounded mortar. Rockwell Newman brings to this problem over 38 years experience, plus the skills of highly trained men equipped with modern tools. Our clientele is comprised of people who seek, and are willing to pay fair prices for PERMANENT corrective workmanship. We can prove to you that our charges are ultimately one of the lowest.

57 PERCENT MEET MISSIONARY QUOTA

Fifty-seven percent of the Diocese's parishes, chapels and missions met or exceeded their 1959 Missionary Quota. The total Missionary Quota was $1,009,898, of which $811,671, or 80.37 percent, was met. All figures are as of February 1, 1960.

How are the individual church Missionary Quotas determined? Let's use the 1960 figures as an example.

The National Council Apportionment — the amount the Diocese is asked to give for the national church's 1960 expenses — is $623,028. The 1960 budget of the Diocesan Council, as approved by the 1959 Diocesan Convention, is $512,562. These figures total $1,135,590. This is the total 1960 Missionary Quota of the churches of the Diocese.

The quota assigned to each church is based on what they spend on themselves. Specifically, it is a percentage of the church's average current operating expenses (less clergy salaries and insurance premiums) for the last three years for which figures are available.

Now, how do you figure what this percentage should be? Let's look at the 1960 figures again. The total that has to be raised for the 1960 programs of the National Council and the Diocesan Council is $1,135,590. The total three-year average of the churches' operating expenses was $3,174,608. Each church will have to give 35.8 percent of its operating expenses to raise the needed $1,135,590. So the 1960 Missionary Quota of each church is 35.8 of its average current operating expenses (less clergy salaries and insurance premiums) for the calendar years 1956, 1957 and 1958.

What happens if all the churches don't meet their Missionary Quotas? Who suffers — the Diocese or National Council? Both suffer proportionately.

There's a formula contained in General Convention's Canon 4. It stipulates that, in 1960, 54.9 percent of each church's payment toward its Missionary Quota must go to National Council and the remaining 45.1 percent to the diocese.

As you can see from the figures below, all of the churches did not meet their 1959 quotas. What this meant was that the program of the National Council and that of the Diocese had to be curtailed.

Manhattan Church Adding Pews

The altar of the Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan. Dossal is almost four stories high. Church is adding pews, first such action by a Manhattan church in 35 years.

For the first time in 35 years one of our Manhattan churches is going to be enlarged to accommodate more pews.

The Rev. Hugh McCandless, rector of Epiphany, announced last month that the vestry has authorized a fund-raising campaign and pledged $45,000 themselves to help get it rolling.

The goal has been set for $300,000.

Plans call for the addition of 25 feet at the back of the church in order to seat about 125 more people. The addition will also provide a much needed choir room in the basement.

The history of the Church of the Epiphany is one of vitality and movement. Established in 1833, it was the first free church in New York—that is, no pew rents were charged. It was located in a room over a firehouse and started out with only six adult worshippers, a handful of children, and two prayer books. But it thrived, and within a year a church building was consecrated at 130 Stanton Street.

Twelve years later it became an independent parish, with 250 communicants, 480 Sunday school pupils and 44 teachers.

After the Civil War the character of the neighborhood began to change, and the more prosperous parishioners moved uptown. Finally, in 1893, Epiphany left Stanton Street and merged with the Church of St. John the Baptist at 35th Street and Lexington Avenue. But the neighborhood began to go into a decline as people moved to suburbia. In 1936 the church property was sold and for a few years the parishioners of Epiphany worshipped in St. Thomas Chapel on East 60th Street. During this period they made plans and raised the funds to move to their present site at 74th Street and York Avenue. They were banking on the growth of their new neighborhood and the choice of their new site proved to be a good one. Since the move in 1939, five hospitals have been built in the area, bringing the total to seven.

Although the planners had expected a growth in the population of their neighborhood, they hadn't expected "a population explosion." According to Mr. McCandless, the church's mailing list "is four times what it was 15 years ago; our financial support is three and a half times what it was then; and our congregations have doubled." Many parishioners have no place to sit during the services. Folding chairs line the sides of the church.

The decision of the vestry to initiate a fund-raising campaign is typical of the vigor of the congregation as a whole. Among them are doctors, nurses, sculptors, amateur artists—people with talent and a desire to use it to benefit the church.

Boy Scouts of America Observe 50th Year

50 Units Sponsored By Diocese Churches

The Boy Scouts of America are observing their 50th anniversary this year, with the 50 Scout units sponsored by churches of the Diocese taking part.

During Boy Scout Week, February 7-13, many activities are taking place in communities all over America. The first day of the observance was Scout Sunday. All Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers were asked to attend church in uniform.

Over half of all Scout units chartered by the Boy Scouts of America are sponsored by religious institutions.

Of the church groups, the Methodist Church sponsors the most units. It is followed, in order, by the Roman Catholic, Baptist, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon), and Episcopal.

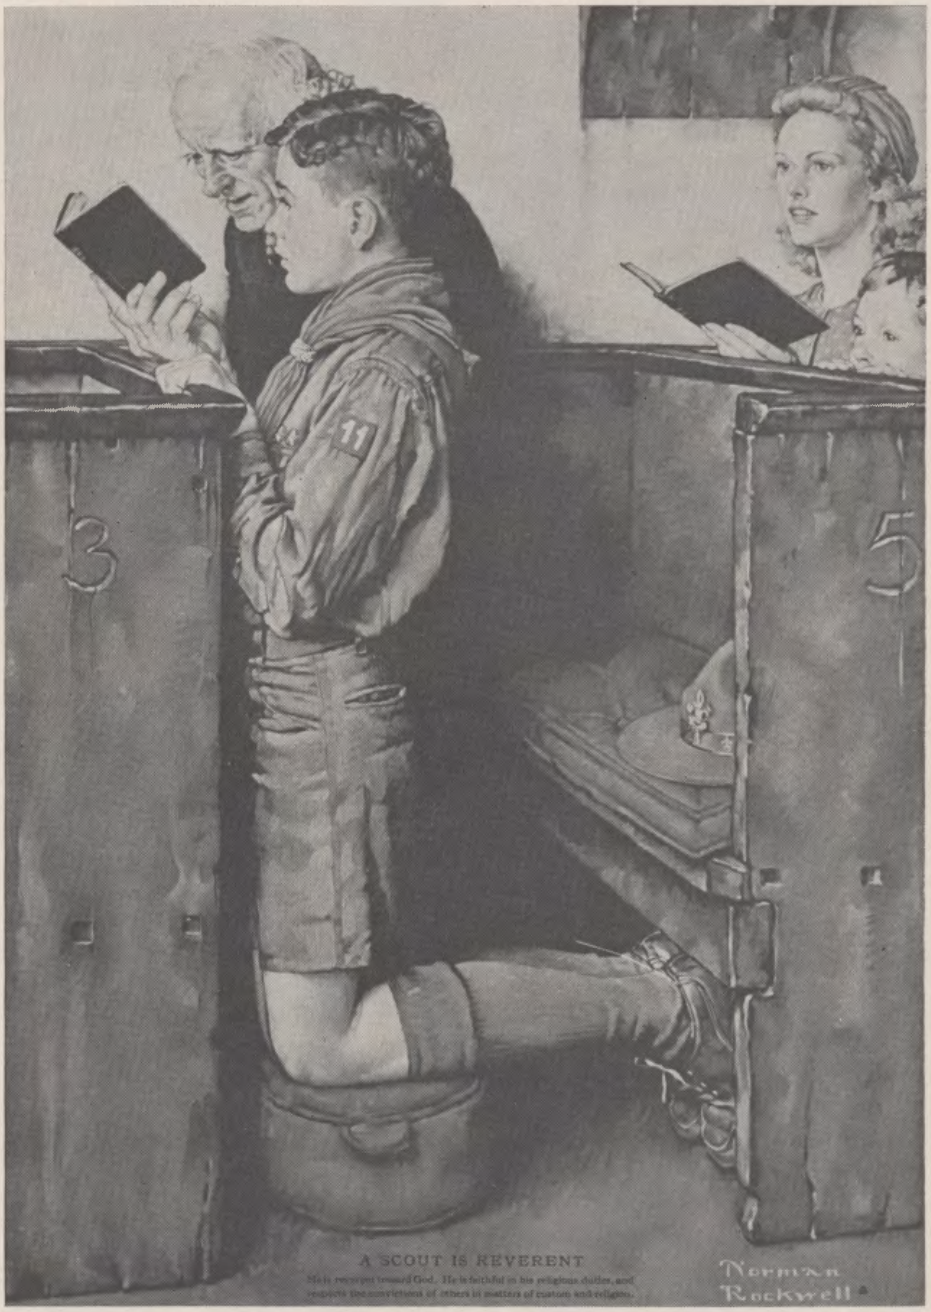
The Diocese of New York has Scout units in only about one quarter of its churches. In an effort to increase this number and to assist existing units, the Department of Christian Education last year organized a Diocesan Committee on Scouting as a part of its Division of Youth.

Head of the committee is the Rev. L. Roper Shamhart, who serves at the Bishop's appointment as the Diocesan Chaplain for Scouting. At present, ten clergymen and ten laymen serve on the committee.

Functions of the Diocesan Committee on Scouting fall into four general categories:

(1) Helping churches establish Scout units.
(2) Assisting churches which have units.
(3) Encouragement of Episcopal priests to serve as chaplains at Scout camps.
(4) Administration of the God and Country Award.

The God and Country Award is centrally administered by the Protestant Committee on Scouting of the Boy Scouts of America. It is not a merit badge. A candidate is instructed by his own clergyman and receives the award in his own church. He must qualify in Christian faith, witness, outreach, citizenship and fellowship.



In a letter to all parochial clergy of the Diocese, the Bishop has written, in part:

"At the request of the Division of Youth of the Diocese, I should like to give my clear approval to the sponsoring of Boy Scout units as a regular part of our work with the youth of this Diocese. Scouting, with its strong emphasis on character, and especially its emphasis on reverence and faithfulness in religious duties, is and can be an excellent program for our youth."

Inquiries regarding Scout work in the Diocese may be sent to Fr. Shamhart at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, 2 East 90th Street, New York, N. Y.

On the Distaff Side . . .

Woman's Council Reports Progress

The Woman's Council of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, still in its infancy, is beginning to show results. All convocation chairmen of the Council have reported either that they have a program in actual operation or that they have completed plans for one.

The Woman's Council was formally organized last November at a luncheon at which Bishop Donegan was the main speaker. Members of the Council will assist chaplains and social workers in hospitals, homes for the aged, prisons and other institutions.

In the Hudson Convocation, Mrs. H. John Wilkins, Jr., and her 25 Council members are meeting with George New, the director of the Elko Lake Camps.

It is to these camps that the City Mission Society sends 1,000 underprivileged boys and girls during the summer. Because of the great number of children attending, the camp is in need of more counselors, more equipment to entertain the children on rainy days, and more linen.

Mrs. Richard Cartwell, chairman of the Dutchess Convocation, reports that her group has already supplied funds for religious literature for Mattewan State Hospital. The group also hopes to assist some of the chaplains working in institutions located in its convocation.

In Richmond Convocation, Mrs. George C. Hartmann and her group have already gotten a Sunday school teacher for the Rev. Prescott L. Laundrie, chaplain at Sea View Hospital. In the mill are plans for parties in the wards and patient visiting.

The Woman's Council in Westchester Convocation is working with the chaplain at Grasslands Hospital and the Westchester County Home. Before they started they attended three training sessions to learn how to be of greater help to the patients.

Fifteen other women of the Westchester Convocation are assisting the Rev. Philip H. Robb, chaplain at the Westfield State Farm. Current project is to find a secretary for him.

According to Mrs. Albert D. Ketchum, chairman of the Bronx Convocation unit, her group is going to devote its energies to the Manhattan State Hospital on Ward's Island.

In the Manhattan Convocation, Mrs. Thomas Clark Pollock is busy organizing her 85 volunteers who are interested in either the Family Service Department of the Mission Society, or assisting at Westfield State Farm, or helping out the chaplains at any one of the institutions in Manhattan.

Three women from Manhattan who are lawyers have volunteered to give legal assistance to inmates at Westfield State Farm.

Correction, Please

In the January issue of The Bulletin we carried an article about the New York Altar Guild, Inc. which serves the Episcopal City Mission Society. In the process of editing, two errors were made.

Meetings are held monthly from October to May on the second Thursday at 11:00 o'clock, not on the second Tuesday.

The article also stated that each of the institutional chapels served by the Altar Guild has its own chapter of the Guild. This is not so. Each chapel has only a chairman, who calls upon the Altar Guild as a whole for assistance. Under a new form of organization, each chapel will have a chairman plus a number of women who live nearby and serve as members of that particular chapel's altar guild.

Membership is open to all women of the Diocese, whether members of their own parish altar guild or not. We urge them to join one of the chapel altar guilds by calling Lehigh 5-4284 in New York City, or Central 2-4275 in Katonah, or by writing to: New York Altar Guild, Inc., Room 2751, 120 Broadway, New York 5, New York.

Attend Youth Seminar

Approximately 60 Youth and College chairmen of the Episcopal Churchwomen from parishes located throughout the Diocese gathered for a seminar in Cathedral House last month.

The aims and needs of the Division of Personnel, Youth and College Work of the Department of Christian Education, were discussed at all levels—national, diocesan and parish. Mrs. Woodson D. Scott, Diocesan chairman, moderated the program and introduced the speakers.

Two of the speakers represented youth work groups which do not come under the Department of Christian Education. They were Mrs. Steven K. Mahon, executive secretary of the Girls Friendly Society of the U. S. A., and William H. Kennedy, executive secretary of the East Coast Committee on Foreign Students.

Among the other speakers were: the Rev. Robert A. Rodie, chairman of the Division of Youth in the Department of Christian Education; the Rev. Howard O. Bingley, chairman of the Camps and Conference Committee in the Department of Christian Education; the Rev. Canon Stuart Wetmore, director of the Department of Christian Education; the Rev. DeWitt Mallary, associate director for College Work; the Rev. Ellsworth E. Koonz, executive secretary for the Unit of Church Vocations; and Miss Olive Mae Mullica, secretary for Personnel and Church Vocations of the National Council.

Churchwomen to Meet March 1, Synod House

The March Diocesan Meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen will be held in Synod House at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, March 1, at 10:00 a.m.

The meeting will be sponsored by the Devotional Life Committee, the Church Periodical Club and the Supply Committee of The Episcopal Churchwomen.

Theme of the meeting is "Into All the World." Miss Vivian Novak, national president of the Church Periodical Club, will talk about the club's work around the world. Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., Diocesan chairman of Supply, will speak on the work of her department.

Another guest speaker will be Miss Elizabeth Falck, who will talk about "The Work of The Church in Japan."

Least Likely Place For a Birthday Party

An unusual place for a birthday party is behind prison walls. But at least twice a month the walls of Westfield State Farm, prison and reformatory for women, echo to the sound of "Happy Birthday."

This is made possible by the Episcopal Churchwomen of Westchester, who drive up to Bedford Hills, where the prison is located, bringing cake, ice cream and punch for the parties.

All the women who have a birthday during the month when a particular party is given are invited. The reason for two parties is that there are two groups of women at the farm—an older group in the prison and a younger group in the reformatory.

There are four hostesses, usually all from the parish which has volunteered to give the party. They serve the food, make small talk and sometimes start up a game.

Each woman is given a small gift—usually something to brighten up her prison uniform or her room. Reaction to the gifts is varied. The older women rarely open them during the party. Instead, they save them to open later. The younger girls, like all young people, can't wait to see what the Churchwomen have brought them.

Originator of the program is Mrs. Raymond A. Youmans, chairman of the Northern Division of Westchester Episcopal Churchwomen. The parties are arranged under the supervision of the Rev. Philip H. Robb, prison chaplain, in conjunction with the prison's recreation department.

Addenda to Westfield

The Episcopal Churchwomen of Westchester don't confine their activities to giving birthday parties at Westfield State Farm (see story at left). For instance, the stained glass windows in the reformatory chapel there were provided from funds donated by the Episcopal Churchwomen.

Also, two religious education courses of twelve weeks each, under the direction of the Rev. Philip H. Robb, are held at the farm. Men and women from Westchester lead the discussions which take place after the instruction.

Mrs. Lionel Nicholsen and Mrs. Arthur Alexander, both from St. Matthew's Church in nearby Bedford, have been running a campaign to collect funds to buy flowers for the two altars at the prison.

St. Matthew's also cooperated with the Bedford Interchurch group to help the state farm get a new organ for one of its chapels.

In Brief . . .

Hadden Memorial Lecture

The Rev. John McG. Krumm, chaplain of Columbia University, will deliver the Hadden Memorial Lecture, sponsored by the New York Altar Guild.

The lecture will be at St. James' Parish Hall, 865 Madison Ave., at 10:45 a.m., Thursday, March 3. It is open to everyone.

Dr. Krumm's topic will be the liturgical movement in Europe.

Summer Vacation

The Rev. J. Jack Sharkey, rector of St. Paul's, Ossining, is on a belated summer vacation. He is making his sixth annual trip to the Missionary District of Haiti, where he is visiting Bishop Voegeli.

He took along boxes of clothing for the poor contributed by members of St. Paul's.

Guest Preacher

The dean of the Harvard Divinity School, the Rev. Samuel H. Miller, was guest preacher at St. George's, Manhattan, on Theological Sunday last month. Dean Miller, a Baptist, is a member of the Commission on the Arts and Worship of the National Council of Churches.

New England Visit

The Rev. Richard M. Louis, assistant minister at Epiphany, Manhattan, is in New England visiting student parishioners enrolled in schools there.

New Organ For Resurrection

Because Louis Watson Alston remembered the Church of the Resurrection in his will, it will be possible for the Manhattan church to purchase a new organ.

Although Mr. Watson was from Baltimore, he remembered the church because of the active interest his daughter, a communicant of Resurrection, has maintained in the church.

New status...

Church of the Divine Love, which recently became an independent parish after being a mission since 1917. Credit for achieving the new status is given to the Rev. David Paul Kern, who has been with the church since 1957, and a stewardship program.

Church Becomes Self-Supporting

The Church of Divine Love, Montrose, has reached an important turning point in its 91-year history. It has become a full-fledged parish—completely self-supporting.

The event was marked recently by an installation ceremony conducted by Bishop Boynton, during which, the Rev. David Paul Kern changed his title from vicar to rector of the church.

Father Kern credits his parishioners for helping the church gain its new status. With the help of the Diocesan Department of Promotion, he taught the ideals of stewardship to his congregation. "Once the parish grasped these ideals," he said, "they clung to them."

Michael Morgan, senior warden of Divine Love, gives much of the credit to the leadership of Father Kern.

The tiny church seated only 95 when Father Kern was appointed its vicar in 1957.

As the ranks of the congregation swelled, Father Kern rearranged the pews so that it now seats 150. "But that still isn't enough room," he said, "we have approximately 235 communicants and I hold two services on Sunday to accommodate everyone."

At the moment, the parish is planning to enlarge the church and build a parish hall.

The church was founded in 1868 by the Rev. Gouveneur Cruger. He was its first rector, serving the church until 1917. Father Kern is its second rector. Why? In 1917 Divine Love became a mission and was served by a succession of vicars appointed by the Diocese.

Montrose, about three miles from Peekskill, is a growing town. Its growth is due to the fact that more and more people are moving there from Manhattan because commuting has become easier.

St. James' Marks 150th Anniversary

St. James' Church, Manhattan, marked its 150th anniversary last month. Highlighting the observance was a special service on Sunday, January 24, when Bishop Donegan, former rector of the Church, preached the sermon.

On Monday, January 25, the Right Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Presiding Bishop Emeritus, was guest of honor during an anniversary dinner at the Hotel Plaza.

St. James', founded in 1810, is one of the few parishes in Manhattan to have remained in its present neighborhood during its entire history. It began as a summer chapel at Lexington Avenue and 69th Street, which was then five miles outside the city. The chapel was built for the convenience of downtown residents who had summer homes in the area along the East River.

As the neighborhood expanded the number of worshippers increased, forcing the parish to relocate in 1869 in a new church at 72nd Street between Park and Lexington Avenues. Further growth required another short-distance move 15 years later to its present site at 71st Street and Madison Avenue.

$21-a-Week Priest Gives Away $28,000

The Rev. Thomas Willis, Anglican priest in Hull, England, recently gave a $28,000 inheritance to church institutions.

The 28-year-old clergyman said that he did not want the money to come between him and his parishioners, who are mostly industrial workers.

Mr. Willis' weekly salary is $21 in U. S. currency, plus housing.

WCC Official to Lead Conference on Laity

The Rev. Hans-Ruedi Weber, executive secretary of the Department on the Laity of the World Council of Churches, Geneva, Switzerland, will visit New York next month.

On Monday, March 7, he will address the New York Churchmen's Clericus at 12:30 p.m. in the Seamen's Church Institute, 25 South St., Manhattan.

After his address at Seamen's he will go to the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park, where he will lead a conference of clergymen arranged by the Divisions of Adult Work and Leadership Training of the Department of Christian Education. The conference will run from 6:00 p.m., March 7, through lunch the next day. Cost is $3.00 per person, including meals.

The theme of the conference is "The Ministry of the Laity." Clergymen and their parish lay leaders have been invited to attend.

Mr. Weber is widely known for his interest in the training of laymen for their ministry in the world. He visited the United States two years ago, speaking to lay groups, seminarians and clergymen on the role of laymen and laywomen in the church and society.

A native of Switzerland, Mr. Weber studied in Biel and received a Bachelor of Theology degree from the University of Berne. He received a "diploma of missions" from the missionary training school in Oegstgeet, Holland, and later received another degree from the Graduate School of Ecumenical Studies, Bossey, Switzerland.

During his missionary service in Indonesia Mr. Weber became interested in religious education among illiterates. He wrote a book, "Communication of the Gospel to Illiterates," based on his first hand knowledge of the subject.

Anyone wishing to attend the conference at Tuxedo Park may do so by writing the Rev. Edwin J. Rooney, associate director, Division of Leadership Training, Department of Christian Education, Box 92, Katonah, N. Y.

Three Books Suggested For Lenten Reading

By the Rev. James W. Kennedy
Rector, Church of the Ascension, Manhattan

Three new books dovetail as recommended reading for the laity during the Lenten Season. Two of them are specifically designated "Lenten Books" (Saints on Main Street, Seabury, and Thanks Be To God, Harper). The third book by its very theme fits perfectly into the devotional reading list for Lent.

Peter Day, long time editor of "The Living Church," and journalist par excellence, has written the first book aimed at the laity, doing a good job of making theology alive, understandable and vital. Mr. Day tackles fearlessly most everything that normally would frighten a layman and sheds light on each one, even eschatology. Divided into sections for easy doses, with each section rounded out by a prayer from the Book of Common Prayer, this book makes a good little package as part of a Lenten rule.

Dr. Rodenmayer is a professor of theology and his book is considerably more substantial than Mr. Day's. However, he has a real gift for well illustrated, uncomplicated writing, and will enlarge the scope of any layman's understanding of "A General Thanksgiving."

Faith is the Victory is a compilation of an even dozen sermons by the late rector of Holy Trinity Church, E. 88th St. The selection was made with loving care by a very close friend, the Bishop of New York. For those who knew Jim Paul, this little book makes a fitting memorial, for he speaks through its pages as if he were present with you. For those who did not know him, the reading of these sermons will deepen what Jim Paul so passionately conveyed, that Christ is "the way, the truth, and the life." His radiant faith is reflected on every page.

SAINTS ON MAIN STREET by Peter Day. Seabury Press. $2.50.
THANKS BE TO GOD by Robert N. Rodenmayer. Seabury Press. $2.50.
FAITH IS THE VICTORY by James Albert Paul, edited by the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan. Morhouse-Barlow Co. $2.50.

Council Opens Contest For Young People

The National Council is sponsoring a Creative Art Contest for youngsters in all Episcopal Church schools.

The contest, designed to stimulate interest in the Church School Missionary Offering, is open to children from age six years and up. There will be two age categories of 6 to 11 years and 12 years and over.

The artwork must have as its subject one of the two 1960 Offering objectives. These are: meeting the need for theological education in Latin America, and meeting the capital need of the Church in college communities.

Winners will be given a three-day trip to New York.

Closing date for entries is May 1, and official entry blanks may be obtained by writing to Creative Art Contest, National Council, 281 Park Ave. South, New York 10, N. Y.

A dialogue sermon was used to point up Theological Sunday at the Church of the Holy Nativity, Bronx. The rector and his assistant spoke back and forth, asking questions about the purpose and work of theological seminaries.

Worship attendance dropped in 1959 after achieving an all-time high in 1958. According to a report issued by the American Institute of Public Opinion, an estimated 49,000,000 adults attended churches and synagogues during a typical week in 1959. This was a 10,000,000 drop from the previous year's figure.

175th Anniversary Fund Nears $2,050,000

144 parishes and missions have reported activity in their 175th Anniversary Fund campaigns to January 15, 1960. This activity includes either a parish-wide solicitation, a pledge by the vestry on behalf of the parish, or a combination of both. An additional 37 parishes and missions which have not yet launched full-scale campaigns are credited with dollar amounts from advance gifts or pledges. (In the following tabulation these amounts are grouped for each Convocation under "Other.") Parishes and missions yet to make a report number 23. The total amount pledged to the Fund as of January 15 was $2,042,690.

About 7,000 families or individuals have pledged to the Fund, plus an additional 22,000 families and individuals who make up parishes where vestries have pledged for the congregation.

Several of the projects planned under the 175th Anniversary program are either completed or almost finished. The church house for St. Paul's, Bronx, for which the Bishop broke ground on April 5, 1959, has been completed and partially occupied. The Bishop blessed the building on January 24, 1960 (see story and pictures on page 3).

The new Church of Christ the King, Stone Ridge, nears completion. View above shows entrance to the church. The parish house is to the right.

The new rectory for the Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, for which a loan was granted from the Revolving Fund, has been completed and occupied. The new Church of Christ the King at Stone Ridge, Ulster County, being built with aid in the form of a loan from the Revolving Fund, is almost complete. It will be dedicated in late March of this year.

Construction of the new St. Andrew's Church at Clason Point, Bronx, will commence as soon as bids are tabulated and reviewed.

Several expansion and modernization projects in both urban and suburban areas are presently being considered. Action is expected to be taken as quickly as funds are available.

Ancient Order Opens First Branch in U.S.

The Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine was, last month, the scene of the opening of the first American branch of the Most Venerable Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem. The Order is a religious, military and philanthropic organization. Elizabeth II is its sovereign head.

The American branch of the Order intends to devote its charity to the field of opthalmology.

Those invested were: Brigadier John William Ferguson Treadwell - Knight.

1960

WHO HASN'T HEARD OF TEXAS!

The next great discovery in this universe may be the finding of a Texan who doesn't talk about the virtues of Texas. We'll probably discover a way to establish commuter service to the moon before this happens, though.

Whatever else you say about Texans—and plenty has been said—you can't accuse them of hiding the state's light under a bushel. They just can't wait to tell you about the place.

The result of this personal evangelism is that everybody knows about Texas—even the little tykes who trailed after the G.I.'s in North Africa, Burma and Italy.

Now, the point of all this discussion about Texans is that Episcopalians could learn something from them. We don't mean that Episcopalians should go around bragging that we have the largest cathedral in the country or that George Washington was one of us. What we do mean is that we should welcome the opportunity to talk about the Episcopal Church and our parish and what they mean to us. When you meet a newcomer to your area, do you invite him to come to your church? Have you ever talked as enthusiastically about your church as you have about your new car or your new house? Or maybe you "never discuss religion."

If you fall into this latter category, it is worth remembering that the early Christians took every opportunity to extol their faith. They discussed Christianity with their fellow men even when they knew it meant death to do so.

Today, we have none of the personal dangers which faced the early evangelists. We have free speech and endless opportunities to use it. The only obstacle facing us is our own timidity.

LOOK BEYOND PARISH LEVEL

Ed. Note: The following paragraphs are taken from an article in the parish newsletter of Christ Church, Bronxville. The article was written by the rector, the Rev. George W. Barrett, concerning a letter which he received from Diocesan Treasurer Theodor Oxholm thanking the parish for exceeding its 1959 missionary quota. We commend Dr. Barrett's broad outlook and pass on his views to our readers.

"Almost half of the money raised through the missionary quota is used in the Diocese of New York—for mission churches in urban and rural areas, for newer missions in suburbs, for educational, social service and college work and for promotional activities.

"The rest of the money is sent to the National Council and used for similar purposes in missionary districts in the United States, in Latin America and in overseas areas, as well as in the development of the national church's educational, promotional and social service programs.

"Our missionary quota for 1960 is $12,833, very little more than a tenth of our entire budget. This is surely a modest amount for a Christian parish such as ours, absorbed though we be in our own urgent and growing needs. Indeed the test of the validity of our own work is our capacity to be a sent Church, a body of witnesses to Christ through words and deeds and gifts. Someday we shall be able to strike a better balance between parish support and participation in the outreach of the entire Church."

Here's a 'Middle Ground' Youth Program

Chapel's Approach Is Understanding But Not Pampering

There seems to be two schools of thought on how to handle the problem of juvenile delinquency. One is the let's-get-real-tough-on-them group and the other is the there's-no-such-thing-as-a-bad-boy group. Yet there is a more realistic third school of thought which rarely expresses itself publicly. This group realizes that there are some bad boys, but that not all boys are bad.

Representative of this school of thought is the Youth Department at St. Christopher's Chapel on the Lower East Side of Manhattan.

Juvenile Violence

The department was organized after last summer's siege of juvenile violence that shocked New York. It became obvious to the Rev. William A. Wendt, priest-in-charge of the chapel, that something more had to be done. After much planning on the part of everyone involved, the new program was drawn up.

Relationship Explained

A word of explanation as to St. Christopher's relationship to St. Augustine's Chapel, located on the same street but ten blocks away. These two chapels, both of Trinity Parish, form the Lower East Side Mission. The Mission is headed by the Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, author of "Light the Dark Streets." Under Father Myers is Miss Shirley Jones, supervisor of the Lower East Side Mission Youth Department. Each chapel has its own youth department which maps out its own program. Naturally, both chapels exchange ideas and information.

Today, every nook and cranny of the old building which houses St. Christopher's at 48 Henry Street is alive with children and youth workers. The program is geared to filling every waking hour of the children after school is over for the day.

This is how the program operates during the school year. At 3:00 p.m. the chapel, which has been relatively quiet during the day, begins to echo with the sounds of children's voices. Boys and girls ranging in age from 8 to 14 years meet in various groups with the youth workers.

No Easy Task

For instance, Miss Sally Spicer is working with a group of boys whose age range is 8 to 11. During these afternoon sessions she reads to the youngsters, or teaches them leathercraft or has them play games. This is no easy task, as the children are quite vocal and restless. A child is apt to say "no" when asked to do something and then turn around and do the task. Miss Spicer often has the help of one of the older teen-agers who has volunteered to become a member of St. Christopher's staff.

Miss Erla Cleaves is working with a similar group of girls.

The children are asked to pay 50¢ for each spring or fall session.

For the teen-agers there is a more comprehensive program. On the practical side, the Youth Department tries hard to find them part-time and summer jobs. According to Father Wendt, the young people need and want work. The biggest problem here is that the legal working age minimum is 16. Many of the boys who want work are a year or two younger.

Evening Program

In the evenings, St. Christopher's is turned over to the teen-agers. They have a lounge, which they painted themselves, where they listen to records or just plain discuss things that are on their minds. Young Charles Mitzenius, a Church Army worker, usually meets with this group. Then there is a game room where other teen-agers drift in to play ping-pong or pool.

The boys have three basketball teams. Two teams are in the Episcopal Athletic League of Manhattan and a neighborhood league. They also play other church teams outside the city.

Teen-Age Council

One of the most interesting and important groups is the Teen-Age Council. It is made up of boys and girls who provide much of the leadership for other teen-age members of St. Christopher's. This group plans and helps supervise dances, passes on the behavior of other teen-agers and helps the regular adult staff. They meet formally every Saturday morning to plan coming activities and iron out problems.

Volunteer staff worker talks things over with a member of the Centurians, a Lower East Side gang that has recently "gone social."

All this reads like a rosy picture of wholesomeness. Yet many of the boys are anything but docile. They know all the ins and outs of liquor and dope addiction. Many of them were or still are members of a street gang. But they are trying to help themselves.

St. Christopher's and St. Augustine's have had regular dances for teen-agers. But these dances were suspended recently because of tension and occasional acts of violence by a small but tough group which seems bent on causing trouble. The suspension of the dances is one way of forcing the teen-agers to put pressure on the troublemakers to stop breaking up their dances.

St. Christopher's Youth Department, which is headed by Larry P. Davis, also carries on individual and family counseling and case work. Much of this work falls on Janice Redmond, a part-time worker at St. Christopher's.

Week-End Trips

The teen-agers take week-end trips to other parishes outside the city. Not too long ago they traveled to Boston, and soon they will be going to Pennsylvania. In turn, the parishes they visit are invited for a weekend at St. Christopher's. The teen-agers share expenses with St. Christopher's and with the Youth Board of New York City.

Church?

By now, the reader must be wondering how the Church fits in. Most of the regular members of the teen-age group are members of St. Christopher's. They attend services regularly and encourage outsiders who drift in to dances or other activities to attend also.

One place where they are reminded that St. Christopher's is first a church, is in the gym where dances are held. According to Father Wendt, special emphasis is put on the large crucifix which hangs on one wall. "We put a spotlight on it so it presents a striking effect and casts the mood for the dance."

At all times the teen-agers are reminded that the facilities they are using are "available to us through Christ's ordained instrument of Grace, the Church."

300 Communicants

There are 300 communicants at St. Christopher's, largely Negroes and those of Puerto Rican extraction. There were 36 confirmations and nine receptions last month. With the growth of the congregation, Sunday services are now held in the gym, the chapel being too small.

There are four confirmation classes going on right now, two for Spanish-speaking adults and youngsters and two for English-speaking adults and youngsters.

St. Christopher's new Youth Department is attracting the attention of outside groups. At the

Sports are an important part of St. Christopher's youth program. Here, Burrell (Butch) Sumpter, a volunteer staff member, gives boxing lessons to two youngsters. Real fights among the older boys are sometimes averted by allowing them to "put on the gloves and have it out."

Ceremonies Set For Installation New Dean

The Rev. Dr. John Vernon Butler will be installed as the sixth Dean of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine on Saturday, March 12, at 3:00 p.m.

Bishop Donegan will conduct the installation service and preach the sermon. Included in the procession will be the trustees and canons of the Cathedral and the clergy of the Diocese.

The actual installation will take place when the Bishop, attended by the canons, escorts Dr. Butler to the Dean's Stall and sets him down in his place.

The 53-year-old Dean-designate has been rector of Trinity Church, Princeton, N.J., since 1948.

moment, the Youth Board of the City of New York is considering placing a worker at St. Christopher's. The National Council's Unit of Church Vocations has placed Miss Cleaves at St. Christopher's under their apprenticeship program. The Church Army became so interested that they sent Mr. Mitzenius there. Miss Redmond moved from Denver, Colorado, after working at the chapel last summer. This is not to mention the 25 adults and teenagers not connected with Church-sponsored organizations who work there purely on a voluntary basis.

Consecration of Canon Wetmore Set For Friday, March 25, at Cathedral

The Rev. Canon Stuart Wetmore will be consecrated a Bishop on Friday, March 25, at 10:30 a.m. in the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine. He will become a Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York.

Consecrator will be the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur C. Lichtenberger. As co-consecrators, he has appointed the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York, and the Rt. Rev. Lauriston L. Scaife, Bishop of Western New York.

The two Bishops who will present Canon Wetmore to the Presiding Bishop are the Rt. Rev. Donald MacAdie, Suffragan Bishop of Newark, and the Rt. Rev. John H. Esquirol, Suffragan Bishop of Connecticut.

The Rt. Rev. James P. De Wolfe, Bishop of Long Island, will be the litanist. The Rt. Rev. Jonathan G. Sherman, Suffragan Bishop of Long Island, will preach.

The Gospel will be read by the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of New York, the Epistle by the Rt. Rev. A. Harry O'Neil, Bishop of Fredericton, Canada, Canon Wetmore's home diocese.

The evidences of ordination will be read by the Rev. Canon H. L. Puxley, president of Kings College, Halifax, Canon Wetmore's alma mater.

Consents of the Bishops will be read by the Rt. Rev. Frederick L. Barry, Bishop of Albany and president of the second province. Consents of the standing committees will be read by Ludlow S. Fowler, chancellor of the Diocese of New York.

Attending presbyters will be the Rev. John A. Bell, rector of the Church of the Incarnation, Manhattan, and the Rev. Albert A. Chambers, rector of the Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan.

Registrar will be the Rev. Alexander M. Rodger, secretary of the House of Bishops. Reading the evidences of election will be the Rev. Bradford W. Ketchum, secretary and registrar of the Diocese of New York.

The Rev. Edward N. West, canon sacrist of the Cathedral, will be master of ceremonies.

National Council to Get New Headquarters

East Side Location Already Selected

The National Council of the Episcopal Church plans to build a $3,500,000 headquarters in midtown Manhattan.

An East Side site has been chosen, but its location will not be made public until purchase negotiations have been completed. The land is expected to cost $1,000,000, making the total cost of the headquarters $4,500,000.

Announcement of the project was made at National Council's annual meeting at Seabury House, Greenwich, Conn.

The building will be of a contemporary design and 12 to 14 stories high. All or a part of the ground floor may be leased, possibly to a bank. Allowance has been made for expansion of the various organizations that will occupy the structure.

The new national headquarters will replace several buildings now being used by Episcopal organizations. Principal of these is National Council's headquarters, a 73-year-old outmoded structure at 281 Park Avenue South. It will also replace Tucker House, National Council's Department of Christian Education office in Greenwich. Other Episcopal agencies, at 317 East 23rd St. and elsewhere in the city, are also expected to move to the new building.

National Council has $495,000 for the project. Additional sums will be raised through sale of 281 Park Avenue South and Tucker House. Tucker House is located only one block from the busiest corner in Greenwich.

No church-wide fund drive is anticipated, though contributions will be welcomed.

Head of the project is the Rt. Rev. Frederick J. Warnecke, Bishop of Bethlehem, Pa., and chairman of National Council's Housing Committee.

Church Missions House, present home of National Council. A contemporary design building 12 to 14 stories high will replace this outmoded 73-year-old structure.

A three-member committee will develop a plan of financing. The members are Howard T. Tellepsen of Houston, Harrison Garret of Baltimore and B. Powell Harrison, Jr., of Leesburg, Va.

The Housing Committee decided last October to build in New York after rejecting sites in other parts of the country. The Council itself has twice turned down a proposal that it lease space in the new Interchurch Center, Riverside Drive and 120th St.

Answers Given By Seminarians at Inter-Faith Meeting

"How pious must you be to go into the ministry?"

This was typical of the many questions asked by the 250 young people who attended Seminary Evening on January 31 at St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck.

The program was attended by young people from nine other Episcopal churches in Westchester and one Methodist church. It was one of a series of inter-church young people's meetings that have been held at St. Thomas's and other churches. Though only one non-Episcopal group attended the January 31 program, several denominations are represented at most of the meetings.

Leaders of Seminary Evening were 13 students from General Theological Seminary. One of the students, and the main speaker, was Robert Worthey, president of the student body.

The evening began with dinner for the seminarians and the officers of St. Thomas's Y.P.F. The formal program began with Evensong led by the seminarians.

The group then moved to the parish hall for showing of the slide film "Life at the Seminary." After a talk by Mr. Worthey, there was a lively question and answer period.

Indicative of the areas in which the young people were interested were these typical questions:

"How do you recognize a call to the ministry; and is it different from a call to any other type of work?"

"Just what do you study in a seminary?"

"Is the ministry only for holy people?"

"How often do seminarians have to pray?"

Churches represented at Seminary Evening were, in addition to St. Thomas's: St. John's, Larchmont; Mamaroneck Methodist Church; Christ Church, Pelham Manor; Redeemer, Pelham; St. John's, Tuckahoe; St. Luke's, Eastchester; Grace, White Plains; Christ's Church, Rye; Trinity, New Rochelle; and St. Peter's, Port Chester.

Previous inter-church programs have included St. Thomas's annual Feast of Lights, a meeting featuring Red Cap 42, and a Halloween party.

There is no set schedule for the inter-church meetings, nor are there any officers for the group as a whole. A meeting is held when one of the churches has a program to which they want to invite young people from the other churches.

Originator of the inter-church programs was St. Thomas's associate minister and director of youth activities, the Rev. Wiley W. Merryman.

Commenting on the success of the programs, he said: "We hope that Christian youth will grow in the love of the Lord. Naturally, this involves their understanding of and cooperation with the youth of other Christian churches. In this inter-church program there is the opportunity to enlarge their horizons as they learn from those outside their local experience."

St. Gregory's Gets Full-Time Vicar; Woodstock Mission Founded in 1952

When a handful of Episcopalians in Woodstock heard that the Rev. Herald C. Swezy, rector of the Church of the Ascension, West Park, was making regular trips to their town to take private communion to an elderly and ailing woman, they asked if they might attend.

Father Swezy said yes; and that is how St. Gregory's began. This was in 1952.

Rapid Growth

In the eight years since 1952, the mission has grown from a handful of people to a congregation of 133 communicants. Early this year the Rev. Lloyd Uyeki was appointed vicar, becoming the first priest to serve St. Gregory's on a full-time basis.

During the early days of St. Gregory's, it was a mission without a church. The first services were held in homes, then in the American Legion Hall. Later the mission used a parishioner's guest house, which originally was a corncrib.

But the mission continued to grow steadily. The New York Thruway was opened, IBM built a new plant in nearby Kingston, and more people began settling in Woodstock. Father Swezy continued making trips from West Park to attend to the needs of St. Gregory's, which was functioning as a parochial missionary endeavor of Ascension, West Park.

Finally, it was obvious that St. Gregory's potential could no longer be accommodated in makeshift structures. A building committee was formed. William H. van Benschoten, consulting architect for the Department of Missions and a warden of the West Park parish, designed a church which would seat 150 persons. Next the congregation raised $5,000 and applied to the Diocese for status as an organized mission, promising to pay an additional $10,000 toward the cost of a new church building.

Organized Mission

St. Gregory's became an organized mission under the Department of Missions in December, 1954. The Department later built a new church, using $35,000 of its own missionary funds and the $5,000 raised by the mission itself. Completed in 1956, it was the first Episcopal church to be built in Ulster County in 59 years.

Of a contemporary design, the new church building attracted national interest. It is located several hundred feet from the road on a four-acre site given by Miss Alice Wardwell, a member of Trinity, Saugerties.

Full-Time Vicar

As first vicar, Father Swezy continued to serve St. Gregory's until this year. But with the number of communicants at its present 133, he told the Bishop he believed a full-time vicar was needed.

Prior to his new assignment as vicar of St. Gregory's, Father Uyeki was curate of Christ Church, Poughkeepsie. He was graduated from the University of Chicago's Theological School in 1956 and then completed a year of study at General Theological Seminary.

'Instructed Eucharist' Held at St. Barnabas

The Order for Holy Communion was explained step-by-step in an unusual service held recently at St. Barnabas, Irvington.

The parish's rector, the Rev. H. August Kuehl, celebrated Holy Communion, while the curate, the Rev. John A. Bruce, stood in the midst of the congregation explaining the meaning of each movement during appropriate pauses in the service.

Prior to this "Instructive Eucharist," the two clergymen labored over the commentary to assure that the service would run smoothly and that the instructions would not intrude on the actual celebration of Holy Communion.

Although the service is not entirely new, it is the first time that it has been held at St. Barnabas during Mr. Kuehl's five years as rector. It was so well received that Mr. Kuehl plans to have a similar service annually.

Doctor Says Visitors To Hospital Patients Often Stay Too Long

"Most people stay too long when they visit a hospital patient," a New York physician told a February 15 meeting of clergymen.

Making the charge was Dr. Myron Wright, associate attending physician at St. Luke's Hospital. He was one of a number of speakers who addressed the Institute for the Clergy on the Ministry to Hospital Patients. The meeting, held at St. Luke's, was sponsored by the Chaplaincy Committee of the Manhattan Division, Protestant Council, and the Department of Religious Services of St. Luke's.

Speaking on "The Role of the Clergy As Seen by the Physician," Dr. Wright declared that no visit should exceed ten minutes unless the patient requests that the visitor stay longer.

"Actually, three to five minutes is even better," he said.

"Most patients appreciate frequent, short visits and grow weary under long exposure to visitors. Many of us who are well forget how sick the patient really feels."

Conceding that patients may sometimes like long visits, Dr. Wright said that the patient should be allowed to decide.

"Just start to leave; if he wants you to stay longer he'll say so."

Dr. Wright cautioned clergymen to make only very brief visits to a patient who has just been admitted to the hospital.

"At this time, the patient's orientation is toward his medical care and toward the 'magic pill' expected to relieve his misery. Even devout patients may be temporarily distracted from their faith and be led to feel that the chaplain's visit is an intrusion in their medical relationship. They fear that it may postpone the important business at hand, namely, the alleviation of their physical distress."

The greatest service a clergyman can render to the physician, Dr. Wright said, is in encouraging insecure and unstable patients to continue the prescribed medical care. A clergyman also provides the patient with someone that he feels he can speak freely to, someone with whom he can discuss his fears and emotional problems.

Another speaker at the meeting, the Rev. R. B. Reeves, Jr., chaplain at Presbyterian Hospital, called on clergymen to be good listeners.

"The most important aspect of your visit is that you are a clergyman and that you have taken the time to visit and listen to the patient. Hear him out.

"We don't have to make like pastors. We don't always have to do something. Our identity is the most important thing to the patient."

Presiding at the all-day meeting, which was attended by some 75 clergymen of several denominations, was the Rev. Cornelius P. Trowbridge, chaplain of St. Luke's.

The Church of England's Westminster Abbey is having its first complete housecleaning since it was consecrated in 1065. Dust more than an inch thick has been found. ## Students and Teachers March at St. Thomas

More than 1,000 students and teachers marched in a colorful procession in St. Thomas Church, Manhattan, on a Sunday afternoon last month. The occasion was the fourth annual Diocesan Schools Festival.

The event is a service of witness to the work being done by the 13 Episcopal schools within the Diocese of New York.

A packed church heard Bishop Boynton preach on the nature and duties of an Episcopal school. Boys from the Choir School of St. Thomas Church sang the service; and glee clubs from St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's, St. Peter's, Trinity, and Trinity-Pawling offered special anthems.

Participating schools were: the Cathedral Choir School, Grace Church School, the Greer School, Heavenly Rest Day School, the Malcolm Gordon School, Mediator Day School, St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School, St. Luke's School, St. Mary's School, St. Peter's School, St. Thomas Church Choir School, Trinity School, and Trinity-Pawling School.

These schools constitute the Division of Boarding and Day Schools within the Diocese's Department of Christian Education. It is the duty of members of this Division to foster cooperation among the schools of the Diocese in order that the aims of Christian education may be more effectively served; to encourage cooperation in such areas as teacher training and procurement, curriculum planning, and administrative practices; to establish evaluative criteria; to interpret and promote the work of the schools; and to assist those who desire to found new schools.

Vestry Associate Plan Utilizes Special Talents

The fourteen-member vestry of St. Barnabas, Irvington, has recently been supplemented with seven Vestry Associates.

Though not voting members of the vestry, the associates are expected to attend all meetings and to take part in the proceedings. They are appointed by the vestry for one-year terms.

The vestry associate plan at St. Barnabas was instituted for two main reasons. It gives assistance to the regular vestry members, especially in specialized fields; and it serves as a training ground for future vestrymen.

Each of the vestry associates is a specialist in a particular field and is assigned to a vestry committee or function that will utilize these talents.

Rector of St. Barnabas is the Rev. H. August Kuehl. The parish has 590 communicants.

Speaking of the new plan, Mr. Kuehl said that it differs from most vestry associate organizations in other parishes. The usual form, he said, is for the vestry associates to constitute an entirely separate organization from the vestry. The associates do not attend vestry meetings but hold their own meetings and carry on functions assigned to them from time to time by the vestry. At St. Barnabas, however, the associates meet with the vestry and function as an integral part of it.

A stained-glass window depicting the Transfiguration has been placed in the north transept of the Church of St. James the Less, Scarsdale. Designed by Whitefriars of England, the window is in memory of William Quaid. It has three lancets, containing the figures of Moses and St. Peter on the left, Christ and St. James in the center, and Elijah and St. John on the right.

'Turn-About Sunday' Reverses Usual Roles

It wasn't the children who left the family service for Sunday school on a recent Sunday at St. Matthew's, Bedford. It was the parents. For this was "Turn-about Sunday."

Parents attended their children's classes to hear about the Sunday school curriculum and to meet their teachers. Meanwhile, in the church, the children learned new hymns and sang them along with the rector and the choir.

This is the first time that St. Matthew's has had "Turn-about Sunday." The Rev. John C. Harper, rector, thought of the idea while serving in the Diocese of Massachusetts. He used to call the occasion "Reverse Sunday" but decided that "Turn-about" conveyed the novelty of the idea better.

NEIGHBORLINESS

The Church of the Holy Nativity, Bronx, announced recently that it is lending its parish house three time a week to the local branch of the Police Athletic League. The league sponsors athletics and games for the youngsters in the neighborhood.

"Families in Conflict—Our Responsibility," will be the topic of the April meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen.

The meeting will be held April 5, at 11:00 a.m. at St. Peter's Church, 2500 Westchester Ave., Bronx.

Following a box luncheon at noon, the women will hear a talk by Robert A. Searle, executive director of the Home Advisory and Service Council of New York. Mr. Searle's work is directly concerned with families who find themselves in conflict to the point of going to court.

Ramapo Woman's Council Reports Real Progress

Members of the Ramapo Convocation have been active in the Woman's Council of the Episcopal City Mission Society. A report of these activities was inadvertently omitted from a Woman's Council article in last month's Bulletin.

Mrs. Samuel W. Eager, chairman of the Ramapo Convocation Woman's Council, reports that her group has already found a stenographer to take over the burden of paper work from Dr. Thomas W. B. Magnan. Chaplain Magnan is serving five institutions in the convocation. Some 1,650 persons look to him for spiritual aid.

The group also has a program under way to interest members of adult fellowships in adopting wings at the State School Annex and the New Hampton State Training Schools for Boys.

The Council is also forming a committee which will help the Rev. Ernest W. Churchill, chaplain at the Rockland State Hospital.

GFS Gives $3,500 For Mission Work

A check for $3,500 was recently presented to the Presiding Bishop by the Girls' Friendly Society. The money represents the 1959 mission gift of GFS girls all over the United States.

Each year the GFS selects a mission area that it will aid with its annual gift. The 1959 gift went to Mexico, where it will be used for girls work. The money was raised by holding Mexican fiestas, preparing Mexican dinners for parishes and through other activities. The girls also extended their knowledge of Mexico by learning Spanish phrases and prayers. The 1960 gift will go to Liberia.

The Girls' Friendly Society is an organization for Episcopal girls between the ages of 7 and 21. There are GFS branches in 70 dioceses and 31 countries. Total membership is 90,000.

The Diocese of New York has a membership of about 550 in branches in 30 churches.

Ingathering Report Reveals More Women Participating in UTO

The complete report of the Advent Ingathering of the United Thank Offering of the Episcopal Churchwomen reveals that every convocation increased both in the number of women participating and in the amounts contributed.

The money is used to help the Church's missionary work at home and overseas.

The Convocation of Richmond recorded the greatest proportionate increase.

A total of 9,326 women contributed to the Advent offering. The Churchwomen have set their spring offering goal at 10,000 women. According to Mrs. William E. Leidt, Diocesan treasurer and chairman of the U.T.O., the goal can be "easily achieved if every parish will enlist the interest of one more woman for every 15 now sharing in our great offering." There are approximately 40,000 women communicants in the Diocese of New York.

A breakdown of the offering is as follows:

| | No. of Women | Amount |
|---|---|---|

St. Monica's Guild Marks 75th Year

St. Monica's Guild of Trinity Parish, an organization for women, recently celebrated its Diamond Jubilee with Solemn Evensong. The guild requires members to make their Communion regularly, to be faithful in daily prayers and Scripture reading, to report cases of illness, and to encourage others to attend church. Their emblem is a medal in the shape of a cross on which is inscribed, "Abide in Me." They meet weekly under the guidance of the Sisters of St. Margaret.

New Name for GFS Under Consideration

The Girls Friendly Society of the U.S.A. is planning to hold its National Assembly July 17-24 at Asilomar, Pacific Grove, Calif.

The prime question to be considered during the assembly will be the matter of a name-change for the 82-year-old society. The GFS is now making a survey of preferences through its bi-monthly paper, Highlights.

Among some of the names being considered are:

THE GIRL'S ORGANIZATION OF THE PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH

EPISCOPAL GIRLS' FELLOWSHIP

GUILD FOR FELLOWSHIP AND SERVICE

GIRLS' INTERNATIONAL FELLOWSHIP

Registrations for the National Assembly are being accepted now. Those eligible to attend are senior members or leaders who are 16 years or over. Registration fee is $5.00. To register, contact Miss Jean Pflomn, GFS Diocesan Office, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., New York 25, N. Y.

As each diocese will send three official delegates, space will be limited. Those who do not expect to be delegates but who wish to attend should register early.

'Who Is My Neighbor?' Edited by Esther Pike

By the Rev. James W. Kennedy
Rector, Church of the Ascension, Manhattan

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR? Seabury Press, Greenwich, Conn. $3.50.

It is too bad this book was not published in time for use of the clergy on Race Relations Sunday. It points up many new areas of exploration for the churches to consider during Brotherhood Week, which has really been overbalanced by the theme "Race Relations." While the book is valuable and helpful in its survey of many important phases of Christian concern, it would have been perhaps better if the editor had had time to really be the author and to use the various pieces submitted as resource material to be woven together as a unity. As it stands, the contributions are quite uneven and lacking in an over-all unity which, it seems to me, the subject demands. Certainly the book is a valuable addition to the social concern of the Church and certainly Mrs. James A. Pike is thoroughly capable in her editing of the material.

This is not only for the clergy but for all Christians who take seriously the words in I John 3:17-18, "Little children, let us not love in word or speech, but in deed and in truth."

The term "quiet day," as used in the Church, means a day set apart for special devotions, meditations and instructions.

If People Won't Come To the Books, Then . . .

"If people won't come to the books, then bring the books to the people." That's the philosophy behind the new bookmobile just put into use at the Chapel of the Intercession, Manhattan.

The church has had a library for some time, but people seemed never to get around to visiting it. Only four or five books a month were borrowed.

Recently, about 150 new books were bought and placed on a mobile bookcase built by a member of the congregation, Albert Hoyte. The bookmobile is placed at the rear of the church after the Sunday 8:00 and 9:00 o'clock services and in the common room during the coffee hour after the 11:00 o'clock service.

A volunteer librarian attends the bookmobile. Each librarian is familiar with the books available and is qualified to make recommendations.

The bookmobile plan is working out splendidly, according to Intercession's vicar, the Rev. Robert R. Spears, Jr. Twenty-two books were borrowed on the first Sunday that the library on wheels was in use.

Nearly two million copies of the Scriptures were distributed in Japan during 1959, according to the Japan Bible Society.

TO THE OWNER OF A LEAKING BUILDING "bids" mean little. Don't let anyone tell you that water infiltration in masonry can be cured with magical "coatings". That's the easy technique employed by itinerant "waterproofers" who attempt to lure you with low prices. The only way to stop leaks and seepage PERMANENTLY is to remove disintegrated mortar from all weak areas and repoint the joints with properly compounded mortar. Rockwell Newman brings to this problem over 38 years experience, plus the skills of highly trained men equipped with modern tools. Our clientele is comprised of people who seek, and are willing to pay fair prices for PERMANENT corrective workmanship. We can prove to you that our charges are ultimately one of the lowest.

'Wilderness' Report Proves Success of Pioneer Program

This is the time of the year when reports come rolling in on last year's successes or failures. One of the more gratifying ones is that of the Department of Christian Education concerning last summer's Wilderness Conferences, which took place at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness in Bear Mountain.

These conferences were pretty much in the nature of pioneer effort when they were held last year—pioneer in concept and pioneer in reality. The idea behind them was to teach young people the relationship between work and worship. The means of carrying out this idea was to have the young people themselves do pioneer work. (See October, 1959, Bulletin).

All Convocations Represented

The gratifying part of this report is the obvious fact that the conferences were a success. For instance, every one of the seven convocations in the Diocese were represented during at least one of the five conferences. This means that a good cross section of the Diocese was represented at each conference.

Attendance Gratifying

Attendance figures were also gratifying, The camp can accommodate 24 young people for a single conference. The lowest figure for all the conferences was 21 and this was caused by last-minute cancellations.

According to Canon Stuart Wetmore, director of the Department of Christian Education, many of the campers wanted to stay on for another week's conference. In fact, when they could be accommodated some did stay on. Also, because the idea has caught people's imagination, there have been requests for expansion so that more children can be accommodated.

When the conferences began, their future was uncertain, but the successes recorded in the report explain why there will be another series beginning June 26.

A Picture of New York Should 'IF' Be 'IS'

If the five boroughs of New York were as thickly settled as Hong Kong, there would be 15,750,000 people crowding tenements, camping in Central Park and down the center strip of Park Avenue.

The Rev. Frank L. Hutchison, of Church World Service, used these figures to dramatize the need for more aid to Hong Kong.

According to Mr. Hutchison, 787,500 people would have active TB. A quarter of the population would be unemployed. The average income of 35 percent of the families with six or more members would be $25 a year. More than 5,000 children would be roaming the streets, and the "bundles of rags" in doorways would turn out to be sleeping infants.

"The human problem," he explained, "increases faster than the growth of Hong Kong's new industries, refugee housing or expanded refugee programs." While citing the fact that the British Colonial Government and voluntary agencies are working "miracles," he said that they still cannot keep abreast of the mounting need. More help is needed from Church World Service, he asserted.

178,000 Tons of Goods Go to Overseas Relief

American Protestant churches shipped 178,000 tons of relief supplies to hungry, homeless, destitute and underprivileged people overseas in 1959. The supplies, sent through Church World Service, were valued at $25,778,359.

Food, clothing, medicines, tools, educational and self-help materials went to 41 countries in Europe, Asia, Africa, South America and the Caribbean. Surplus food was by far the largest form of aid given.

Countries receiving the largest shipment of supplies were, in order: Greece, Yugoslavia, Korea and Lebanon.

Used clothing for overseas distribution may be sent or taken to the Church World Service clothing center at 110 E. 29th Street, New York, N. Y.

World Council to Build Headquarters

Plans for the new headquarters of the World Council of Churches in Geneva call for a modern structure with 275 offices, a chapel, a library, and a meeting room which will accommodate 200 to 400 people. Construction will begin this month.

The Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Presiding Bishop Emeritus and chairman of the international committee in charge of fund raising for the new center, announced the details at the annual meeting of the Friends of the World Council of Churches recently.

The new center will cost $2,500,000. Cash and pledges totaling $1,600,000 have been received, which includes $1,000,000 from the United States, according to Bishop Sherrill. Of the remaining $900,000 still to be raised, the Bishop said, $500,000 is being sought in America.

The international church center will be located on an eight and one-half acre tract in a Geneva suburb near the United Nations European headquarters.

St. Mark's Rector Praises Spiritual Impact Parish Stewardship Campaign

By the Rev. Michael Allen, Rector
St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan

We had a stewardship canvass at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie last month. About half way through the meetings of preparation, one of the men got up to talk. And that was the night we broke through.

"You know, I think I've got the idea. I pick up my paper and I look at the headlines and the comics and the sports. But I don't look much at the horses. I don't have money to put on the horses, you know. But some of the fellows who do, they pick up the paper and they look at the horse races first. I guess your interest is where your money is. And you know, it's when I began to pledge to this church that I felt I belonged. This is my church. I belong. I give to St. Mark's."

It took a long time to get to that point, to get past the arguments about the budget and how much money St. Mark's really needs, to the real question of why do I give, and how much do I care.

But that is the point of a stewardship campaign, not just raising more money, not just another technique, but a confrontation. How much does my God and my church mean to me?

Towards the beginning of the campaign, Diocesan staff member Eric Ley, who directed our campaign, had lunch with me. We were going to talk about preparations for the campaign. I guess it wasn't until half way through lunch that I realized he was canvassing me, asking me what my faith meant to me. And I was a little ashamed.

Pledge Paid Last

Once a month I pay my bills. And the last bill I pay is my pledge. Which means it doesn't always get paid. Department stores, shoe shops, and all the rest come first, and what is left over goes to the church.

And then I realized that if God is first, really first for me, I should pay my pledge first, not last. Before I write other checks now I pay my pledge—and then I pay the shoe shops and department stores; and if I don't have enough left for them, well we don't buy as much.

This is what happened to two men in the parish, a layman and the rector. We're better Christians for what happened. And the parish is richer for the canvass.

Not just because we have more money, though St. Mark's is stronger financially than it ever has been before, but because of what this has meant to people. Men gave hours of their time and did so joyfully, finding each act of giving enriched them more. The parish is no longer a place to come to and leave. The parish belongs to those who gave.

And all this over money. Crass money. And why not? Money is precious to you and me. This is why we give so little of it to the church. It means life and sustenance and ambition and hope. All the things that we care about are wrapped up in our money. And when we think of giving to the church we are thinking of giving ourselves, and we are asking how much of ourselves we are willing to give.

St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie's pledges went from 88 in 1959 to almost 150 in 1960. Total giving almost doubled. More important, however, was the impact the 1960 stewardship program had on the spiritual life of the parish, as Mr. Allen tells in this article.

The canvass began as a series of meetings with Eric Ley, meetings in which the men were inarticulate and embarrassed.

In a sense, it ended with two parish dinners, with more than two-thirds of the parish present, where five vestrymen, none of them accomplished public speakers, none of them professionals, stood up and spoke. And in a way this was the greatest result of the canvass: five men of the parish caring enough about their faith to stand before the parish and speak not of leaky roofs and oil bills, but of what the parish needs in dedication and giving and love. And they spoke of what God means to them.

What they spoke about, these men also did. They stood before the parish giving of themselves. And this is what a stewardship campaign is about—giving. Giving of money, giving of time, giving of love. And the results? The building of a church, a church where people care, where people belong, where people have offered themselves to be used.

We raised a lot of money at St. Mark's last month, but, more important, we made more Christians.

THE BISHOP'S EASTER MESSAGE

THE LORD IS RISEN! This was the incredible announcement that transformed the frightened, dejected disciples into fearless, devoted followers of the Living Lord. Before Easter Day they were disappointed and doubtful, but after they knew that God had raised Jesus from the dead their wavering faith was restored. From that day forward their loyalty never faltered. With amazing courage and exuberant joy they preached the Resurrection.

The good news of Easter is not only the promise of eternal life to all who believe in Christ, but also the assurance that through the power of the Resurrection our feeble faith can be transformed. But the conditions our Lord set forth must be fulfilled. The words of the conditions echo through the centuries. Some of them are: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." "Love your enemies." "Do this in remembrance of me." It is through loving obedience to our Lord that we are changed, and receive His power and share His victory.

The Lord is Risen! At Eastertide, and always, may we pray "that I may know Him and the power of His Resurrection."

Faithfully and affectionately, your Bishop,

Horace W. B. Donegan

3,000 Attend Canon Wetmore Consecration

Becomes Suffragan Bishop of Diocese

The Rev. Canon Stuart Wetmore was consecrated a Bishop on March 25 in the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine. Upon his consecration, the Rt. Rev. Stuart Wetmore became a Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York.

Consecrator was the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop. Co-consecrators were the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York, and the Rt. Rev. Lauriston L. Scaife, Bishop of Western New York.

Ten other Bishops joined in the Laying on of Hands. They were: the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of New York; the Rt. Rev. Donald J. Campbell, retired Suffragan Bishop of Los Angeles; the Rt. Rev. Gillespie Armstrong, Suffragan Bishop of Pennsylvania; the Rt. Rev. James P. De Wolfe, Bishop of Long Island; the Rt. Rev. Jonathan G. Sherman, Suffragan Bishop of Long Island; the Rt. Rev. Alexander H. O'Neill, Lord Bishop of Fredericton, Canada; the Rt. Rev. Shirley H. Nichols, retired Bishop of Salina; the Rt. Rev. W. C. de Pauley, Lord Bishop of Cashel, Ireland; the Rt. Rev. Donald MacAdie, Suffragan Bishop of Newark; the Rt. Rev. John H. Esquirol, Suffragan Bishop of Connecticut.

Among other dignitaries at the consecration were the Hon. Harry A. Scott, Consul General of Canada in N. Y. C.; the Most Rev. Sion Manoogian, Archbishop of the Diocese of the Armenian Church of America, N. Y. C.; and the Very Rev. Firmilian Ocokoljich, dean of the Serbian Orthodox Cathedral of St. Sava, N. Y. C.

Over 3,000 persons witnessed or took part in the consecration, which began at 10:30 a.m.

The sermon was preached by the Rt. Rev. Jonathan G. Sherman, Suffragan Bishop of Long Island.

The Bishop-elect kneels before the Bishops for the Laying on of Hands.

"The Bishop is primarily a pastor," he said. "Before him is set the ideal of the Good Shepherd. He is charged specifically 'to hold up the weak, heal the sick, bind up the broken, bring again the outcasts, seek the lost.' "

Pointing out that a Bishop must be pastor, preacher and administrator, Bishop Sherman declared that "one of a Bishop's greatest problems is to maintain the proper order and balance" between these duties.

"But the recollection that we are called primarily to share Christ's ministry of reconciliation, and that all activities must be evaluated with reference to this end, supplies a helpful perspective."

Speaking of the relationship between a Diocesan Bishop and a Suffragan Bishop, Bishop Sherman declared:

"In his administration of the godly discipline of the Church, a Suffragan Bishop acts, by Canon Law, in all respects as the assistant of the Bishop of the Diocese and under his direction."

Among the many gifts which

Bishop Wetmore received were: his episcopal ring from the parish of St. James the Less, Scarsdale, where Bishop Wetmore is a communicant; his pectoral cross, from the clergy of the Diocese; and a cassock, cincture and cape from the lay employees of Diocesan House and Synod House. The pectoral cross and episcopal ring were designed by Canon West, who was also master of ceremonies at the consecration.

Following the consecration, a luncheon was held in the undercroft of Synod House.

Anglican Authority On Moral Welfare To Speak April 26

One of the Anglican Communion's leading authorities on the family and social issues will address a meeting of the Department of Christian Social Relations on April 26. The meeting, to which the public is invited, will be at 2:00 p.m. in Cathedral House.

Speaker will be the Rev. Canon Gordon R. Dunstan, secretary of the Moral Welfare Council of the Church of England's Board for Social Responsibility.

He will speak on some of the major social issues facing the Church of England and his organization; how they decide on which issues they will comment upon publicly; and how they determine Churchmen's views on various issues. There will be an extended question and answer period during which other topics, such as family counseling, are expected to be explored.

The Moral Welfare Council, created in 1933, is the Church of England's clearing house for thought and action concerning problems of marriage, sex and the family.

Canon Dunstan, who is on the staff of Westminster Abbey, gathered material for the pre-Lambeth report on "The Family in Contemporary Society." Last year he was a member of a study group on "Responsible Parenthood and Population Problems."

For the past several years, he has taken a leading role as a representative of the Church in almost every aspect of English legislative action involving the family or social problems.

Bishop to Address All Convocation Meetings

Talk to be Carried On Telephone Lines

Bishop Donegan will address all seven spring convocation meetings via a special telephone hookup. The meetings will be held on the evening of Monday, May 2.

The novel communications arrangement will be similar to that used for conference calls, whereby a number of points are connected with each other for a "telephone meeting."

Reports from Meetings

Amplifiers will be placed in all seven rooms where the convocation meetings will be held. The Bishop will speak from one of the meetings, and his voice will be heard through the amplifiers at all locations.

After the Bishop's talk reports will be received from each of the convocation meetings. These reports will also be heard at all the meetings.

The special telephone hookup is being made because of the impossibility of the Bishop's addressing all of the seven simultaneous meetings personally. As some of the meetings will begin with supper and others at 8:00, the conference call will be put through at about 8:30.

The spring meeting of the convocations is for the election of officers and other business.

This year, because 1960 is the 175th anniversary of the Diocese, an added feature will be a review of each convocation's history. In some convocations, the present and future, as well as the past, will be highlighted.

Following are the individual convocation program plans. Detailed information will be sent to each church well in advance of the meetings.

BRONX—St. Peter's, Westchester Square, 8:00 p.m. Talk by the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, rector of St. Peter's, on the history of the convocation's churches, divided into historical periods.

DUTCHESS–St. Paul's, Poughkeepsie. Supper at 6:30, followed by meeting. Talk, illustrated with slides, by the Rev. Raymond Cunningham, Jr., dean of Dutchess Convocation. Topics covered will be progress of the convocation's churches and the major problems facing them, such as mobile population, housing, racial integration and evangelism. On the afternoon before the meeting, Sunday, all of the convocation's churches will be open for visitors, with a guide at the historical churches.

HUDSON—Christ the King in the Rondout Valley. Supper at 7:00, followed by meeting. Short talk on history of the Diocese by the Rev. Peter W. O. Hill, dean of Hudson Convocation. Illustrated talk on the churches of the convocation by the Rev. David Arnold, priest-in-charge, Christ the King. Talk on the past, present and future of the convocation by R. B. Overbagh, vestryman of Trinity, Saugerties, and a member of the Diocese's Department of Missions.

MANHATTAN—Chapel of the Incarnation. Evening Prayer at 6:00, followed by supper and meeting. Talk by the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, archdeacon, on the general development of the Episcopal Church in Manhattan and the problems it faces today.

RAMAPO–Trinity, Garnerville. Evening Prayer at 7:30, followed by meeting. Program theme will be the past, present and future of the Ramapo Convocation.

RICHMOND—St. Paul's, 8:00 p.m. Program will be on the history of the convocation.

WESTCHESTER—St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck. Evening Prayer at 6:30, followed by supper and meeting. Brief talks by clergy of convocation's older churches on the history of these churches.

In Brief . . .

BROTHERHOOD MEETS

The New York Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew held its annual convention at Trinity Church, Manhattan. Speaker was Ellsworth Wallace, director of the Office of Communications of Trinity Parish.

GOING ABROAD?

The Episcopal Book Club has just published "A Guide to Episcopal Churches Overseas." The 48-page booklet sells for 35¢ and may be purchased from the Exhibit Hall of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Manhattan. Two years ago, the EBC published "A Pocket Directory of Episcopal Churches in the U.S.A."

OLDEST PRIEST

The oldest Episcopal priest in the United States died recently. He was 101-year old Dr. J. C. Linsley of Warren, Conn.

12,000 RESETTLED

In 1959, 1,609 persons came to this country under the auspices of the Episcopal Church. This is an increase of 1,000 over 1958 and brings the Episcopal total resettlement figure since 1949 to 12,000 persons.

A BOAT FROM TEXAS

The Bishop of Central America now has a 23-foot cabin cruiser to visit mission stations in the Pearl Lagoon area of Nicaragua —thanks to the Diocese of Dallas. Money for the unusual gift, built in Texas, came from special Advent offerings throughout the diocese.

$800,000 LEFT SEWANEE

A bequest of $800,000 for endowment has been made to the School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn. The school is one of 13 Episcopal seminaries in the nation and is owned by 21 dioceses in 12 Southern states.

GTS Instructor, 32, Appointed Dean of San Juan Seminary

A 32-year-old instructor at General Theological Seminary has been named the first dean of the new Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Caribbean in San Juan, Puerto Rico. He is the Rev. Eugene E. Crommett, instructor in dogmatic theology at General since 1959. His appointment, by the National Council, becomes effective next July.

Construction of the new seminary is scheduled to begin in the fall, with completion expected by September, 1961.

Dr. Crommett, a native of Portland, Maine, was graduated cum laude from Harvard. Taking his seminary training at General, he holds bachelor of sacred theology and doctor of theology degrees from that institution.

In addition to his other duties, he has for the past four years been a part-time assistant in charge of Spanish work at St. Luke's Chapel of Trinity Parish. He is married and has four children.

The Very Rev. Dr. John Vernon Butler, new dean of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, is a member of the Board of Trustees of the new Caribbean Seminary.

TWO EXHIBITS AT UNION

Two exhibits of early manuscripts and prints will be on display at the Union Theological Seminary Library through April 18.

The "Passion of Our Lord" exhibit includes original 15th-17th century prints by Rembrandt, Durer, Glockendon and van Leyden.

"Treasures from the Van Ess Collection" include liturgical manuscripts and numerous books printed before the 16th century.

Dr. Butler Installed as Dean of Cathedral

The Rev. (now the Very Rev.) Dr. John Vernon Butler has been installed as Dean of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine. He was installed by the Bishop of New York, the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, at a service in the Cathedral on Saturday, March 12.

An estimated 1,500 persons attended the installation. Included were groups from Dr. Butler's former parishes in Springfield, Mass., and Princeton, N. J. Many came in chartered buses.

Preaching on the functions of the cathedral church, Bishop Donegan said, "Its supreme function is to be a center of worship, quickening the spiritual life of the diocese. As such, it must set an example of what the liturgy—in complete loyalty to the doctrine and discipline of the Book of Common Prayer—can be at its best, with all that beauty and art and music and learning can do to enrich it."

Explaining the relationship of the Cathedral to the Diocese, the Bishop said that it is the mother church of the whole Diocese and "a second spiritual home for the clergy and laity of every parish and mission. Clergy and laity assemble here from all over this widely scattered jurisdiction for services and conferences."

On the Cathedral's role as a center of learning, the Bishop declared:

"Just two weeks ago, seventy scholars of this country came together for a day to participate in a learned colloquium in memory of Nicholas Berdyaev. They represented the Roman Catholic communion, Eastern Orthodox, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Anglican, Methodist, Baptist, Reformed, Congregational, Quaker and Jew.

"And it is worth noting that the first address was given by a Roman Catholic, the second by a Jew and the third by one of our Cathedral clergy.

"But even more significant was the fact that, at the conclusion, all present attended a memorial service, in St. Saviour's Chapel of this Cathedral, sung by the Dean and seminarians of St. Vladimir's Theological Seminary."

Another aspect of the Cathedral was pointed out by the Bishop as he said:

"The Cathedral is not a place of worship only for Episcopalians and committed Christians. Any child of God is welcome here—the unchurched, the lapsed, the pagan, the doubter, the religiously disaffected seekers."

Churchwomen's Annual Meeting, Elections May 7

The Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of New York will hold their annual meeting and election of officers on Saturday, May 7, at the Cathedral and Synod House.

The meeting will begin at 10:30 a.m. with Holy Communion and the United Thank Offering Ingathering. Bishop Wetmore will be the preacher.

The service will be followed by luncheon in Synod House. The business session will begin at 1:00 p.m., with Bishop Donegan making an address.

Chairman of the Nominating Committee is Mrs. Landes Lewitin. Four members from each organized branch of the Episcopal Churchwomen will be entitled to vote in the elections.

Pleasantville Firemen Attend Annual Service

Seventy-five firemen attended a special service at St. John's, Pleasantville, and heard a sermon on the burning of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Known as the Fireman's Service, the observance is an annual activity of the Pleasantville Fire Department. Each year it is held in a different church.

Beginning at 8:00 p.m. on Sexagesima Sunday, the service followed the Order of Evening Prayer. The Old Testament lesson, Daniel 3:1-26, told of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego being cast into the fiery furnace. The New Testament lesson was Luke 22:24. Both were read by Fire Commissioner Charles Jahne, a member of St. John's.

The parish's rector, the Rev. Bradford W. Ketchum, pointed out in his sermon that Lot's wife was not ready for the unexpected. Churchmen and firemen must always be ready for any eventuality, he said.

The firemen, who came in their dress uniforms, were accompanied by their wives. After the service, firemen's wives who are members of St. John's were hostesses at a reception.

Though they did not do so this year, the men have in some years driven to the special service in their fire engines.

Church of Christ the King Is Dedicated

Interior of the Church of Christ the King in the Rondout Valley. Seating capacity is 150 in the nave and 30 in the choir loft, which is to the immediate right of the altar.

Christ the King's Chapel of St. Peter and St. John. The new church replaced St. Peter's, Stone Ridge, and St. John's, High Falls. The chapel's altar is from St. Peter's and the altar furnishings from St. John's.

First Church Built With Loan Aid From 175th Revolving Fund

Over 500 persons witnessed the dedication of the Church of Christ the King in the Rondout Valley on Sunday, March 20. It is the first church to be completed with part of its construction costs being met by a loan from the 175th Anniversary Revolving Fund.

The new church, of contemporary design, was dedicated by Bishop Donegan. The Bishop also administered Confirmation to 46 persons and received two from the Roman Catholic Church. They were from the Church of Christ the King, St. Paul's, Pleasant Valley, and Ascension, West Park.

11 Miles from Kingston

Located on Route 213, the new church is between High Falls and Stone Ridge, 11 miles from Kingston. It replaces Stone Ridge's St. Peter's and High Falls' St. John's. Both towns are within a mile of the new church.

The Church of Christ the King is an assisted parish with 150 communciants. Priest-in-charge is the Rev. David Arnold, who held the same position at St. Peter's and St. John's since 1954.

The buildings of the Church of Christ the King were designed by William H. van Benschoten, consulting architect for the Department of Missions. Construction was by James H. Schoonmaker & Son, of Kingston.

Building Plan

The new plant consists of a main building containing the church itself, a chapel, a parish hall (capacity of 130 for a meal), four Sunday school rooms, an office and a kitchen.

California redwood was used for the exposed beams. The cross over the altar is of redwood and mahogany with a silver-leafed inset. It was built by Sidney W. Gray, junior warden of the church,

The rectory is a few steps behind the main building. Of contemporary design also, it contains four bedrooms, two baths, living room, dining room, kitchen, basement and garage. Father and Mrs. Arnold and their three children expect to move into the rectory the middle of April.

Book on History of the Cross Is Work Of Canon West and Notre Dame Artist

By the Rev. Harold R. Landon
Canon Precentor
Cathedral of St. John the Divine

THE HISTORY OF THE CROSS. By Norman Laliberte and Edward N. West. The Macmillan Co. $15.00.

A theologian of our time has pointed out that a genuine symbol has the quality of participating in that which it symbolizes, and therefore can never be replaced. "The History of the Cross" illuminates this truth, and is an important contribution to the fuller understanding of the central symbol of the Christian faith.

It may come as a surprise to many to discover that the symbol of the cross is wider than Christianity and appears in the universal history of mankind. Evidence of this is to be seen in the fact that men of ancient times used a symbol of "the Earth as a complete circle with a cross filling it." This is but one example "of the wellnigh universal use of the cross prior to the Christian era."

Perhaps the most striking illustration in the book is the last one, which is a photograph of a crystal of metal at the tip of a platinum needle — magnified 750,000 times, which shows a remarkable configuration of atoms in the form of a cross. Is this perhaps "a newly discovered fellow creature crying out for Baptism, under the saving Sign"?

A Roman Catholic philosopher of culture, Christopher Dawson, has written, "Christian civilization was inaugurated by the acceptance of the cross as the standard — in hoc signo, vinces." "The History of the Cross" traces the events in the Old Testament background and universal history which "prefigure" the Cross, and the events in the New Testament and Early Church by which the Cross was "transfigured" into the standard of Christian civilization. It shows how the gradual unfolding of the meaning of the Cross is to be seen in the step by step development of its use and representation as a symbol. Believing that "the mystical approach is sound religion," it sets forth the Cross as the "symbol of a mystery," "so that all may understand by means of it the depths of the humiliation of the word of God."

This is a work of singular devotion. An Anglican scholar (our own Canon Sacrist at the Cathedral) and a Roman Catholic artist (head of the Art Department of St. Mary's College, Notre Dame, Indiana) have united their unusual abilities of the highest artistic and scholarly integrity in which text skillfully reinforces illustrations and illustrations imaginatively reinforce text. Artists will find the many line drawings in brilliant color exciting.

"Art in the service of religion" perhaps best describes this brilliant and profound book. Careful reading and patient study will bring refreshment of spirit, and help to fulfill the ancient prayer of the Church that "the Cross being set up, doth command every created being to sing the most pure Passion of him who was lifted up thereon."

Protestant Council Re-elects Dr. Taylor

The Rev. Gardner C. Taylor, pastor of the Concord Baptist Church of Christ, Brooklyn, has been re-elected president of the Protestant Council of the City of New York. He began his third one-year term last month.

Dr. G. C. Taylor

When Dr. Taylor was first elected president of the Protestant Council in 1958, he became the first Negro, the first Baptist, and the youngest man to hold that office.

The 41-year-old clergyman is an officer and member of many church and civic organizations, including membership on the New York City Board of Education. His church has a membership of 10,200.

Dr. Taylor's speaking engagements have included talks in Denmark, England and Australia.

The Diocese of New York, through both appointed and elected representatives, participates in many phases of the work of the Protestant Council.

Incarnation Camp Had Youths of 41 Diocese Churches Last Season

Judging by its 1959 season, Incarnation Camp will this year have registrations from boys and girls of many churches in the Diocese. Last year there were campers from nineteen Episcopal churches in Manhattan, seventeen in Westchester and five in the Bronx.

In addition, the Ivoryton, Conn., camp had boys and girls from Long Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Puerto Rico and several other areas.

Registrations in 1959 also reflected the scope of the camp's registrations in another aspect. There were 154 white boys and girls, 22 Negro, 17 Puerto Rican, 3 Peruvian and 2 American-Chinese.

Incarnation Camp is for boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 14. The boys' section and the girls' section are a half-mile apart.

The camp is sponsored by All Angels' Farm, The Girls' Friendly Society and the Church and Chapel of the Incarnation, Manhattan. Of the 198 campers in 1959, 146 were Episcopalians. The remainder represented 14 other denominations.

Episcopal Membership Stands at 3,359,048

The Episcopal Church has a membership of 3,359,048 baptized persons, of which 2,069,167 are listed as communicants. These figures, listed in the Episcopal Church Annual for 1960, are based on 1959 reports.

Compared with 1958, the number of baptized persons increased 2.57 percent and communicants 3.04 percent. The nation's population increased 1.7 percent.

The Episcopal Church's 2.57 membership gain is less than the average of all American churches, however. The Yearbook of American Churches for 1960 reports this figure to be 5 percent.

Designer Hebrew Candlesticks Dies

Aristide B. Cianfarani, who designed the massive seven-branched candlesticks ( Menorah ) which stand on either side of the Cathedral's high altar, died recently at his home in Providence, R.I., at the age of 64.

Used in synagogues throughout the world, the Menorah were given to the Cathedral by the late Adolph Ochs, publisher of the The New York Times. They are bronze overlaid with gold.

In keeping with the size of the Cathedral, the Menorah are twelve feet high. Each light, including its marble base, weighs more than a ton.

They were designed after the one used in Solomon's Temple and represented on the Arch of Titus.

At their dedication in 1930, Bishop Manning said:

"This is the first time that they (the Menorah) have ever shone in a Christian cathedral. They will be to us a symbol of the relation between the Old and New Testaments and will portray the debt owed by Christianity to Judaism."

Bible History Exhibit At St. Paul's Chapel

An extensive exhibit on the history of the Bible will be on display until Easter at St. Paul's Chapel, Trinity Parish. The chapel is located at 11 Vesey Street, near City Hall in downtown Manhattan.

The exhibit is set up along a side aisle of the chapel and runs the entire length of the nave. Shown, through text and illustration, is the history of the Holy Scriptures from the time of the earliest Old Testament writings to the Revised Standard Version of today. Facsimilies of pages of many famous Bibles are included.

Several of the panels show the influence of the Bible on today's theater, writing, art and other forms of expression.

All work connected with the exhibit — research, design and construction — was done by the Rev. D. A. Lowe, a curate at St. Paul's.

The exhibit may be seen Monday through Saturday from 8:30 to 6:00. On Sunday it may be seen until 5:00.

Shut-in Book Service

Trinity Parish, Manhattan, has instituted a special library service for shut-ins.

A catalog of all the library's books is sent on request and selections may be made by phone or letter. For maximum convenience in returning the borrowed books, the library encloses a printed return label in its "jiffy-bag" package. The borrower need only reseal the book package and affix the label.

In addition to books on religion, the library has quality fiction and volumes on history, travel, the fine arts and many other subjects.

Dominican Republic Gets First Bishop: Former P.R. Canon

The Rev. Canon Paul A. Kellogg has been consecrated and becomes the first Bishop of the Missionary District of the Dominican Republic. The district has been under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of the Missionary District of Haiti.

The consecration, by Presiding Bishop Arthur Lichtenberger, was held March 9 at the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist, San Juan, Puerto Rico, where the newly-consecrated Bishop has been a canon.

The Dominican Republic (formerly San Domingo) is on the same West Indies island as the Republic of Haiti. President of the Dominican Republic is Generalissimo Trujillo.

N. Y. Church Club Honors New Bishop

The Rev. Canon Stuart Wetmore, now the Rt. Rev. Stuart Wetmore, was the principal speaker at a reception and dinner given in his honor by the Church Club of New York on February 29 at the Plaza Hotel.

Among the 78 Church Club members and guests present were the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York, and the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of New York.

God in a Box

In his address, entitled "God in a Box Means Church in the Doldrums," the guest of honor called on Churchmen not to make a division between their personal and spiritual lives.

"God in a box," he declared, "perpetuates a dichotomy between worship and vocation, between religion and the normal fabric of daily existence."

Pointing out the need for an expanded men's program, he stated that:

More Men's Work Planned

"It is my understanding that the Bishop of New York and his Suffragans will move with greater determination to establish stronger work among the men of the Church. It is my hope that the relationship between a man's work and his worship can be a major question raised by such a program."

Presiding at the testimonial dinner was Dr. Thomas C. Pollock, president of the Church Club and dean of the Washington Square College of Arts and Science, New York University.

THE OFFERING OF MAN

By HARRY BLAMIRES. The book is about the Incarnation, how God became fully man, and how, in response, man's offering to God must be fully human. Mr. Blamires gives five ways in which we may make our offering the full one that it ought to be. If the Church is to make any impact on the world, our own offerings must be complete.

Harry Blamires is one of America's best-known English authors. He is Principal Lecturer in English at King Alfred's College, Winchester. The Offering of Man is an Episcopal Book Club selection. $2.50

THE BEATITUDES AND MODERN LIFE

By HARRY HUTCHISON. "I am convinced," says Dr. Hutchison in the Foreword to this book, "that Christianity is the most practical and relevant religion for twentieth-century living, and I believe that the Beatitudes — by what they plainly state and by what they clearly imply — contain the heart of religion. They suggest in an incisive way what real, personal Christianity is.

Dr. Hutchison served two congregations in Scotland before he was called in 1957 to become the minister of St. Paul's, Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, where he is now serving. $2.25 by a member of the Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan. She is Miss Judith Speyer, the councilor to Protestant students at Hunter College.

The symbol, which happened to be drawn at the rector's desk, combines a cross, dove and flame and interweaves the Crucifixion, Resurrection and the Holy Spirit.

The United States arm of the World's Student Christian Federation is the National Student Christian Federation. The National Canterbury Association of the Episcopal Church is a member of the national organization.

Church Bulletin Plea Flaunted -- By Dog

It was just before the beginning of the 11:00 o'clock service. Members of the congregation were in their pews reading the parish bulletin. One of the pieces they were reading was a plea from the rector for less noise and talking in church before and after services.

While this was going on, a dog wandered into church. The rector tried to collar him and lead him out. One man's foot on one dog's paw, one loud yipe, and one red-faced rector.

Well, anyway, the bulletin didn't say anything about dogs having to keep quiet.

Diocese to Hold 175th Anniversary Service

The official opening of the observance of the 175th Anniversary Year of the Diocese of New York will be marked by a celebration service of thanksgiving in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine at 4:00 p.m. on Sunday, May 22.

The Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop, will be the preacher at the service, which will be featured by a massed choir of 1,000 voices.

It is expected that several exhibits will be on display in the Cathedral in connection with the celebration year. These will include mounted photographs of each church building in the Diocese.

Aside from being an important "birthday" for the Diocese, the 175th Anniversary observance has been the incentive to accumulate a fund for constructing new and expanding present church facilities in urban areas to accommodate shifting populations, and to establish a revolving fund for use under loan grants to suburban and rural parishes for expansion of their facilities to grasp the opportunities presented through population shifts and increases.

Bishop Lichtenberger

To date, the 175th Anniversary Fund has made possible the new Church House at St. Paul's, Bronx; a new rectory for the Church of the Holy Communion at Lake Mahopac; a new church, parish house and rectory for the Church of Christ the King in the Rondout Valley; and a rectory at Red Oaks Mill.

Presently under construction and financed either by grant or loan are the new St. Andrew's Church at Clason Point; the new parish house for St. Margaret's Church, Bronx, and the new All Saints Chapel at Valley Cottage. Several other requests for construction loans are presently under consideration.

Two Priests of Diocese Lead Community Forum in Mahopac on Youth, Prejudice

Two clergymen of the Diocese took leading roles in a community forum attended by 150 Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews of the Lake Mahopac area. Subject of the forum was the conflict of interests and loyalties in contemporary community life.

The two clergymen are the Rev. Louis L. Mitchell, Jr., vicar of the Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, who originated the forum idea and designed the format, and the Rev. E. J. Rooney, acting director of the Department of Christian Education, who was the forum leader. Also participating was A. E. Brownbridge, director of the Department of Christian Social Relations, who led one of the discussion groups.

Additional interest in the forum topic was created by attempts of Wiltwyck School to relocate at Yorktown Heights, near Lake Mahopac. Wiltwyck is a school for emotionally disturbed children.

Discussion at the forum was stimulated by a film on the school's program, "The Quiet One."

In addition to the problems of disturbed childrens' adjustment to life, forum participants discussed prejudice and barriers between groups of people. Lake Mahopac, a summer resort, has a largely Gentile population in the winter and a heavy influx of Jewish people in the summer.

The forum was originally scheduled for the Church of the Holy Communion but, because of widespread interest, it was moved to the larger facilities of Mahopac Central School.

Sponsors of the forum were the Mahopac Parent Teachers Association and Central School's Department of Adult Education. Mr. Mitchell teaches a course in "Great Western Thought" in the adult education school.

Leaders of the eight separate discussion groups were Mr. Brownbridge, two mental health clinic supervisors, two psychologists, a school social worker and two members of the faculty of Mahopac Central School.

Construction of St. Andrew's Begins; Major 175th Anniversary Fund Project

A major project of the 175th Anniversary Fund program was undertaken last month with the start of construction of the new St. Andrew's church, parish house and rectory on Castle Hill Avenue, Clason Point, in southeastern Bronx. Completion is scheduled in ten months. Cost will be over $450,000.

The new church is being built by the Diocese's Department of Missions with money contributed to the 175th Anniversary Fund. Major supporter of the project is St. James, Manhattan, which has to date given $286,000 to the Anniversary Fund and earmarked this money for the new St. Andrew's construction program.

Located two blocks from the huge new Castle Hill Houses, the church will be the first one in the immediate vicinity of the 2,000 families who are now moving in as elements of the project are completed.

Until the housing project was built, the area was one of open fields, though expensive property nonetheless. Realizing that the project would create a critical need for an Episcopal church, the Department of Missions in 1957 bought an acre of land at Castle Hill and Lafayette Avenues. The $45,000 needed to buy this land was given by the late Eugene W. Stetson. The Diocese later bought another half-acre.

Designed by the architectural firm of Adams and Woodbridge, the new church will be of contemporary design, incorporating some unusual features that will combine functional and esthetic qualities.

Church, parish hall and rectory will be combined in a single structure. The church itself will be about 100 feet long and 50 feet wide. Normal seating will accommodate 210 persons with 40 more seats available in the side aisle angular areas. Both the parish hall and church floors will be slightly above ground level.

The vicar's apartment will be between the church and parish hall with entrance from the tower.

One unusual aspect of the parish hall will be the effort to retain flexibility in use by acoustical treatment. The ceiling will be acoustical and will contain radiant heating panels. With the need to consider the location of radiators thus eliminated and with the noise level reduced, portable dividers can be used to accommodate any size group.

Daylight will enter the church through lancet windows made of faceted glass in concrete. The thick pieces of colored glass will be set in patterns symbolic of St. Andrew. In addition to their beauty, these windows require no maintenance and are relatively indestructible.

The Bishop recently announced the appointment of the Rev. Wray E. MacKay as vicar of St. Andrew's. He will assume the post on June 1 and will reside in the rectory of old St. Andrew's, about a mile from the new church.

Services will continue to be held in the old church during construction of the new plant. The new vicar is now rector of St. Mark's Church, Plainfield, Indiana. He was formerly assistant minister at St. Peter's Church, West 20th Street, Manhattan.

When the city fathers of Helena, Montana, recently decided to change the name of the main street, it resulted in a rather ominous new address for the state's diocesan offices. Here's the way the new letterhead reads:

It seems that Last Chance Gulch was the name of the mining camp which put Helena on the map. A miner took one last chance and struck gold in the gulch where Helena is now located.

Johnny Alvarez has never seen a field of grass. He never had a bed all to himself, because he shares the family's two-room city apartment with nine brothers and sisters. He has never flown a kite or climbed a tree, for there is no room or money for kites and there are no trees to climb.

But Johnny has something to look forward to. This summer he will spend two weeks in one of the most beautiful sections of New York State. He will learn how to swim in the first lake he has ever seen. He will hike through fields lined by tall trees. His bed will be all his own. At mealtime, he will drink all the milk he wants. And to make the prospect even more exciting, he will be going with three of his brothers and a sister.

The Alvarez children's two-week adventure is being sponsored by the 129-year-old New York Episcopal City Mission Society, one of whose projects has been the maintenance for the last 70 years of camps for underprivileged children.

The Elko Lake Camps site was purchased in 1943. The two camps, one for boys and one for girls, adjoin each other. They are located at Parksville, N. Y., near Liberty, 110 miles from New York City.

The children who go to Elko Lake, over a thousand this year, are referred to the City Mission Society by any number of Episcopal parishes, social agencies, individuals. Many are homeless, awaiting foster homes or independent age in orphanages. Others are products of broken or unbelievably deprived homes and are brought to the attention of those in charge through some of the other services offered by the Society.

The Society also has a camp for children too young for Elko. St. Barnabas House, the Society's temporary shelter for children, cares for 75 little boys and girls every day of the year. In summer they are sent, along with over 400 other little children, to the Society's Junior Camp in Englewood, N. J.

The staff at Elko Lake Camps doesn't believe in miracles. They know that for every child who makes a great deal of progress, for every child who changes permanently for the better or discovers a new and wonderful part of himself, there are many who will forget all they have learned or go back to a delinquent or near-delinquent existence in the city. Two weeks isn't a very long time to change the habits and attitudes of a lifetime, no matter how short that lifetime may have been. But many educators feel, encouragingly enough, that the training received in this short period is equal to two months' experience in a public school system. And at this formative age (9-14), two months is a worthwhile consideration in the training of any child.

Broadly speaking, the first goal of the camp is the teaching of the cooperation and responsibility that go with group living. A child raised in the tougher sections of the city lives, literally, in a jungle atmosphere. Everyone is on his own. Where there is no love in the home, the child may join a neighborhood gang, where the jungle atmosphere is intensified to the point of physical violence with other gangs. Hostility is keynoted here. The world is no good —it's against you—you have to fight for survival. Under the skilled direction of the camp counselors, some of these defenses may be lowered, some of the "spirit of fair play" substituted.

Another goal of the Elko Lake staff is to install a sense of appreciation and familiarity with the world of nature in their city-bred charges. Many of the children have never been closer to a stream of water than the opened neighborhood fire hydrant on a summer day and are frightened by the rowboats and swimming which are a part of everyday life at the camp. Others are awed by so much open space. An overnight hike with a camp fire at the end of the journey is an event equalled only by the thrill of cooking one's own food over the coals for the first time. ("Man, we're just like those crazy Indians!" exulted one first-time hiker.) Trees are primarily for climbing, not shade. Likewise, grass is for rolling in, not decoration.

Since many children are referred to Elko Lake Camps by their home parishes, chapel is an accepted and familiar part of life at the camp. Vespers is not compulsory, but is well attended by campers of all faiths. And the participation of the youthful congregation in the service would put many a parish to shame. Hymns are led by the 50-voice choir, an optional activity open to all. "Fairest Lord Jesus" is a favorite with everyone, and visitors agree that seldom have they heard it sung so beautifully.

An unexpected virtue of almost every child in camp is a passion for cleanliness. The washing and ironing rooms are full every hour of the day; counselors must lock them at certain times to insure full attendance at meals and activities. One ten-year-old girl came to Elko Lake with a suitcase full of clean clothes, but an hour after her arrival was elbow deep in suds with the freshly ironed clothes tossed carelessly in the corner awaiting their turn. A mystified counselor questioned her about this. Smiling ecstatically, the girl shrugged and kept on washing. "It's so much fun," she said.

A scene of great activity at all times is the infirmary, on the surface an ominous sign, but actually not at all to be feared. The nurse explains that despite her enormous number of patients, very few serious illnesses or accidents occur in the average season. "The kids love the attention they get when they're 'ill'."

But the nurse's work is not by any means limited to the care of sick campers. All strayed or found pets seem to wind up at the infirmary.

"In just five weeks I got 38 snakes, 4 skunks, a possum, and 3 injured birds put on my porch."

Does this annoy her? "Oh, no, I'm used to it," she explains somewhat philosophically. "The only time I got a little angry was the night I fell over six frogs in a cage and they got loose in the bedroom."

Next to eating, the campers seem to enjoy singing most. A regular workshop in folk singing is a popular afternoon activity. Talent shows, held practically every week, feature groups who have rehearsed a song or songs together, as well as soloists belting out their numbers without benefit of instrumental accompaniment. After all the per-

While caring for the campers is the nurse's assigned responsibility, she often is pressed into service as a veterinarian for various kinds of friendly animals that stray into camp and are adopted as pets.

Bishop Appoints 3 Honorary Canons

The Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York, has appointed three men as honorary canons of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine. The appointments were confirmed by the Cathedral's Board of Trustees.

The three new honorary canons are:

The Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick C. Grant, retired professor of biblical theology at Union Theological Seminary and now a lecturer at Oxford University.

The Rev. Dr. Cuthbert A. Simpson, dean of Christ Church, Oxford, and regius professor of Hebrew at Oxford University.

The Cathedral has one other honorary canon, the Rt. Rev. Stuart Wetmore, Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York.

Apprentice Program Begun At Elko Lake

A counselor apprenticeship program that may serve as a model for other Episcopal camps in the United States will be undertaken this summer at Elko Lake Camps.

The camps, one for boys and one for girls, adjoin each other on a site at Parksville, N. Y. Both camps are operated by the New York Episcopal City Mission Society.

Under the new program, 20 boys and girls 16 or 17 years of age will serve as apprentice counselors for the entire summer. Most summer camps do not employ counselors under 18 years of age and most camps, particularly for underprivileged children, do not take campers who are 16 or 17.

Each apprentice will contribute four hours a day to various aspects of the camp program. For this he will be given $100 credit toward the $350 fee for apprentice counselors. Scholarships will be available for those unable to pay the fee.

Apprentices will help in planning, organizing and evaluating the camps' programs and will study with the experienced professional camp staff and with visiting church leaders. They will learn more about themselves and their real interests and leadership abilities, as well as about children and their needs and behavior.

The new program was drawn up by an advisory committee of camp and youth experts headed by the Rt. Rev. Stuart Wetmore, Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese. The committee was formed at the invitation of Dr. Francis G. Geer, a member of the Mission Society's Board of Managers and chairman of the Elko Lake Camps Committee, and of the Rev. William E. Sprenger, director of the Society.

Young people interested in becoming an apprentice counselor should write to George New, director of Elko Lake Camps, New York Episcopal City Mission Society, 38 Bleecker St., N. Y. 12, New York.

formers have finished, the audience is ready to sing, too, and a leader directs the whole camp in earsplitting song.

Other favorite occupations include arts and crafts, drama, creative writing, modern dance, field athletics, boating and swimming.

But activities are not all so neatly classified. An especially unneat activity falls under the heading of "Harmless Mischief," a natural yet discouraged part-time occupation of every child since time began. Particularly popular are the small and ordoriferous striped animals that wander into camp occasionally. The skunks are likely to count these chance encounters unfortunate for themselves, as well as for their victims, as they will most certainly end up in someone's makeshift cage.

But the Elko Lake Camps' staff is noted for its tolerance of mischief that comes from the exuberance of a happy child. Nondestructive pranks are a sign of health; they demonstrate the child's realization that "fun" is not synonomous with "forbidden" or "wrong." In this age of social upheaval and wars on the city streets, such a realization will in itself provide ample justification for the work going on at Elko Lake Camps, a work that is made possible by the help of friends of the New York Episcopal City Mission Society.

One of the 400 "rubbings" that will be on exhibit in St. James' parish house May 8-21. A team of experts was commissioned by St. James' to secure the unusual art pieces from throughout England.

May 8-21 Art Show At St. James' Will Feature 'Rubbings'

The fourth annual international art exhibition and sale to be presented by Manhattan's St. James' Church from May 8 through May 21 will feature an ancient and little-known art form: rubbings of 13th through 16th century English memorial brasses.

In many parts of England (as also on the continent) local stone was too soft to permit durable carvings of effigies in semi-round for use on the tops of tombs or as memorial wall plaques. Large brass plates to be set in stone therefore came into use, etched or carved in low relief. Sometimes they marked the actual tombsites; often they were simply memorials to benefactors or illustrious former parish members or church officials. (Many crusaders, for example, died overseas and but for these brasses would have had no memorial.)

The brasses are often beautiful in themselves, portraying knights in their armor, lords and ladies in costumes of the age, bishops, abbots, parish priests and monastics in the vestments of their order and period, merchants with the symbols of their trades. All reflect a fascinating picture of these Chaucer to Shakespeare times.

Discoloration both to brasses and to the surrounding stone caused by time and grime make these memorials pointless to photograph and often difficult to see. A "rubbing," made by placing a large sheet of thin but tough white paper over the brass and rubbing it carefully with a black (or, for this show for the first time, a red) wax crayon produces a clear and exciting image.

With permission from local vicars or deans, and on the recommendation of the English Monumental Brass Society, some 80 churches or cathedrals were visited this past summer by a team of experts commissioned by St. James' Art Show. Sites varied from tiny country chapels in Northumbria, where services are no longer held—to Westminster Abbey where ropes had to be installed to protect the "rubbers" from crowds of tourists.

All the rubbings exhibited—over 400—are offered for sale. Profits—if such there be—will be donated to the Historic Churches Preservation Trust, of which Queen Elizabeth is patron and the Archbishop of Canterbury is chairman. The Trust, in the name of both Church and State, seeks to preserve or restore churches of notable historic or architectural value, whenever groups of present-day worshippers or "friends" will assume responsibility for future care of the restorations.

Previous exhibitions in the St. James' succession of art enterprises have included primitive paintings of Haiti, new Japanese prints, and contemporary Canadian Eskimo sculpture.

William B. Jones, of New York, was in charge of collecting and making the rubbings. Frederick Noyes is architect of the exhibition's installation. The Rev. William J. Chase is the over-all coordinator.

The exhibition is open every day May 8 through May 21 from 1:00 to 6:00 p.m. in St. James' Parish House at 865 Madison Avenue.

Musical Milestone for the Canterbury Choral Society was its performance of Bach's "St. Matthew Passion" at the Three Hour Service in the Church of the Heavenly Rest on Good Friday, 1957. The church overflowed with listeners, filling the side aisles and the galleries upstairs, as well as the rear of the church and balcony. Bach wrote the work for two orchestras and two choruses. Canterbury performed in that way. The group's last performance was "The Creation."

Canterbury Choral Society Marks Ninth Year

Over 1,500 persons packed the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan, to hear the 100-voice and orchestra Canterbury Choral Society's presentation of "The Creation." Held on May 1, the performance marked the completion of the society's ninth season.

The Canterbury Choral Society is something of a paradox. It operates under a church roof but it is not solely for and of the parish; it is more of a community venture. It strives for professional performance, but 95 percent of its singers are volunteers and definitely not professionals. It is forever in debt, or just squeaking by to pay its expenses, for it is not underwritten by the parish, and depends for support on the generosity of its congregations, members, sympathetic parishioners and parish organizations.

But it refuses to forfeit the costly productions it feels are vital to its purpose: to perform great sacred music in the church proper, using the composer's original instrumentation. It emphasizes its amateur membership, yet persuades eminent professional singers and instrumentalists to perform with it for token fees. It hopes it is drawing people closer to the church by offering the best musical performances possible to the Glory of God. Despite its full houses for every performance, it can't measure its success in this realm.

Although the Canterbury Choral Society annually draws to the Church of the Heavenly Rest about 6,000 people, many of whom have never before been inside of the church on Fifth Avenue at 90th, there are those in the church who claim that Canterbury does not pull its parish weight . . . because Canterbury can't prove that its work has actually brought people into the Christian community. Its congregations naturally tend to be anonymous before, during and after performances — except for the listeners who take the time to write letters (and they do) in praise of the group's efforts. The fact that most of the singers are neither members of Heavenly Rest nor even nominal Episcopalians bothers some parishioners, even though every year choristers who are themselves members of the church notice more Choral Society faces in the regular Sunday morning congregations.

Outward and Evangelical

Canterbury's Christian task seems to be outward and evangelical. On this point, the Canterbury Choral Society's chaplain, the Rev. L. Roper Shamhart, has this to say:

"The musical programs of the Choral Society have not only enriched the life of the parish, by the presentation of great music from the Church's past, but, more importantly, have borne a clear witness to the musical community in New York that the Church not only respects her musical heritage but also gives opportunity for the use of the new music being written for her."

Charles Walker Conductor

The visionary behind the Canterbury Choral Society is its founder, Charles Dodsley Walker, the parish organist and choirmaster. He is a product of the Cathedral Choir School (plus Trinity College and Harvard) and credits his decision to become a professional church musician to the Cathedral's influence on him as a 12-year-old chorister. That Mr. Walker is dedicated to the lofty idea of restoring the standard of church music to the height it knew in the 16th century and into Mozart's time, is unquestionable.

As a result, the Choral Society in 1960 finds itself nine years old and healthy, with a national reputation for good work, an audience following in New York and the recipient of numerous plaudits in the press for its 33 presentations. Ross Parmenter and John Briggs, both of the New York Times, Allen Hughes of the Herald Tribune, and musical publications like The American Organist, The Diapason, and Choral and Organ Guide, have been particularly generous in their praise and encouragement.

The group's musical competence has grown in quite direct ratio with its membership and audience attendance figures. In December, 1951, an unknown unnamed group of 46 singers gave Handel's "Messiah" before a congregation of 510. In March, 1955, 94 singers performed Brahm's "Requiem" for 1550 people.

Contrast this with the Society's performance of Bach's "St. Matthew Passion" for the Three Hour Service (as Bach intended it) on Good Friday, 1957. Two orchestras and 113 singers performed for 2,500 people, many of whom stood reverently for the entire three hours. Verdi's "Requiem" last November drew more than 2,000 people, and for "The Messiah",

Holy Nativity Erects Bulletin Board Next To Church Door Bus Stop

Having a bus stop about 20 feet away from the church door can be an asset or a liability, depend ing on how you look at it.

Until recently, parishioners of the Church of the Holy Nativity, Bronx, thought only of the disturbance made by the buses during services. Now, though this disturbance is still present, they also think of the opportunity presented by having scores of people at the church door.

Reason for this new thinking was the parish's installation of a church bulletin board on the fence right at the bus stop. The bulletin board, headed "Bus Stop Reading," carries the church newsletter, announcements of coming events, and interesting items from the local papers. Dozens of people waiting for buses read the material.

Commenting on the bulletin board, the church's rector, the Rev. Robert W. Cromey, called it, "an effort to speak to people in the neighborhood who know the church only because it is by the bus stop. It is another means of promoting the mission and work of the Church."

Seamen's Church Institute to Build Recreation Center in Port Newark

Seamen's Church Institute has announced plans to build a recreation center on a two-acre site in Newark, N. J.

To be known as the Port Newark Station and Sports Field, the facility will be the first to be established by the Institute in a program to provide services close to docking areas in the Port of New York. The Institute now maintains the world's largest shore center for active seamen at 25 South Street in lower Manhattan.

The new station, which will be on land leased from the Port of New York Authority, will be built in two stages.

The first stage calls for construction of a single-story recreation building and a soccer field. The building will have 2,500 square feet of floor space with a lounge, snack bar, dressing rooms, and offices for chaplains. Cost will be $85,000. Construction will be completed in the fall.

A chapel and additional recreation rooms will be included in the second stage of construction.

The new center will be staffed by trained Institute Counselors. Chaplains will be on call for consultation and to conduct services.

President of the Seamen's Church Institute is Franklin E. Vilas, who is also a member of the Diocese's Department of Christian Social Relations.

Over 3,000 Yonkers Students At Annual Religious Observance

Over 3,000 Protestant, Roman Catholic, Jewish and Orthodox high school students participated in Yonkers' annual Day of Religious Observance on March 13.

The observance is held each year on a day in Lent. Protestant participation is sponsored by the Yonkers Council of Churches.

Students who had released time cards signed by their parents were dismissed from classes at 9:30. Buses took them to one of the places of worship being used for the observance.

Centering on a topic aimed at provoking teen-age discussion, the Protestant students' theme was "What Bugs Us." Throughout the day, until 2:50, the students explored this topic, being aided by a speaker and a film. Small discussion groups were led by clergy of the city. The day was opened and closed with a service.

This year's Day of Religious Observance was attended by 2,210 Roman Catholic students, 670 Protestant, 405 Jewish and 40 Orthodox, for a total of 3,325.

Canterbury –

Christmas, 1959, nearly 3,000 people squeezed into the church. The Church of the Heavenly Rest seats only 970 people, so even after chairs have been added, many listeners must still stand.

Canterbury Was First

Canterbury was the first of the current crop of rising choral societies in New York churches to build a community chorus around its parish choir; and it was the first to utilize the best available talent as guest soloists—recognized singers of national reputation. It was the first, and may remain the only one, always to use the original instrumentation called for by the composer. And it was the first to express in action its belief that music performed in the church should attempt to offer a level of performance as high as the public expects from the secular concert stage. It has brought back from the concert hall works originally written for church performance and has revived lesser known, some virtually lost, sacred works too intimate for ordinary concert presentation.

Through Vaulted Arches

Since composers like Bach wrote with the church's acoustical and visual setting in mind, to hear a work performed as he intended, where he intended, is a moving experience musically, and often spiritually. For instance, brass instruments sound quite different, and often gloriously exalted, ringing through vaulted Gothic arches.

Canterbury rehearsals are held once a week, and generally there are only nine rehearsals (an hour and a half each) before a concert. The Society does only four programs a year, preferring the presentation of fewer and better prepared performances to an overcrowded schedule. Admission is, of course, free, though an offering is taken in the hope of defraying some of the costs.

Canterbury has set the challenge for other churches, particularly in New York, to do more than just service music, and to use instrumental instead of only organ accompaniment. It has had a continuing impact on church music and knows it is doing a good job in leading the public to expect first-rate performances of first-rate church music, for it can see the increasing size of its following, and notices with affection the number of churches which have taken up its program in some form or measure.

For Smaller Churches, Too

Can a smaller non-city parish successfully extend its ministry of music to include performances of large scale sacred works? Charles Walker insists that it can. An enterprising parish and organist can draw a chorus from the community, built around its own choir and around interested members of other choirs — if it schedules its rehearsals and services so as not to conflict.

The Episcopal Church can provide the services of its organist, and the church for rehearsals and services. If the parish shies away from using instruments because it thinks it can't afford them, it might take a leaf from Canterbury's book. The Church of the Heavenly Rest provides a home for Canterbury Choral Society but does not pay for its orchestra; Canterbury raises that money itself. So can any other chorus — if it wants to. And the money to attract good professional singers as soloists can be raised the same way.

Happily, the Episcopal churches in the Diocese of New York, especially the city parishes, have been the leaders in the new movement to reclaim for church music the glory it once knew, and New York critics have been generous in praising their efforts. There is no reason why, with a little ingenuity, other Episcopal parishes cannot take up this leadership in communities elsewhere.

Intercession Chapel Members Conducting Soul Searching Sessions

The Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish, is conducting a series of five week-end conferences to evaluate the life of the congregation.

Discussed at the conferences are such basic questions as: How are we doing? What are our objectives? Where do we go from here?

Each conference is attended by about 20 selected laymen and the chapel clergy. Of the five conferences, which begin Friday evening and go through Saturday, two are being held at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park, and three at the Chapel.

When the conference series is concluded in late June it is expected that a summary of the findings will be printed.

In charge of the conferences is the Rev. Roger Douglas, assistant at the Chapel of the Intercession. Fr. Douglas points out that the conferences give the congregation "an opportunity to evaluate in depth what we are doing and for the church staff and the average man in the pew to carry on this evaluation together. Conferences like these demonstrate that the ministry of the Church is not confined to round collars or professionals."

Zion Church Rector, 5 Members Visit Haitian Mission Adopted by Parish

It seems like a long way from Zion Church, Wappingers Falls, to Port-au-Prince, Haiti—unless you happen to be a member of Zion Church. The congregation has established such close contact with the West Indies island republic that the 1,600-mile distance is no major obstacle.

Illustrative of this is a trip which the rector of Zion and five of his parishioners recently took to Haiti to visit a missionary who the parish has been assisting.

Zion Church's close relationship with the missionary and his country began about five years ago, under the leadership of the Rev. J. J. Sharkey, rector of Zion at that time and now rector of St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining. Fr. Sharkey is greatly interested in Haiti and has spent his vacations there for some years.

The recent trip to Haiti was taken by the present rector, the Rev. A. H. Whisler, and by Miss Isabel Elliot, Richard Linge, Clinton Urey, Mrs. Richard Ogden and Miss Blanche Horton.

Traveling by jet, the group arrived in Haiti in 3½ hours. For the next two weeks they traveled with the missionary, the Rev. Pere Octave Lafontant, to see agricultural, educational and resettlement projects of the Missionary District of Haiti. The country, which is a little larger than New Hampshire, is an agricultural area, with coffee the principal crop.

On their first Sunday in Haiti, the visitors were feted at the parish of their adopted missionary. Over 800 Haitians came to the central parish to attend services and to honor their fellow Episcopalians. Fr. Whisler preached, and his sermon was translated into Creole a sentence at a time.

After the service the six visitors were seated under a bower of flowers (the temperature was 85) and entertained with native dances, Haitian songs and adaptations of American games.

Two of the visitors, Mrs. Richard Ogden and Richard Linge, each bought a sewing machine on their return and shipped it to the Haitian parish.

One couple in Zion Church, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall, have assumed the support of two Haitian orphans.

Last Christmas, the congregation of Zion sent a vast quantity of clothing to the impoverished country.

As the native language of Haiti is Creole, Fr. Whisler and his group were unable to understand many of the greetings accorded them. On the Sunday they were honored by the 800 Haitians, the welcoming speech was in Creole. One significant portion of this speech was translated, however:

"Welcome to the brothers of Zion Church to Haiti the Beautiful."

St. David's Adopts Guatemala Mission

An 85-family congregation that gave more than double its 1959 missionary quota has taken on a direct missionary responsibility of its own. The church, St. David's, Highland Mills, has adopted a mission in Bananera, Guatemala.

St. David's, itself a mission church of the Diocese, has adopted the Church of St. Michael and All Angels. The missioner in charge of the Central American congregation was a classmate at Virginia Theological Seminary (class of 1958) of the vicar of St. David's, the Rev. William S. Reisman.

Though the vestry and all organizations of St. David's send financial aid to the adopted mission, this is only a part of the concern shown. A prayer written specifically for the mission is said at every service and at the opening of every meeting of a parish organization. The prayer has also been sent to all homes for use in private devotions.

Other ways that St. David's plans to help the adopted mission are: sending of medicines, clothing and furnishings, doing Christmas shopping for the mission clergy, mimeographing, and sending personal letters to the clergy and parishioners.

"What we hope to accomplish," Mr. Reisman says, "is to show a particular mission that another church really cares about them. And, equally important, the project will enable our people to gain a real and direct understanding of the problems and accomplishments of a foreign mission."

Bishop Attacks Apartheid, Election Bias

The Bishop of New York has attacked South Africa's policy of apartheid as being "morally unsupportable, spiritually unpardonable, and shamefully tragic in its consequences."

Addressing the Diocesan Convention, Bishop Donegan said that, "The present tragedy of South Africa causes anguish and humiliation to every member of the family of Christ.

"In all humility I extend in your name, and in my own, to our brethren in South Africa—especially to my personal friends, the Most Rev. Joost de Blank, Archbishop of Capetown, and the Rt. Rev. Ambrose Reeves, Bishop of Johannesburg—our full backing and support."

Saying that it is not enough to be "righteously indignant," the Bishop asked that intercessions be offered in every church of the Diocese on Whitsunday, which he designated as a Day of Prayer for South Africa.

Conflicting Interests

On the situation in this country, the Bishop declared that:

"Racial tension exists here at home because there are people—some of whom are members of our own communion—who are unable to rise above the conflicting interests presented by the Gospel on the one hand, and economic and political pressures on the other.

"If people with opposing points of view clash and wear themselves out, each trying to overcome the other, then we shall surely sink to a sub-Christian existence and chaos will prevail."

The coming Presidential election was commented upon by Bishop Donegan as he said:

"There is no point in suggesting that we try to separate men from issues in our political thought and action. We are not electing a Protestant, a Roman Catholic or a Jew. We are electing a President of these United States. Any man who wears his religion on his sleeve and asks us to vote for him —or challenges us to vote against him—because of his religion, is 'using' God for his own selfish purposes. We do not need to be warned against such men. Their words and actions speak to us for them.

". . . We must decide, as between these men, on that one who shows most clearly that he dares to be guided in the final analysis by God and not by either 'church' or state."

Outlining some of the high points in the history of the Diocese during its 175 years of existence, the Bishop said that the first Convention was held in 1785 with five clergymen and eleven laymen representing six parishes ( Trinity Church, Manhattan; Trinity Church, New Rochelle; Christ Church, Poughkeepsie; St. Andrew's Walden; St. George's, Newburgh; and St. Andrew's, Staten Island. )

Today, he said, the Diocese of New York has 225 congregations and 532 clergy canonically resident or licensed to officiate, despite the fact that the original Diocese has been divided into the Dioceses of New York, Western New York, Albany, Long Island, Central New York, and Rochester.

Presents Four Challenges

Speaking on present conditions in the Diocese of New York, the Bishop named four challenges:

"The first and most difficult challenge facing us is the shift of population in the older areas of the city where deteriorated neighborhoods present perplexing problems. This involves serving the spiritual needs of people in the process of relocating, and deciding whether or not the church should move with the moving population or remain in the changed neighborhood.

"Second, is to minister to people moving into new multi-family, publicly or privately subsidized, housing projects where people are classified by economic status. As populations move or are moved to make way for public improvements, the impact on the churches involved makes adjustment difficult and painful.

"Third, is the migration of people of improved financial status into the suburban communities to get away from the congestion and sub-standard living conditions of blighted neighborhoods.

"Fourth, and least difficult to meet, is the movement of people into the upper part of the Diocese in consequence of the increasingly

Presiding Bishop Delivers Sermon

The Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop, addressed a congregation of 4,500 persons at a Service of Thanksgiving marking the 175th anniversary of the Diocese of New York. The service was held in the Cathedral at 4:00 p.m. on Sunday, May 22.

The Bishop and two Suffragan Bishops of the Diocese also took part in the service. Bishop Donegan extended a greeting. Bishop Wetmore read the first lesson and Bishop Boynton the second.

Adding to the splendor of the occasion was a 700-voice choir under the direction of Charles Dodsley Walker, organist and choirmaster at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan. The massed choir, made up of all age groups, was drawn from 32 churches in the Diocese.

Graphic evidence of the scope of the Diocese of New York was given by an exhibit in the Cathedral of photographs of all the churches in the Diocese. ( See page 14 ).

Diocesan Convention Opposes Capital Punishment, Repression in South Africa

The Convention of the Diocese of New York went on record at its meeting May 10 as being opposed to capital punishment.

Acting favorably on a resolution presented by the Diocese's Department of Christian Social Relations, the Convention resolved that it endorse the 1958 General Convention's opposition to capital punishment and that "this Convention (Diocesan) urge upon the authorities of New York State such legislative action as may bring about the abolition of capital punishment in this state."

Another resolution passed called upon the leaders of the two major political parties to include in their party platforms provision for a commission to study removal of "present injustices and racial and ethnic discriminations" in the immigration laws.

A resolution providing changes in Article IV of the Constitution of the Convention was passed. If it is again approved at the 1961 Convention, it will add to Article IV the following:

"Such as are present of the officers of the Convention and of the chairmen of committees, boards, and commissions required to report to the Convention shall be members of the Convention with voice but without vote."

Deplore and Protest

The Convention "deplored and protested" repression in South Africa and expressed its "admiration and sympathy" for the Archbishop of Capetown and other leaders of the Church of the Province of South Africa.

Another resolution on discrimination deplored recent events in South Africa and racial and ethnic conflict elsewhere. The resolution "commended to the people of this Diocese the Episcopal Churchmen for South Africa and the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity."

Passed also was a resolution amending Article IV of the Convention's Constitution so as to liberalize and clarify qualifications for clerical members. If it is again approved at the 1961 Convention, the amendment shall take effect.

The Convention supported the National Council of Churches and deplored recent attacks made upon it.

A resolution which was referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Business called for "a study of the need for and feasibility of expanding the parochial school system of this Diocese . . . " The committee did not recommend the resolution on the basis that the Diocese has no parochial school system. In a substitute resolution, the committee called upon the Convention to request the Division of Boarding and Day Schools (Department of Christian Education) to "study the need for and consider the feasibility of establishing a 'parochial school system' in this Diocese and to report its findings and recommendations to the Bishop of New York." This resolution was passed by the Convention.

Balloting Systems

The Convention tabled a resolution that called for amendments to the canons that would eliminate the Hare system of balloting at Conventions and provide for substitution of an alternate plan. The Convention then passed a resolution from the Committee on Canons, to which the original resolution had been referred, that called upon the Bishop to appoint a commission to study all systems of balloting and to report at the next Convention.

Also passed was a resolution on the 175th Anniversary Fund which read a follows:

Resolved: That the Council of the Diocese is requested to present the objectives of the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign when and where opportunity offers and that the Fund be left open on the books of the Treasurer for the receipt of additional gifts and payments on account of pledges."

Donald Peterson with part of organ he assembled for St. Andrew's Poughkeepsie. He saved the parish over $2,000 by using a do-it-yourself kit and his talents as an electronics engineer.

IBM Man Uses Kit, Builds Electronic Organ for Church

A new organ assembled by one of the parishioners was dedicated recently at St. Andrew's, Poughkeepsie, by Bishop Wetmore.

The instrument was built from a do-it-yourself kit purchased from the Schover Organ Co. Builder was Donald Peterson, an electronics engineer at I.B.M. Wiring and much of the assembling was done in Mr. Peterson's dining room. The project took three months.

Mr. Peterson undertook the complicated assemblage as a volunteer service to the church when the old organ threatened to sound its last note. The kit itself cost $600. A cabinet and other needed parts brought the total cost to about $750. A considerable saving resulted from using the old organ's console.

An organ comparable to the one Mr. Peterson assembled, an electronic type with 18 stops, would cost about $3,000.

Bishop Confers Honor on Six Laymen

Bishop Announces His Appointments Of Council Members, Dept. Heads

Bishop Donegan has announced his appointment of four clergymen and one layman to be members of the Council of the Diocese of New York.

The announcement was made at a June 2 Council Meeting, at which Bishop Boynton was re-elected secretary.

Those appointed by the Bishop are: the Rev. Dr. George W. Barrett, rector of Christ Church, Bronxville; the Rev. Robert C. Hunsicker, vicar of St. Paul's Chapel of Trinity Parish; the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, rector of St. Thomas, Manhattan; the Rev. Lemuel J. Winterbottom, rector of St. John's, Yonkers; and Mrs. J. Winston Fowlkes, St. James', Manhattan. The last three are reappointments.

The Bishop also announced his appointments as chairmen of the Council's departments. Fr. Winterbottom has been reappointed chairman of Christian Education. Fr. Hunsicker has been appointed chairman of Christian Social Relations, succeeding the Rev. Hugh D. McCandless. Leland S. Brown has been reappointed chairman of Finance. Dr. Barrett has been appointed chairman of Promotion, succeeding the Rev. Dr. James W. Kennedy. The Bishop is chairman ex-officio of the Department of Missions.

Other Council members assigned to departments are as follows:

Missions—The Rev. Gerald V. Barry, rector of Christ Church, Riverdale.

Christian Education—The Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, vicar of St. Augustine's and St. Christopher's Chapels of Trinity Parish; and Mrs. J. Winston Fowlkes.

Christian Social Relations—The Rev. Charles H. Graf, rector of St. John's, Manhattan; the Rev. Dr. John M. Krumm, chaplain at Columbia University; and Dr. Robert H. E. Elliott, Christ Church, Riverdale.

Ex-officio members of the Council are the Bishop (the president), Suffragan Bishops Charles F. Boynton and Stuart Wetmore, Archdeacons George F. Brätt and Richard E. McEvoy, and Dr. Theodor Oxholm, treasurer.

How Many Days Left?

Nobody can accuse the women of Holy Trinity, E. 88th St., Manhattan, of waiting until the last minute. They're working on Christmas items.

A recent church bulletin asks for volunteers to help make hospital Christmas menus. The menus, some 1,300 of which are placed on Christmas dinner trays at Metropolitan Hospital, are made by pasting Christmas card pictures on stiff paper. The paper is then folded. The hospital pastes a mimeographed copy of the Christmas menu on the inside.

Reports Given at Convention Disclose Wide Scope of Activites in Diocese

Reports of the Council, its five departments, and the 175th Anniversary Fund constituted one of the important items of business at the Diocesan Convention.

Because of the great amount of information contained in the reports, space limitations will permit our covering only the main, factual points. Certain items have been covered in both the Department of Missions and the 175th Anniversary Fund reports and in the Council and the Department of Finance reports. This has been done so that each report will be complete.

The Council—The original budgetary askings of the departments and affiliated agencies for 1960 were more than $100,000 over anticipated income, resulting in a special Council meeting and several Department of Finance meetings to bring about an adjustment. Parishes and missions have been giving only between 73% and 81% of their quotas since establishment of the Council in 1952.

Missions—Church house at St. Paul's, Bronx, completed. Work begun on new St. Andrew's, Bronx; the Rev. Wray MacKay appointed vicar. Work to begin soon on new parish house at St. Margaret's, Bronx. Thought is being given to new facilities for St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan.

The Rev. William Clague appointed vicar of All Saints, Staten Island; congregation seeking site for new church to replace one that burned. The Rev. Robert Pegram appointed vicar of St. Peter's, Chelsea Square, Manhattan. A lot adjacent to St. David's, Bronx, purchased for possible future expansion because of housing projects. St. Mary's, Manhattanville, showed a marked increase in parish activity and participation because of a stewardship program directed by Eric Ley, of the Diocesan staff.

First conference of the urban clergy conducted by the Bishop was held this spring. In the urban parishes under the Board of Managers (of the Department of Missions), there appears to be "an encouraging note of stability."

St. John's, Ellenville, completed a successful campaign last year, increasing giving from $9,000 to $21,000. Parish announced that it would need no further assistance from the Diocese. All Saints, Valley Cottage, building new church. New rectory, church and parish house completed at Christ the King in the Rondout Valley. Both projects partly financed by loans from 175th Anniversary Revolving Fund. New vicarage purchased by Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, also with aid of Revolving Fund.

During last summer, Diocese had charge of non-Roman, non-Jewish services in Bear Mountain Park and ministered to 5,000 campers and counselors. At request of Westchester County Park Commission, chaplain assigned last summer at Croton Point.

Conferences held with vicars and their finance committees to discuss budgets. Population of convocations to the north continues to grow; studies projected to 1970 available to every congregation. Department of Missions budget cut by $50,000 due to unpaid quotas and expectations.

Christian Social Relations—Department has been working on: an effective program for older people, in cooperation with Episcopal Service to the Aged; anti-social behavior of some young people and effects on parish and community life; a study to determine what can be done to help prisoners ready to be released. Department has tried to keep Churchmen and public in general informed on problems within the Department's scope.

Christian Education—The Rev. E. J. Rooney appointed temporary director of the Department. Department's Executive Committee has responsibility of nominating to the Bishop a new director to succeed Bishop Wetmore and is actively engaged in this assignment.

Conferences held last year at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness and Wooster School. Annual Presentation Service for children held. Youth Division extending leadership to parish and mission youth programs. Evaluation criteria developed for elementary schools that are Church related.

Work being done on 21 college and university campuses in Diocese. Parish Life Conferences and Conference on the Laity held. "The Department still sees its primary function as one of training and assisting the clergy and laity to fulfill their ministry in parish and mission."

Promotion—Eric Ley joins Department June 1 to direct year-round stewardship program. (See article elsewhere on this page on Mr. Ley's appointment and projected program). The Bulletin to go to all contributing families in the Diocese, starting with the October issue. Department has organized a program "based on the concept of promotion as both public relations and stewardship education."

Finance—"Although the Department of Finance has general supervision over the financial affairs of the Council, its chief functions are to prepare the Council budget a year in advance of its implementation and to make recommendations for balancing the budget at the time it is to be implemented.

". . . Last fall it became apparent to the Department of Finance that the disparity between income and the anticipated cost of proposed programs for the year 1960 would be more than $100,000. The Department held special meetings with the Departments of Promotion and Christian Education to discuss contemplated expansion of their programs.

". . . The Council met late in December, and after long and thorough debate, agreed upon a list of items in departmental budgets where major reductions could be made if necessary. This action was of great assistance to the Department of Finance in arriving at its recommendations."

175th Anniversary Fund—As of May 1, 1960, gifts and pledges from all sources amounted to $2,056,300, of which 70 percent, or $1,425,000 has already been received. Most pledges over period of three years or more, hence payments will continue for some time. Of parishes, chapels and missions, 167 have completed campaigns, 25 have started but not completed, 19 have as yet taken no part in the effort, though several have indicated intention to do so.

Projects aided by Fund: New church house for St. Paul's, Bronx (completed) . . . new parish house for St. Margaret's, Bronx (construction to start soon) . . . impending improvements for St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan . . . new church and parish hall at Clason Point, Bronx (under construction) . . . purchase of 4½ acre site for future church buildings for St. Anne's Mission at Washingtonville and a rectory at Red Oaks Mill in the town of LaGrange . . . Revolving Fund loans to Church of Christ the King in the Rondout Valley (church, parish hall and rectory completed), to Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac (new rectory occupied), to All Saints, Valley Cottage (new church under construction).

350 From 24 Parishes At Convocation Dance

Over 350 young people from 24 parishes of the Westchester Convocation gathered at St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck, recently for the first of a series of convocational youth programs.

The evening opened at 7:00 with evensong, which was followed by dancing and entertainment in the church's large parish hall. Master of ceremonies was disc jockey Rudy Moro. Entertainment was provided by the Terry Sisters. Admission was 50¢.

Sponsor of the program was the newly formed Youth Council of the Westchester Convocation. Chairman of the council is the Rev. Richard J. Kirk, rector of St. Mark's, Yonkers. Other members are the Rev. John Bruce, St. Barnabas, Irvington; the Rev. Wiley Merryman, St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck; the Rev. Samuel Ishibashi, St. Mark's, Mt. Kisco; and the Rev. Michael Regan, St. James the Less, Scarsdale.

The Youth Council will consult with a number of lay youth advisors and young people to consider programs for next fall for all young people of the Westchester Convocation.

Ley New Director Stewardship Work

Eric E. Ley, formerly executive director of the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign, has been appointed by the Bishop to serve as Director of Stewardship for the Diocese as of June 1.

Eric E. Ley

He will report to the chairman of the Department of Promotion.

While stewardship training and techniques have been an important function of the Department of Promotion, lack of personnel experienced in this field has limited the scope of the program. With Mr. Ley's appointment, the Department of Promotion has one man trained and experienced in stewardship education and one in promotion and public relations.

The tentative stewardship program includes: seminars for interested clergy, regional seminars for Every Member Canvass chairmen, development of stewardship training materials to augment EMC materials available through the National Council, and assistance to parishes in analyzing and strengthening their stewardship programs—particularly missions, aided parishes and congregations who have difficulty in meeting missionary quotas.

Eric Ley has specialized in improving giving levels through stewardship teaching for the past 20 years. In addition to having served as a vestryman in parishes in the Dioceses of Delaware, Connecticut and Albany, his stewardship activities have included many Protestant denominations and Roman Catholic parishes.

Bishop Addresses All Convocation Meetings by Phone

A dramatic highlight of the May 2 spring convocation meetings was a conference call telephone hookup which enabled the Bishop to speak to all seven convocation meetings. The hookup also enabled each of the convocation deans to give a brief message, heard at all of the meetings. This was the first time the Diocese has used this medium on a Diocesan wide basis.

The Bishop spoke from the Westchester Convocation meeting, held at St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck. After being introduced by the Very Rev. John V. Butler, dean of the Cathedral, who acted as master of ceremonies, the Bishop spoke for about 20 minutes on the heritage of the Diocese and some of the problems ahead.

Come In Hudson

The deans were heard from before the Bishop's talk. Before each dean's message, Dr. Butler told a little about the convocation and then cued in the dean with, "Come in Hudson Convocation . . . Come in Ramapo Convocation, etc." The physical scope of the Diocese was pointed up as the deans spoke from such distant points as Poughkeepsie, Staten Island, Stone Ridge, Manhattan, Garnerville and the Bronx.

The telephone program was only one part of each convocation meeting. All of the convocations had a service and the annual convocation elections, plus a program built around the 175th anniversary of the Diocese. Four of the convocations also had a supper.

Technical quality of the telephone broadcasts at the seven meetings varied from poor to good. The worst reception was at the Richmond meeting, where technical difficulties made it very hard to hear what was being said.

Milk Parlor Being Changed to Church

Realization of a long-held hope was brought closer for St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining, when at a special service on May 15, Homer Storms, chairman of the Building Committee, started tearing out part of the wall of an old dairy farm milking parlor preparatory to converting it into a church. (St. Paul's plant was once a dairy farm. Dec., 1959, Bulletin)

Completion of alterations will result in a church seating about 200 persons, a sacristy, a clergy vesting room and vesting areas for choir and acolytes. It will also release the present temporary chapel for its intended use as a parish hall. The chapel, seating 90, has had to serve both purposes.

Conversion of the last of the five farm buildings will be made possible through the recently completed building fund canvass to which families of St. Paul's subscribed more than $38,000. The fund was raised under the chairmanship of Carroll Justice with the advice and assistance of the Diocesan staff.

Gives Scholarship To South African Student

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Granite Springs, has provided a one-year scholarship at St. Christopher's School, Swaziland, South Africa.

The young Negro recipient, in a letter to the Brotherhood, wrote in part:

"My father died some twenty years ago, and my mother has since strived to keep me in school for the last eleven years. Now that the school expenses are increasing beyond her management, it is inevitable that I should leave school, which will no longer happen, seeing that you have provided my help."

Campers at one of last year's Wilderness Conferences take time out for a Coke during work period. The conferences emphasize relationship of work and worship.

Youth Conferences At Wooster School, Wilderness Camp

The Department of Christian Education has published folders giving details of two of its summer youth programs: the Wilderness Conferences and the New York Youth Conferences at Wooster School.

The Wilderness Conferences, held at a camp at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness, Bear Mountain, N. Y., are for boys and girls who have either passed their 13th birthday or who have finished the 8th grade. Director of the conferences this year will be the Rev. W. Scott Root, rector of Trinity, Garnerville, and priest-in-charge, St. John's-in-the-Wilderness.

Rugged Work Camps

Described in the folder as "rugged work camps for pioneer young people," the conferences provide a community of Christian concern in which the relationship between work and worship can be explored. Work periods, either in the kitchen or in maintaining and improving the camp itself, are alternated with periods of discussion, worship, and swimming and other forms of recreation. The campers live in tent villages. Twenty-four campers can be accommodated.

Each conference will last from Sunday afternoon through early Friday evening. There will be seven conferences between June 26 and August 12.

Cost is $15 per week. Scholarships are available through the Department of Christian Education.

The New York Youth Conferences are held at Wooster School, Danbury, Conn. There will be two conferences, both with the theme "God Acts." Director will be the Rev. Howard O. Bingley, rector of St. Andrew's, Brewster.

Wooster Schedule

The conference for junior high school students will be held August 21-26 and that for senior high school students August 28 to September 2. Both are from Sunday afternoon to Friday afternoon.

The Wooster Conferences program includes worship, bible instruction, discussion, talks by keynote speakers, and recreation. Concerning the theme, the folder on the conferences explains:

"Because of the confused moral standards in our society (payola, fixes, civic corruptions, etc.) the youth conferences this year will convey to the young people the changeless moral values of our faith. The conferences should lead the young people to examine their standards and seek God's way in His Church."

The Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese, will introduce the theme in an address on the first evening of each conference.

Keynote speaker at the junior conference will be the Rev. William J. Clague, rector of All Saints, Staten Island. At the senior conference the keynote speaker will be the Rev. William A. Wendt, priest-in-charge, St. Christopher's Chapel, Manhattan. Chaplain for both conferences will be the Rev. Edward N. West, canon sacrist of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

The junior conference is for boys and girls who in the fall will be entering grades 7, 8 or 9. The senior conference is for those who will be entering grades 10, 11 or 12. Cost for those attending either conference is $25. Scholarships are available through the Department of Christian Education.

Scene from 1959 Day of Witness procession, which had 2,000 marchers

Churches of Diocese to Participate In Annual 'Day of Witness' June 18

"All Races and Nations One Family in Christ" will be the theme of the 1960 Day of Witness, which will be observed on Saturday, June 18.

The observance, sponsored by the Diocese, each year demonstrates in a tangible way that the Episcopal Church is vitally concerned with the lives of all people. This is done through a street procession and a special service in the Cathedral.

The procession, made up of marching units, bands and floats, will assemble at 9:30 at St. Edward the Martyr, 14 East 109th St., just off Fifth Ave. Under direction of the marshall, the Rev. Donald F. Gowe, vicar of St. Edward the Martyr, the procession will get under way at 10:00 a.m.

The tentative route will be as follows: up Madison Ave. to 112th St., 112th St. to Manhattan Ave., down Manhattan Ave. to 110th St., and up 110th St. to the Cathedral.

As the procession marches into the Cathedral it will be reviewed by the Bishop, the Suffragan Bishops, the Archdeacons and other dignitaries. It will take 20 to 30 minutes for the entire procession to enter the Cathedral, and during this time those inside will be led in hymn singing by Archdeacon Brätt.

The Cathedral service will be a sung Eucharist, with Bishop Donegan as celebrant. The preacher will be Bishop Wetmore. The Gospel will be read by Bishop Boynton and the Epistle by Archdeacon McEvoy.

This will be the seventh annual Day of Witness. Until the Diocese assumed sponsorship last year, the observance had been sponsored by the Urban Priests League.

Churches Must Face Changing Social Patterns, Dr. Barry Tells Convention

The executive director of the New York City Mission Society has called upon churches to face up to changing social patterns in the cities and to carry on militant evangelism to all people living in these areas.

Addressing the Diocesan Convention, Dr. David W. Barry said that the days of certain churches for certain people are past.

"The idea of matching the church to the ethnic population was the basis of church strategy for most of our history; it was behind new church development, and church moves, and mergers, and all the rest of it. The thinking was that all men are divided into ethnic, national and social categories, for each of which God has provided a particular branch of his Church—Episcopal, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Baptist, and so on."

After pointing out that this era of church history is past, Dr. Barry said that, "A new image of man is emerging, a rather frightening, post-Christian image."

In this image, Dr. Barry explained, man is "a depersonalized social machine" who can be manipulated by certain standardized stimuli.

This thinking brings about, Dr. Barry said, "the development of the clergyman as an organization man, a smooth and pleasant and multi-functional personality who can service the institution effectively and head off any such unpleasantness or friction as Jesus was likely to precipitate in the temple."

Outlining the "Christian image of man," Dr. Barry said that, "Men are all alike only in one sense—they are all children of the same God, all rebels against His will, and commonly in need of the grace that is available through His Son."

Beyond these, the speaker asserted, "Men are all ultimately different—not different because of class or race or culture or income—these are superficial matters—but different because God created each as a unique individual, each with a special role and purpose in this world, each a particular combination of talents, emotions and character, each with a unique history. This is what our mass culture ignores.

"And the job of the church is to bring these diverse individuals together in common recognition of their common Father and their dependence on Him, to give Him praise and thanksgiving, to seek His will; and then to send them out each to his appointed task in the world."

Dr. Barry's full address has been printed in booklet form. Copies are available at 5¢ each or $3.00 per hundred. Send orders to the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, Archdeacon, Diocese of New York, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., N. Y. 25, New York.

60 Young People Have Inter-Parish Outing

The trend toward inter-parish youth programs was evidenced recently when 60 young people from four parishes attended a picnic and heard a talk on the Department of Christian Education's summer youth conferences.

The program was arranged by the Youth Group of St. Mary's, Mohegan Lake. The speaker, who was introduced by the rector of St. Mary's, the Rev. Joseph L. Germeck, was the Rev. David P. Kern, rector of the Church of the Divine Love, Montrose. Fr. Kern spoke about the New York Youth Conferences at Wooster School and the Wilderness Conferences.

Besides the churches of Fr. Germeck and Fr. Kern, those represented were St. Andrew's, Brewster, and St. Peter's, Peekskill.

Mite Box Savings Are Presented At Children's Service

The annual presentation service for children of the Diocese was held on Saturday afternoon, May 14, at the Cathedral. Attending were 2,300 children from 64 churches, plus a number of adults.

During the service the missionary offerings of the children of the Diocese, which they saved in mite boxes and gave in special offerings, were brought to the altar. This year the total was $29,292.95, though more came in later.

"The Priest Helps People" is the theme of this tableau by St. Mary's, Staten Island.

The address was given by Bishop Donegan.

At the conclusion of the service, the Bishop led the congregation in viewing five tableaux which related to the children's missionary study for this year: the need for clergy to carry on the work that has been established by the Church in the Caribbean area.

The tableaux were planned and arranged by groups from the following churches: St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining; St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan; St. David's, Bronx; St. Mark's, Mt. Kisco; and St. Mary's, Staten Island.

Pictures of All Churches in Diocese Are Displayed in Nave of Cathedral

Photographs of every church in the Diocese of New York are on display in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The exhibit, erected for the Diocese's 175th anniversary service May 22, will be left standing for several weeks.

The pictures — 235 of them — are mounted on display panels placed in seven bays of the Cathedral nave. In addition to exterior views of the churches, there are scenes of the Cathedral grounds and old photographs of several early church buildings in the Diocese.

More display panels are being erected. One will carry pictures of Bishop Donegan and the 11 men who preceded him as the Bishop of New York. On either side of this panel will be two large Diocesan maps, one indicating names and locations of the Diocese's original six churches and the other locations of the more than 200 churches in the Diocese today.

Also being added are pictures of the buildings of the Diocese's affiliated agencies, religious communities within the Diocese, and boarding and day schools under the program of the Department of Christian Education.

The exhibit was planned and coordinated by Eric Ley, executive director of the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign.

Church Closed in 1924; Members Hold Reunion

Forty-five former members of a church that was closed in 1924 met last month for their 36th annual reunion.

Meeting was the St. Chrysostom's Association, made up of former members of St. Chrysostom's Chapel. Built by Trinity Church, Manhattan, the chapel was located at the corner of 7th Avenue and West 39th St. Consecrated in 1879, it was closed in 1924 because of increasing changes in the neighborhood from residential to commercial. Members of the congregation transferred to other parishes but have met yearly for a reunion.

This year, for the first time, the association met at Trinity Church. Held on Sunday, May 1, the reunion included attendance at the Service of Holy Communion, followed by lunch in Trinity's dining room.

Diocesan Women Give UTO $30,889

The women of the Diocese of New York contributed $30,889.27 to the United Thank Offering at the Spring Ingathering held May 7 in the Cathedral. Contributions from 8,641 women made up the total.

The women of the Diocese have two UTO ingatherings each year —in the spring and during Advent. This money, which the women save in special Blue Boxes, is transmitted by the Diocese after each ingathering to National Council.

Every third year, at the time of the General Convention of the Episcopal Church and the concurrent Triennial Meeting of the women of the church, the offerings of the women of all dioceses are offered at the great Triennial Presentation. In 1958, the three-year total UTO was $3,870,000, the women of the Diocese of New York giving $189,400 of this.

Money given through the United Thank Offering is used mainly for two general purposes: women workers in the Church—their training, salaries, equipment and pensions; and buildings, repairs and equipment.

Among the work accomplished with the 1958 UTO has been: purchase of an electrocardiograph for a hospital in the Philippines, enlargement of a rectory in Hawaii, purchase of furnishings for a boys school in South Dakota, and assistance in providing buildings for a new mission serving personnel of the Strategic Air Command base at Glasgow, Montana.

Curate Tours Schools In New England, Sees Student Parishioners

The Rev. R. M. Louis, curate at Epiphany, Manhattan, recently completed the second of two tours of the New England states to visit members of the parish enrolled in prep schools and colleges.

The first of Mr. Louis' trips was made in February, when he visited seven students enrolled in six schools. A five-day tour last month included visits with nine students in seven schools. Some of the visits were repeats, as Epiphany has about a dozen parishioners in New England schools.

One purpose of the visits, which lasted about two hours each, was to let the students know that their parish was still concerned about them even though they were temporarily out of the parish's area.

Another purpose was to help the students become integrated in church life in their new communities. This was done by visiting school chaplains and the clergy of local Episcopal churches. Faculty members and chaplains were particularly impressed with a parish showing a direct interest in its student members, Mr. Louis reports. The chaplain at Smith College said that in his six years as chaplain only two other parish clergymen—of all denominations—had come to the campus to visit student parishioners.

Included in the new wing will be three classrooms, a sacristy, a vestment closet, an area for the altar guild, and rest rooms. By opening folding doors between two of the new classrooms and the present parish hall, seating capacity for parish dinners will be almost doubled.

About 75 league players attended the presentation ceremony, which was presided over by Bishop Wetmore. Bishop Boynton was the main speaker.

Seventeen teams from ten Manhattan churches were in league competition this year. All games were played at Intercession Chapel.

Princeton Conference For Clergy, Laymen Scheduled June 24-28

The annual Princeton Conference, sponsored by the Dioceses of New York, New Jersey and Newark, will be held at the Princeton Seminary June 24-28. Theme of the conference, open to clergymen and laymen, will be "The Church, the World and You."

Keynoter will be the Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, vicar of the Lower East Side Mission of Trinity Parish. One of the workshops, "Parish Program Planning," will be conducted by the Rev. Edwin J. Rooney, acting director of the Department of Christian Education and by Mrs. Spence Dunbar, Episcopal Churchwoman of Christ Church, Rye. Albert A. Brownbridge, director of the Department of Christian Social Relations, will serve as one of the consultants to the workshops.

The Princeton Conference is an Episcopal training conference for adults that seeks to provide a disciplined training and learning experience in which the specific implications of the keynoter's address will be worked out in workshops and lectures. It is believed that through such a program lay people will become more effective parish leaders and better informed and concerned Churchmen.

Fee for the 1960 Princeton Conference is $30, which includes registration, lodging and meals. The fee for non-resident participants is $5, plus $1.50 for each meal.

Further information may be obtained from the Diocese's Departments of Christian Education or Social Relations or from the registrar, Mrs. J. Woodward Tallman, Jr., Summer Ave., Edgewater Park, N. J., DUdley 7-1245.

Rector, Laymen Build Altar for Children

A children's altar built by the rector and several parishioners has replaced an old kitchen table which had served as an altar at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Granite Springs.

The new altar, used by Sunday school children under the age of seven, is the work of the Rev. K. Gordon Drescher, Henry Brauer and Samuel Levy. The cross, side railings and lectern are from the parish's old church.

Positioned on a side wall in the parish hall, the altar is mounted on casters and may be easily moved when necessary. Shelves inside the altar provide storage for the children's service booklets.

Others beside Fr. Drescher and the two laymen who had a part in making the new altar possible are: Mrs. Robert Tompkins, who sewed the altar coverings; Mrs. Walter Paden, who contributed the candle holders; Sister Florence Nisco, Episcopal Church Army, who gave the vases; and Mrs. K. Edward Bush, who sewed the dossal, which was purchased by the Altar Guild.

"That our people are determined to meet the fourfold challenge is evidenced by the fact that more than 25,000 people have given more than $2,000,000 to the 175th Anniversary Fund."

The Bishop announced that the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center at Tuxedo Park has been paid for and is free of debt.

"This achievement has been made possible by Confirmation offerings to the Bishop's Fund for Diocesan Needs. It is gratifying to me that there was no assessment in the parishes to meet the cost of the purchase and improvements of the Center."

During Lent, the Bishop said, he held five conferences for the Diocese's clergy at the Conference Center, and is arranging for more such conferences next year.

The annual Clergy Conference, he announced, will be held in September at the Conference Center, instead of at West Point. The Conference will be for only one day, as there are not sufficient overnight accommodations, he added.

The Bishop also spoke on the development of the Cathedral, migrant labor, the then approaching 175th anniversary service at the Cathedral, and studies being made of the problems of the aged.

50th Anniversary Modern Ecumenical Movement Observed

The 50th anniversary of the first World Missionary Conference, held in Edinburgh, Scotland, was observed May 25 in a service at Riverside Church, Manhattan. Among the 200 dignitaries who marched in the procession were a number from the Diocese of New York.

The 1910 World Missionary Conference marked the beginning of the modern ecumenical movement for Christian unity. The May 25 service, which was the observance of the anniversary in this country, was sponsored by the National Council of Churches in cooperation with the International Missionary Council, the World Council of Churches, the World Council of Christian Education and Sunday School Association, and the Protestant Council of the City of New York. Other observances of the anniversary will be held in Westminster Abbey, London, and St. Giles Cathedral, Edinburgh.

The main address at the Riverside observance was given by the Rt. Rev. James Edward Lesslie Newbigin, general secretary of the International Missionary Council, London.

Those from the Diocese who marched in the procession included the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York; the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, Archdeacon; the Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean of the Cathedral; and the Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral. Canon West was marshal of the procession.

Here's one reason why All Saints, Valley Cottage, is building a larger church. In background is the vicar, the Rev. Earle R. Hackett.

New Church for Mushrooming Mission

A congregation housed in a small church that is literally bulging at the sides is building a new and larger church. The new structure is being erected for All Saints, Valley Cottage, a town on the west side of the Hudson near the Tappan Zee bridge.

The members of All Saints now worship in a church that has a normal seating capacity of 75, though the congregation has 263 baptized persons. Overcrowding did not cause it, of course, but the walls of the church have recently bulged out about eight inches.

The new church, which is scheduled for completion in August, will cost about $85,000, the money being secured by a loan from the 175th Anniversary Revolving Fund. The work is being carried out under direction of the Department of Missions, which purchased the land and rectory in 1955.

Located a few hundred yards from the present church, the new structure will be of frame construction with an exterior of vertical cypress boarding. A meeting room will be attached. The church itself will have a normal seating capacity of 150.

Long range plans call for construction of a parish hall attached to the new church. For the present, however, the old church will be used as a parish house.

All Saints, which is a mission of the Diocese, is in a community that is expanding at a tremendous rate. Two sub-divisions are being built within a mile of the church and many other houses are being erected nearby. Growth of the All Saints congregation has corresponded to community growth: the number of communicants and the number of baptized persons has doubled in the past year.

Contractor for the All Saints project is the J. H. Martin Construction Co. of West Nyack. Architect is George M. Schofield, a member of Grace Church, Nyack, former member of the Department of Missions, and a member of the diocesan Commission on Church Building.

Alice Rivera Elected GFS Assembly Delegate

Miss Alice Rivera, 17, has been selected to represent the teenagers of the Diocese at the National Assembly of the Girls' Friendly Society. The assembly will be held July 17-22 in Pacific Grove, California.

Alice Rivera

Miss Rivera, who was selected by a vote of the Diocese's GFS chapters, will attend the assembly under a scholarship provided by Bishop Donegan.

A Sunday School teacher at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan, the delegate is a senior at Washington Irving High School. She has been accepted as a student nurse at Bellevue Hospital.

Every three years, delegates from the GFS meet with adult officers of the Episcopal youth group to plan and implement their program of helping girls prepare for maturity.

Each diocese is entitled to three delegates at the assembly. The other two delegates from the Diocese of New York, both adults, will be Miss Jean Pflomm, diocesan president of the GFS, and Mrs. Millicent Acham, GFS advisor at All Souls, Manhattan. Also attending will be Mrs. George Diering, secretary of the GFS Diocesan office.

The Diocese of New York has a GFS memberhip of about 550 in branches in 30 churches.

This picture, entitled "Freedom of Religious Expression" and taken by Leland Arnot Cook in Christ Church, Pelham Manor, has been given a Freedom Foundations Award.

"This is a dead church. You're wasting your time trying to do anything here." That was the almost universal opinion expressed to a young minister on first meeting his parishioners.

Though feeling frustrated, he did not allow himself to be discouraged. Using his imagination creatively, he decided to have a funeral service for the dead church.

The time of the funeral service was made known. That Sunday afternoon everyone came for the service. The building was filled and some were standing outside.

There was an open casket (it was not an Episcopal church) and after the service everyone present was invited "to view the remains." Naturally everyone wondered what was in the casket. Each person filed by and, after looking in, look shame-facedly away. There was a mirror in the casket.

Christ Church Picture Wins Freedom Award

A photograph taken in Christ Church, Pelham Manor, has won a Freedom Foundations Award. Entitled "Freedom of Religious Expression," the picture shows the photographer's daughter before one of the church's stained glass windows.

The window, which depicts the Adoration of the Magi, is the first figured stained glass window to be made in this country. It was made across the street from the church about 1843 by William Jay Bolton.

The award-winning picture was taken by Leland Arnot Cook, who was at the time a commercial photographer in Mount Vernon. He is now a photographer and publicist for Tiffany & Co.

Pictures of the window have been used on the Christmas cards of Tiffany & Co., Minnesota Mining, Metropolitan Life, and American Machine & Foundry.

Bible Society Makes Film on Its Special Service for Blind

The American Bible Society has just completed a film on its 125 years of service to the blind. Entitled "So Great the Light," the 28-minute color movie is now available to church groups. There is a service charge of $4.

The Society's services to the blind include distribution of embossed Scriptures and Talking Book Records. The embossed Scriptures have been in 40 languages and systems.

The Bible in English Braille, which covers both testaments, is in 20 volumes. The Talking Book Records, on which the entire Bible is read, includes 170 records and takes 84 hours to play.

Program chairmen wishing to order the new film may write the Audio-Visual Dept., American Bible Society, 440 Park Ave. South, N. Y. 16, N. Y.

Church Council Helped Cut Divorce Rate In England by Two-Thirds

England has cut its divorce rate from an all-time high in 1947 of 60,000 to the present 23,000; and much of the credit for this nearly two-thirds reduction is given to the church-sponsored National Marriage Guidance Council.

Organization and work of the Council was explained by the Rev. Canon Gordon R. Dunstan, secretary of the Moral Welfare Council of the Church of England's Board for Social Responsibility. The Council was one of the topics discussed by Canon Dunstan at an April 26 meeting of the Diocese's Department of Christian Social Relations.

All Churches Except One

The National Marriage Guidance Council, organized in 1944, is sponsored by all of England's churches except the Roman Catholic. There are 100 local chapters throughout England.

Services of the Council are available to any married person and at no charge. The counselors themselves are volunteers, mostly laymen.

When a person wants marriage counseling, he goes to one of the Council chapters and makes an appointment. He may select as his counselor a man or woman, clergyman or layman. The counselors in each chapter are backed up by a battery of consultants—psychiatrists, general practitioners, lawyers, clergymen.

Each year 12,000 couples receive help from the National Marriage Guidance Council.

Key to the Council's success, according to Canon Dunstan, is careful selection and training of counselors.

Counselor Training Program

Any married person may volunteer to be a counselor. Volunteering is one thing but being actually selected is quite another. A volunteer's name, together with supporting papers, is sent by the local chapter to the Council's national headquarters. If the applicant passes this screening, he undergoes intensive face-to-face examination. Groups of 15 applicants spend a day and a half with a psychiatrist, an officer of the Council and two experienced counselors.

These four examiners must give their unanimous approval before an applicant may move on to the next step. Of a group of 15 applicants, a typical determination would be nine accepted, five rejected and one deferred.

Successful applicants then undergo four intensive three-day sessions at the Council's training center.

The applicant then becomes a counselor but is on probation for a year. At the end of this year, his case records and general performance are studied by a field officer, who may or may not certify him as a permanent member of the counseling staff.

Gifts-in-Kind Include Moose Meat, Birds

All of the gifts made to Greer School can't be entered in ledgers.

The Dutchess County Episcopal school, which is for boys and girls aged 6 to 18 from disrupted families, also receives what it calls "gifts-in-kind." Some recent gifts have been: wild game birds, laundry bags, jams and jellies, 40 pounds of hard candy, skis, moose meat, chickens and a train set. Also received were clothing, records, furniture, books and games.

Gifts-in-kind may be sent directly to Greer School, Hope Farm, N. Y., or deposited at Greer's City House, 104 East 35th St., N. Y. C.

St. Philip's, Manhattan, held its third annual Service of Thanksgiving for Senior Members on Sunday, May 14, at 11:00 a.m. Honored were the parish's 175 men and women who are 70 or older.

All of the senior members sat together at the front of the church and each received an orchid from the rector, the Rev. M. Moran Weston. Parishioners who became 70 during the past year each received a copy of the Book of Common Prayer inscribed by Dr. Weston.

Oldest senior member honored at the special service was 97-year-old William H. Norwood, whose wife is chairman of the Senior Member Committee.

In his sermon, Dr. Weston said, "As more people reach the older years, too many find the gift of long life not a blessing but a burden. Both the younger and the older see only the problems and the uncertainties. We hope to encourage a positive and creative approach to the older years of life on the part of young and old."

The senior members of St. Philip's—all parishioners 70 or older—meet twice a month from 2:30 to 4:30 from October through June. Programs include entertainment, dancing and games.

Choir Boys In Europe With N.Y. Pro Musica

Eight choir boys from the Church of the Transfiguration (The Little Church Around the Corner) will spend two months in Europe this summer as part of a musical drama group on tour under President Eisenhower's Cultural Exchange Program.

The boys, age 10 to 14, will be part of the New York Pro Musica troupe that will give 40 performances of the 12th century musical drama, "The Play of Daniel." They will be accompanied by Stuart Gardner, organist and master of choristers at Transfiguration, and by a trained nurse.

"The Play of Daniel" has for the past three years been performed by the Pro Musica at The Cloisters and in the Chapel of the Intercession. The choir boys were in these performances.

The troupe left for England on the Queen Mary May 18 and will conclude the tour July 29. Performances will be given at international musical festivals in England, Italy and France, including the Royaumount Festival, Spoleto Festival and Bath Festival.

The eight choir boys are: David Ohmann, David Khouri, David Solet, George Ryan, Edmund Cortez, Leonard Leicenti, Bruce Zahariades and Forrest Munger.

RIAL Campaign On

Religion in American Life's message of "Find the Strength for Your Life . . . Worship Together This Week" is being seen in virtually every community in the nation this year whenever Americans travel out-of-doors.

All of this vast advertising program in support of churches and synagogues is made possible by the contribution of space by American business enterprises through their public service agency, the Advertising Council.

The posters were prepared by the J. Walter Thompson Company, volunteer advertising agency for Religion in American Life.

Money Talks

A big silver Dollar and a little brown Cent,
Rolling along together they went,
Rolling along the smooth sidewalk
When the Dollar remarked, for Dollars can talk,
"You poor little Cent,
you poor little mite,
I am bigger and more than twice as bright,
I am worth more than you
a hundred fold,
And written on me in letters bold
Is the motto drawn from the pious creed,
'In God we trust', which all men can read."
"Yes, I know," said the little mite,
"I'm not big, nor good, nor bright,
And yet"—said the Cent with a meek little sigh—
"You don't go to church as often as I."

Once the year-round residence of a Texas oil man, the property consists of 1,100 acres, two dwelling houses, a guest house, and, in addition to many other buildings, two large barns, one of which has been remodelled to accommodate the E.B.C. offices.

The Episcopal Book Club was founded in 1953 with 80 members and about $250. It now distributes "Books-of-the-Seasons that speak of the Church" to 8,500 subscribers in all states of the Union and many foreign countries. The E.B.C. also publishes a quarterly magazine, The Anglican Digest.

The Bulletin

"All things come of thee, O Lord, and of thine own have we given thee."

Editorial

This issue of THE BULLETIN marks the opening of a broad avenue of communications in the Diocese of New York. From now on, every contributing family in the diocese — over 40,000 — will receive The Bulletin each month at no charge.

The magazine was previously distributed on a subscription basis, with a subsidy coming from diocesan funds. Now the diocese will underwrite all publication costs not covered by advertising revenue, using a very small part of the contributions which you make to your church and to the diocese. The magazine will, of course, operate on a strict budget.

Some of the advantages of the new circulation plan are:

(1) For the first time, nearly everyone in the diocese will have ready access to news and general information about the diocese, the national church and other parishes of the diocese.

(2) Greatly reduced cost per copy of the magazine.

(3) Increased advertising revenue, due to much larger circulation.

To the delegates to the May, 1959, Diocesan Convention we extend our thanks for the confidence placed in us by their authorization of the new circulation plan. And we also thank the Rev. Dr. James W. Kennedy, who was chairman of the Department of Promotion from 1956 until last June. It was under his chairmanship that the Department of Promotion made plans for this new era of The Bulletin.

We are fully aware of the challenge of editing a magazine that will appeal to people with widely varying degrees of interest in church activities. Then, too, an item which may be of great interest to one reader may hold little or no interest for another reader.

To try to meet these challenges, we propose to adhere to the following policies:

(1) Publication of articles about which we think there is broad interest. For instance, we will carry articles on the relationship of Henry VIII to the Episcopal Church (a subject widely misunderstood), how to address an Episcopal clergyman, what is the Anglican Communion, the responsibilities of Godparents.

(2) Avoidance of terms not widely understood and the use of an explanation when such terms must be used.

(3) Emphasis on the reporting of parish activities that can be adopted by other parishes.

(4) Encouragement of letters to the editor and other expressions of reader views and interests.

(5) Coverage of newsworthy activities in all parishes, regardless of the parish's size or location. (Success of this aim will depend largely on parish cooperation in submitting stories or 'tips.')

Rest assured that we will do our best to publish a magazine that will interest you. If we succeed, let us know so that we can stay on course. If we do not, also let us know.

You're invited - - October 23rd!

Ask the average person what is a layman and he will define the word by telling you what he is not. Laymen are all the people in the church who are not clergymen.

Seeking a more positive approach to the role of the layman in the Episcopal Church, the seven convocations of the Diocese will have "Strong Laity — Strong Church" as the theme of their fall meetings this month.

The seven meetings will be held simultaneously. Each of the convocations, which are geographical sub-divisions of the Diocese, will meet at a church in its area at 4:00 p.m. on Sunday, October 23.

The convocations of the Diocese of New York meet twice a year, in the fall and spring. The fall meeting, to which all clergymen and laymen of the convocations are invited, is on the general theme of the program of the Church.

The October 23 meeting, in all convocations, will consist of Evening Prayer and a talk by an outstanding clergyman or layman. Special hymns and lessons will be authorized by the Bishop of New York, the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan. A message from the Bishop will be read, except at the Dutchess convocation meeting, where the Bishop will deliver his message personally.

Some of the convocations will have massed choirs, vestrymen in procession and other special features.

Meeting places and speakers will be as follows:

YCS... for girls with Problems!

The problems of

"I HAVE A FRIEND who just can't seem to get along with her parents. You see, her father thinks a girl . . ."

So began a telephone conversation to Youth Consultation Service of the Diocese of New York. So began a series of visits by the "friend" (who turned out to be the caller herself) to one of the 12 YCS counselors.

The perplexed caller, a 16-year-old from Westchester, was one of the 1,251 young women aided by Youth Consultation Service last year. It cannot be said that her problem was typical, for the girls who come to YCS have no "typical" problems. They run the gamut from loneliness and poor grades in school to attempted sucide and kleptomania. Some girls' problems are so complex and so intertwined that it may take as long as three years of weekly counseling sessions to solve them or effect an adjustment. Other girls may require only three or four counseling sessions.

Youth Consultation Service, now in its 51st year, is one of the few agencies in this country dedicated entirely to the problems of young women. Age limits are 14 through 25. The girls are of all races and religions, of all economic circumstances. Though most are from Greater New York and other parts of the state, many are from other parts of the country. They are referred to YCS by churches, doctors, schools, courts, hospitals, social agencies and YCS "alumnae."

1,251 girls-that was Youth Consultation's challenge last year

One 18-year-old, whom we shall call Ellen, belongs to a well-to-do Manhattan family. After a bitter quarrel with her parents, Ellen refused to return to school, found a job, and moved into an apartment with three other girls. Believing herself rejected by her parents and feeling insecure in her new situation, she tried to solve her problems by making new friends—"understanding friends." Six months later she was pregnant.

Fortunately, the doctor who confirmed Ellen's fears of pregnancy knew of YCS and referred her there. To one of the counselors at the agency's counseling office, 16 East 79th St., Manhattan, Ellen sobbed out her story. Strengthened by sympathy, understanding, and the promise of help, Ellen found the courage to tell her parents and to begin the weekly counseling sessions which it was hoped would bring them finally together.

Three months before her baby was due, Ellen entered Dana House, a maternity residence for 20 girls operated by YCS. During her stay in the bright, cheerful, former town house in Manhattan she learned many skills, such as dressmaking, typing, cooking and painting. The other girls and the staff at Dana House supplied the companionship and the acceptance she needed so desperately, for, "at Dana House no one makes you feel ashamed."

From weekly discussions with the obstetrician she learned facts about herself and her baby which prepared her for the coming delivery. A nurse was on constant duty to reassure her.

Ellen regularly attended weekly services in the beautiful little Chapel of the Holy Compassion at Dana House, and was able to use the pastoral counseling services of the chaplain.

As she continued her weekly visits to her counselor, Ellen came to know herself and her parents a little better. She began to find answers to the problems which had loomed so hopelessly before her.

When the baby came, Ellen made the decision to surrender it for adoption. This decision, heartbreakingly difficult, was entirely her own, a policy adhered to strictly by YCS. Her counselor went with her to the adoption agency, then brought her back to Dana House for the help and comfort she so needed.

Ellen remained at Dana House for two weeks, then went back to her parents' home before returning to school. She is continuing to see her counselor and is achieving a better understanding of herself and her parents and a better relationship with them. Had she received YCS counseling earlier, when she first left home, the tragedy of her pregnancy could perhaps have been averted.

Like nearly all girls who come to YCS, either for counseling or for residence at Dana House, Ellen paid a fee. The fee is based on ability to pay. Sometimes this means that the girl pays nothing, for no one is turned away because of inability to pay.

About one-third of the girls who come to YCS are unmarried and pregnant. Some go to Dana House, others to St. Faith's House in Tarrytown, with which YCS works closely. Some girls, especially among the approximately one-third who decide to keep their babies, live at home or with friends but maintain close contact with YCS.

Besides Dana House and the main counseling office eight blocks away, Youth Consultation Service has a branch counseling office in White Plains. The White Plains office has three full-time counselors and three part-time. The Manhattan office has five full-time and one part-time. All have master's degrees. Both offices have consulting psychologists and psychiatrists and both are open nine to five Monday through Friday

Though its assistance to unwed mothers is best known, having been written up in "Coronet," "The New Yorker" and other publications, YCS gives its attention to a multitude of other problems of young women. As pointed out earlier, only one-third of the girls are faced with unmarried motherhood. And even these girls need much more than obstetrical care. Pregnancy is usually just a climax to a whole set of problems. Loneliness, insecurity, rejection, are usually the basic problems, according to Mrs. Leonard E. Hoag, Executive Director of Youth Consultation Service.

Holiday Homes

Sixteen Children from five New York City parishes enjoyed a week's vacation in the country this summer under a new program of the Diocese's Department of Christian Education.

Known as Episcopal Holiday Homes, the program is similar to the Herald-Tribune's Friendly Town (Fresh Air Fund) program. Children from the city who would otherwise have no vacation visit in the homes of families living in suburban or rural areas.

The principal difference between the Friendly Town program and the Episcopal Holiday Homes program is that both the visiting children and the host families are Episcopalians. Around this central loyalty guest and host can meet each other in a way not possible in a non-church program.

It was because of this advantage of a church-sponsored program and because Friendy Town can accomodate just a fraction of the Episcopal city children, that the Holiday Homes program was established.

The new program is only for Episcopal children living in the Diocese of New York. Though it has not yet been decided whether the program will be restricted to host families living in the Diocese, it is intended primarily for Diocesan families.

Children from the ages of 5 through 12 are eligible. A family may take one or more children, for one or two weeks, and may specify age and sex. Only families who have children of their own may be hosts to Holiday Homes children.

The size of the program was deliberately kept small this year due to its experimental nature. Though it seems likely that Episcopal Holiday Homes will become an annual program, a decision will not be reached until the results of this year's program have been studied.

Besides vacations for the children, Holiday Homes provides an opportunity for the host families to become closely acquainted with people of a different cultural background. The Rev. E. J. Rooney, acting director of the Department of Christian Education, calls Holiday Homes, "a thrust at adult education."

The churches which sent children this year and the churches of the host families were:

St. Augustine's Chapel of Trinity Parish, Manhattan, to Grace Church, Millbrook.

St. David's, Bronx, to St. James, Goshen.

St. Margaret's, and St. Paul's, both Bronx, to St. Barnabas, Irvington.

St. Mary's, in the Manhattanville section of Manhattan, to The Church of Christ the King, between High Falls and Stone Ridge.

Two children from St. Margaret's, Bronx, stayed with the family of the chaplain at Kent School, Kent, Conn.

In most cases the children were entirely the guests of the individual host families, without parish participation. At The Church of Christ the King, however, there were several parish functions. Members of this church were hosts to seven children, more than any other church, and all during the same week.

Functions in which all of the children and the host families participated were a corn and hot dog roast, and a swimming party followed by a picnic. A barbecue was called off because of rain.

Many of the youngsters had never been in the country and were entranced with the open fields and large expanses of lawn. Things that the host families took for granted were often a source of wonderment to their guests. One five-year-old boy was fascinated by telephone poles. Living in the city, where utility lines are underground, he had never seen a telephone pole. ■

King's College Honors Bishop

The Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York, has been given a Doctor of Divinity degree by the University of Kings College, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

In addition to receiving his degree, the Bishop lectured to the clergy of the Diocese of Nova Scotia, took part in the dedication of a new diocesan center, and preached at a service for the 50th anniversary of the opening of All Saints Cathedral, Halifax.

The degree which the Bishop received was the second in recent months. In June he was awarded a Doctor of Sacred Theology degree by Columbia University. ■

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

A New Book by Chad Walsh

coming in November

The Rough Years

Of great interest to the Church will be Chad Walsh's latest book entitled, THE ROUGH YEARS.

Written in the form of a fast-moving novel, it takes a group of students and shows their problems, dilemmas and possibilities. The characters are vividly individualized, but the challenges they meet are typical of those encountered by all young people in Junior High and High School.

Each chapter in this book is written so that it can serve as a springboard for group discussion.

The author, an Episcopal clergyman, has written a number of well-circulated titles including: STOP LOOKING AND LISTEN; BEHOLD THE GLORY; CAMPUS GODS ON TRIAL and probably his most popular book, KNOCK AND ENTER.

Among the topics treated in his new book, THE ROUGH YEARS, are: Dating, Going Steady, Marriage; Conflict with Parents; Lack of Motivation in School; Personal Habits; Community Problems: Juvenile Delinquency; The Role of the Church; Intellectual Doubts and Problems of Friendship and Social Adjustment.

For class discussion, it will be bound in a paper back edition with a teacher's manual to accompany it. It will also be available cloth bound.

Price — Cloth $3.00; Paper $2.25

Adventure

TWO YEARS VACATION WITH PAY: these are the conditions under which I labor. There was but one string attached to this extraordinary assignment: that I employ the two years to go around the world.

A person with my taste for travel was incapable of putting up resistance to such a proposition. So I am now going around the world. At the moment of writing this report (an August evening in Dublin) for the October issue of The Bulletin, I have put nine months and 35 countries behind me. I still have 15 months and over 40 countries to go.

The insurance companies, by the way, don't take a particularly hopeful view of my chances of survival. Shortly before leaving New York last October I summoned representatives of rival insurance companies to study my itinerary and to quote me prices. When the bids came in, I gasped at the size of the premium. Demanding to know why the premium was so astronomical, I received the not very cheery news that, "from an actuarial point of view, we reckon that out of 20 chances there is one chance that this journey will be the end of you."

This was a sobering thought, but I rallied to say: "As it happens, I have no dependents. So I am not particularly worried about fatality. In the case of death, I hope that the Almighty, in his goodness, will take over. But I am a bit worried about the possibility of crippling accident or incapacitating illness." This no insurance company was willing to touch. Not until then had I realized there was anything hazardous or even faintly heroic about my undertaking.

Dr. Johnson, the author of this "Interim Report," is Canon Theologian of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine. Currently on leave of absence from the Cathedral, he is "on loan" to the National Church and, indeed, to the world-wide Anglican Communion for the unprecedented task of traveling to every country in which our Church is at work. In this informal "Letter to Home" Canon Johnson lets us in on some of the experiences of his unique "Adventure in Anglicanism." We look forward to his final report on his many and varied experiences and findings, but must content ourselves with interim reports until his book is published in 1962 by Harper & Brothers.

Nothing deterred, I am going around the world (uninsured!) but with a particular purpose in view. I go to visit every province of the Anglican Communion, including many dioceses not yet incorporated into a provincial structure, and to see every country in which our Church has work among the people of the land. As far as I am aware, nobody before me has been rash enough to attempt any such thing. It is, I believe, an unprecedented journey.

My travel bureau—the large and experienced Air and Marine Travel Service of New York—declares that the preparation of my itinerary constitutes the largest single challenge with which it has ever been faced. And I myself must face the fact that perhaps my journey will prove, in the end, to have been a goose chase, (continued on page 14)

Diocese Begins New Stewardship Program

A Diocesan-wide stewardship program was launched last month with the holding of five conferences for clergymen. The conferences emphasized the Christian approach to giving, rather than methods of conducting an Every Member Canvass.

Diocesan Director of Stewardship Eric E. Ley, who conducted the conferences, emphasized that it is the job of laymen, not clergymen, to conduct the Every Member Canvass. Clergymen, however, should be familiar with the principles of true stewardship and should exert leadership from the pulpit and in counseling.

Of the five conferences, three were held at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center at Tuxedo Park. These began with dinner one evening and ended with lunch the next day.

The other two conferences, from 10:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M., were held at St. Mary's, Staten Island, and at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. A total of 82 clergymen attended this initial series of conferences.

Others on the conference program besides Mr. Ley were Diocesan Treasurer Theodor Oxholm and at least one clergyman at each conference whose parish has held a stewardship-based Every Member Canvass. The six clergymen who spoke were the Rev. Richard E. Gary, St. Mary's, Manhattanville; the Rev. Robert W. Renouf, St. Alban's, Staten Island; the Rev. Michael Allen, St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan; the Rev. John Wells, St. David's, Bronx; the Rev. J. J. Sharkey, St. Paul's, Ossining; the Rev. Lloyd Uyeki, St. Gregory's, Woodstock.

The three Bishops and the two Archdeacons each attended at least one of the conferences.

Stressed in the conferences was the impact of a true stewardship program on the entire life of a parish.

"People who give on a meaningful basis to their church," Mr. Ley declared, "are interested in their church." The five clergymen who spoke gave examples of this awakened interest and pointed out that parish life took on a new vitality.

"An Every Member Canvass that is designed solely to raise money is unsound—unsound when viewed from the standpoint of its full effects on the parish and its parishioners," Mr. Ley said. "Such a canvass overlooks the vital need for the giver to understand the Christian basis for his giving and to comprehend the full meaning of stewardship. ( column 1, next page )

This fall Mr. Ley will conduct a series of stewardship conferences for laymen. These conferences, which will cover the principles and the methods of a stewardship program, will be restricted to members of parishes whose clergymen have attended one of the conferences for this group. Each clergyman who has attended a conference has been asked to invite four of his parishioners to attend one of the conferences for laymen. ■

School of Worship To Begin Sessions Nov. 7

The Diocesan School of Worship, an annual series of lectures open to everyone in the Diocese, will be held on the four Mondays in November. Sponsors of the lectures are the dean and chapter of the Cathedral and the Episcopal Churchwomen.

Identical lectures will be presented morning and evening.

The morning sessions will be at the Cathedral, 110th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, from 10:30 to 1:00. Lunch will be available for those who wish to remain.

The first three evening sessions will be from 7:30 to 9:45 and at the following Manhattan churches: Resurrection, 115 East 74th Street, November 7; Heavenly Rest, 5th Avenue and 90th Street, November 14; Calvary, Park Avenue South and 21st Street, November 21. The final evening session will be held at the Cathedral, with Holy Communion at 6:00, dinner at 7:00 in Synod House, and then the lecture.

Each of the four lectures will be devoted to a significant phase of the school's theme this year, "In His Hand."

On November 7 the topic will be "The Assuring Hand — Absolution" and the lecturer will be the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, Rector of St. Peter's, Westchester Square, Bronx.

The November 14 lecture, "The Healing Hand — Unction," will be delivered by the Rev. John E. Large, Rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan.

"Joining Hands—Holy Matrimony" will be the November 21 lecture, given by the Rev. Thomas Van B. Barrett, Rector, St. John's, Tallahassee, Fla.

The final lecture, November 28, will be given by the Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral. His topic will be "Apostolic Hands — Holy Orders."

The School of Worship Committee is headed by the Rev. Harold R. Landon, Canon Precentor at the Cathedral. Chairman of the day sessions is Mrs. William N. McDonald, and of the evening sessions Miss Valerie Franklin.

Information about registration and other aspects of the lecture series may be obtained from your rector or from an officer of your parish's Episcopal Churchwomen. ■

Episcopal Churchwomen

In this letter to a friend, Mrs. Gurney Williams explains the activities and scope of the Episcopal Churchwomen, of which she is Diocesan President. There are Episcopal Churchwomen groups in every church in the Diocese. All women active in their church's work are considered members.

MRS. WILLIAMS

Dear Meg,

No, we don't think you are neglecting your church work when you take on the big job of fund raising for the Community Chest. When through with that, though, I hope Grace Church Women's Association will sew you up as chairman of Christian Social Relations. With the training sessions on visiting techniques and other opportunities for volunteer services in the institutions near you, there's a job which you would love. You and I both know we can't be all things to all causes — not at the same time anyway.

I'm glad you like the new Handbook for Episcopal Churchwomen. Your concern about its presentation of such a broad program is understandable. It is a temptation to concentrate on one phase of the program at a time. The nearest the Diocesan Board comes to this is in suggesting an emphasis each year (this year, AGING — A CHALLENGE). Our program chairman has signed up a fascinating movie on this subject for our Advent Diocesan Meeting, and when we visit Grasslands in Westchester next April we will be visiting a group of elderly persons. There is a lot that women's groups can do in this area of the Church's concern for its older members.

About the complexity of the program presented in the Handbook: it is concerned with many things. But, as members of the Church, we are involved in all its work.

Our Church program is tremendous, and every part of it is vital right now. For further confirmation of this, read again the Bishop's Message in the Handbook. The Diocesan Board is increasingly aware of its responsibility to make all of this clear to more Churchwomen. The first step, I suppose, is to communicate the program in its entirety, but in a coordinate, simplified manner. This we have attempted to do in the Handbook. In breaking the program into manageable shares for the parishes, there must be recognition that each share is part of a whole Diocesan program and that no one parish can be completely independent of the others. The same thing holds true in the parish, where each member must carry her part.

Each parish will, of course, choose those areas of work which fit the needs and interests of its own members. I'm sure you have noticed in the Handbook that every department chairman has suggested that a clergy advisor be invited to the planning session. He knows the interests and needs of parishioners and more than likely has opinions on community projects, or problems, of concern to the Church. The program as adopted by a parish group is, we hope, also coordinated with the plans and calendar of men's and youth groups. Each year we find more common ground with all departments, all groups in our Church and, for that matter, more common interests with all Christians everywhere.

All best on the Community Chest drive.

Affectionately,

St. Barthomew's Church, White Plains, was consecrated by Bishop Donegan on May 29. Though the parish was organized in 1915 and the present property acquired in 1922, the church building could not be consecrated until it was free of debt. This is a canon law of the Episcopal Church. The parish recently retired a mortgage acquired through construction of a new parish house and renovation of the church.

a fool's errand. Meanwhile, I am having the time of my life. My Grand Tour of Anglicanism, although hard work, is great fun.

To get this far (and you must remember that I am writing in August, not in October) I have ridden in 78 airplanes and have slept in 114 different beds. I haven't the heart to reckon how many miles I have travelled (although 40,000 more or less would not be too far out), nor can I count the other means of transport involved: buses, trains, taxis, private cars, trolleys, land rovers, jeeps, ships, launches, ferries, rowboats, canoes, and (in this case I can be specific) one jinrikisha. There have even been a few miles on foot.

Began Journey Last October

In outline, my route so far can be quickly traced. From New York, on October 24, 1959, I went to the Bahamas. Then I began island-hopping throughout that great arc of the Antilles stretching from British Honduras to British Guiana. Having hit South America at that point, I reversed myself and went counter-clockwise around the whole South America. From Rio de Janeiro I flew to Dakar and began working my way down the coast of West Africa, going to Gambia, Sierra Leone, Liberia, Ghana and Nigeria. Thence I flew to South Africa.

After five weeks in that beautiful and tortured land, I went on to Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia and then on to Nyasaland.

Having "done" Central Africa, I proceeded to Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Kenya, and Uganda in East Africa. Unfortunately, because I could not tarry long enough in Uganda to get a Sudanese visa, I had to fly over the Sudan, and the decision to skip Sudan meant having to bypass Egypt as well, for it was in Khartoum that I had hoped to obtain a visa to visit Cairo. So, emerging from nearly five months in Africa, I came to have a look at the Church's work in Europe, and now I am totally immersing myself in British culture in the United Kingdom.

Off to the Middle East

Remembering, however, that what I write in August will not be read until October, I need to add something about the movements I project for the following months. After having looked at Wales, Ireland, and Scotland during the summer of 1960, I will be flown by the RAF to bases in the Mediterranean. Then I proceed to Jerusalem, Beirut, Kuwait and Teheran. In the Middle East I hope to observe what response the Church has made to the new opportunity created by the mushroom growth of great oil cities in which dwell thousands of British and American citizens.

By October, the month in which this article will appear, I hope to be in Pakistan and to be on the eve of an extended visit to India. Beyond that lie all of the exotic countries of Southeast Asia and the Far East and the lovely islands of the Pacific. But of all this I hope to give some account in a later "Letter to Home" if The Bulletin can find a place for it.

If all goes according to plan, I shall be back at the Cathedral Church of the Diocese of New York on the twenty-fourth day of October, 1961. In the course of that autumn and winter I hope to bring out a book describing this prodigious journey and to share with people the observations it has prompted. Unless the book turns out to be a complete dud, it will be published by Harper & Brothers in the United States and simultaneously by Geoffrey Bles in Great Britain. Conceivably, the book can be of use to the great crowds of Churchmen who will be gathering in Toronto in 1963 for the Anglican Congress.

In writing to my parents I have described my "Adventure in Anglicanism" as a "long, lovely, laborious lark." ■

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedral Church

In this monthly column, Canon West will answer some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

If everything God created is good, and God created everything, what about polio virus? Is that good?

The Scripture is very clear on the subject. All the Creation was good when it was first created. Since Man took over, all the Creation suffered. In the poetic account of Scripture this is symbolized by the fact that after Man takes over Cain murders his brother, and animals which once dwelt together in peace now prey on each other. What this means is that the whole Creation as far as this planet goes has suffered from the effects of the Fall.

Since we have, for example, in the course of history, radically changed our diet, we are scarcely in the position of saying that the appendix, which was of use to our remote ancestors, is an evil creation because it is no longer of use to us and on occasion behaves badly. Our so-called "wisdom" teeth no longer serve any purpose except to make most of us miserable until they are extracted. Is this due to us, or due to God?

We habitually upset nature's balance, and then complain because this upset balance produces enemies we didn't know we had. Is this the way God created it, or is this what we have done to his Creation?

We are reminded constantly that our task is to redeem every creature, not just man alone. Thirty years ago it was quite generally believed that the Lord could not possibly have "rebuked" the wind and the sea. Since then we have met "Hazel" and "Donna", and now it doesn't seem quite as impossible.

No Kangaroos, Please

Kangaroos Have Their Place, But It's Certainly Not On Your Christmas Card

By The Rev. Robert W. Cromey
Rector, Holy Nativity, Bronx

Why do we send Christmas cards?

Here is a question worth pondering, a question to which we should give calm deliberation now, rather than fleeting thoughts during the pre - Christmas rush.

The purest purpose of sending Christmas cards is to express to friends and neighbors the joy that God has enfleshed Himself in the child Jesus. God has become like us. By sending cards we wish our friends and neighbors the joys of the great event of Jesus' birth.

But the custom of sending cards has been corrupted. We send them to everyone we know, whether we love them or are merely acquainted. Many people express hostility by not sending a Christmas card to an acquaintance. Christmas cards are ways of keeping up business contacts. I get cards from my gas station, bank, hardware store, mailman, garbage man, my wife's beautician and the telephone answering service -- either to keep my business or to solicit a tip. Little thought is given by the sender to the central message.

Many Christmas cards reflect merely the personality of the sender. Teen-age girls almost always send cute little cards depicting a tiny girl with a muff standing in the snow. My jolly friends always send Santa Claus with a big red belly and small red nose, convulsed with laughter. My sad friends send cards with black and white winter scenes, with plenty of snow, an ice-covered stream, or a stoic New England village as seen from 1,000 feet up.

My athletic friends send cards with ice skaters, sleigh riders or skiers all screaming "Season's Greetings!" My decoration minded friends send cards covered with Christmas balls, decorated candles or clanging Yule bells suspended dizzily in mid-air -- and all with gobs of ribbons circling merrily about. My animal lover friends send cards with deer, dogs, kittens, bears, mice or kangaroos wishing us happy Yuletide as they peer mindlessly out at the recipient.

The Christmas greeting is a Christian and religious greeting. A Christian sending a secular card makes a mockery of his Christian faith. Non-Christian Christmas cards illustrate clearly that Christ and Christianity take second place to warm, happy thoughts surrounded by gift giving and pagan materialism.

Many religious people are embarrassed to send religious cards. They are afraid of being called "holy" or "fanatical" about their faith. Yet, Christians are "holy fanatics" who love Jesus Christ and who proclaim Him to all men.

The Christmas card which does most justice to the meaning of the Christmas event is one illustrating the child Jesus, the holy family or the humble birth in the manger. Beautifully decorated and illuminated scriptural phrases glorifying God in Christ also make fitting cards. The three kings theme is more appropriate to the Epiphany season, which begins January 6.

My wife and I have discussed whether or not we should send Christian Christmas cards to our Jewish friends. We do. The central message of Christmas is Christ. To our Jewish friends, as well as to our Christian friends, we want to express and offer our joy that God has acted in the world by giving us His Son. Jews know that this is our belief. They are not offended by our convictions, just as I am not offended by their rejection of Christ.

Think seriously about the Christmas cards you buy this year. Make sure they illustrate the deepest, most fundamental events of Christmas. ■

— THE BISHOP'S MESSAGE —

"Strong Laity: Strong Church." This was the significant theme of the Fall Convocation Meetings held last month in seven areas of our Diocese. As the theme implies, a strong laity must necessarily result in a strong Episcopal Church, but we must ask ourselves why we want the Episcopal Church to be strong.

We do not desire that the Church should be strong as an end in itself, in terms of communicant strength, or buildings, or programs and such like — for complacent pride in its own prestige and greater glory. We want it to be strong that, as the Body of Christ which is in the world and for each generation, it may more effectively do the work of Christ, and the more truly be the vehicle of his redemptive love; that it may become a worthier instrument for the realization on earth of the purposes of Almighty God; that it may be true to the commission of our Lord that his disciples should go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, that at the last the kingdoms of this world may become the Kingdom of our God and of his Christ. That the Church should be strong for selfish reasons is unimportant; that it should lose itself in the service of God and man is of supreme importance.

What must the laity do to enable the Church to go forward in the Name of the Lord and in the strength of his might? Here are four basic responsibilities of the laity:

1) To be true to the solemn promises which they made or were made in their name at their Baptism; promises they renewed at their Confirmation. It might be worthwhile for all of us to read the vows we made at these times and to ask ourselves if we are really keeping them.

2) To be faithful to their bounden duty to worship God every Sunday in his church. Through sacrament, prayer, and the Scriptures, we commune with the living Lord from whom all holy desires, all good counsels, and all just works do proceed. We gather together in worship not only to seek help for ourselves but, primarily, to offer ourselves as members of that great fellowhip which exists to serve God's Kingdom.

3) To read and study. Too many church people have not the slightest understanding of what the church is all about and the relevance of the Christian faith to life. There are available many excellent books on the Faith, the Holy Scriptures, Church history, the Teaching of the Church, the Book of Common Prayer. These should be read.

4) To bear their witness in the area of their vocations. And by this to assume their full civic obligations as committed Christians, reflecting in their attitudes, and dealings, and contacts, with other people and other races our Lord's love and concern for the freedom, dignity, and welfare of each human being.

The laity have an unique opportunity in the everyday relationships of life, where the gospel meets the real test of proving that Christianity can work. A life of witness and service is the only really persuasive argument for Christianity. The Church will be just as strong as its laity are sincere in striving to serve the Lord with all their heart and mind. Only thus can it fulfill the task to which God has called it in this generation.

We, in our Diocese, already have an admirable program of worship, work, and witness, sponsored by the Episcopal Churchwomen. I am looking forward to the establishment of a similar Diocesan program for Churchmen which will lead to a new understanding of the role of men in the life of the Church. In the January issue of The Bulletin I shall describe the structure and purposes of this program, developed out of the laymen's conferences held early this month.

Faithfully and affectionately your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

"We'll meet at Tuxedo"

Located in famous Tuxedo Park, the Diocese's Conference Center provides Mountain-top seclusion and economical accommodations for church meetings

The Guard at the Gate House didn't stop us, hardly even noticed, as we drove through the imposing stone entrance way to Tuxedo Park. But not too many years ago, well, strangers weren't treated so casually. An outsider could no more have driven right into Tuxedo Park than into the White House grounds.

Tuxedo Park's eight-foot barbed wire fence once enclosed a private preserve and a country haven for some of the nation's wealthiest citizens. It is still a prominent New York City suburb, but no longer is it a world unto itself. Symbolically, the fence has been allowed to fall into disrepair.

Our interest in Tuxedo Park lies chiefly in the fact that the Diocese now owns and operates there the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center. The Conference Center, in one of the grandest homes in the park, is used for meetings of parish, diocesan and national Episcopal church groups. Despite its seclusion, the Conference Center is only about 35 miles north of Manhattan, on Route 17.

Later on in this article we will look at the colorful past of Tuxedo Park — but first the Conference Center.

The home which is now the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center was built in 1899 for Henry W. Poor. Mr. Poor was a well-known Wall Street banker and originator of Poor's Manual of Securities, a standard reference book to this day.

Though the Poor family occupied the house only in the summer, it was built, maintained and furnished in the grand manner. Lavishly carved paneling and ornamental ceilings complemented rich hangings and stately furniture. Included in the furniture was a settee 32 feet long. There was a large staff of servants, 16 inside the house alone.

This impressive Jacobean mansion was featured in a "Notable American Homes" series in a 1904 issue of "Scientific American Building" magazine. The author called it, "one of the most notable of the many notable homes in Tuxedo."

Mr. Poor met financial difficulties and sold the house in 1909 to Henry Morgan Tilford, who was president of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio.

The stately structure was owned by the Tilfords until 1944. The buyer, in 1947, gave it to the Tuxedo Park Country Day School.

The school outgrew it, and in 1957 moved to an even larger former home in the park.

It was then that the Diocese of New York purchased the Tilford house. (turn the page, please)

Tuxedo —

The consulting architect of the Department of Missions, William H. van Benschoten, was engaged to furnish the building for conference use, maintaining a close relationship to the Jacobean style.

So, though the furnishings are naturally more functional than the original, the gracious elegance of the house remains. Especially notable are the wood paneling and carvings through much of the house, the ornate ceilings, and the mammoth fireplaces.

There are 12 bedrooms, accommodating 40 guests. Sixty can be served in the dining room.

Meeting accommodations consist of two rooms seating 60 and 40, and a combination library and meeting room for 25.

Just completed, in what was formerly the hunt room, is a striking chapel of unusual architectural design. (See article on page 15).

The Conference Center's daily rate, which includes overnight accommodations and three meals, is a very moderate $8.00.

Arrangements for use of the Conference Center, by church groups only, may be made through the manager, Mrs. D. George Adams, Box 535, Tuxedo Park, New York.

The housing developers of today, who create virtual cities in a few months, could have learned something from the founder of Tuxedo Park. He was tobacco tycoon Pierre Lorillard IV, whose wealth, imagination and drive converted a wilderness into a complete community in only eight months.

The land on which Tuxedo Park is built had been in the Lorillard family since 1814. In 1885, Pierre Lorillard decided to transform this hilly, rocky, desolated area into a game preserve — a game preserve to end all game preserves.

Work was started in the fall of 1885 and continued through the winter. A giant labor force of 1,800 men was brought in and housed in a sprawling camp.

During that winter, eight months, Tuxedo Park became a reality. From a wilderness inhabited only by wildlife emerged the following:

Fifteen houses, 18 miles of road, complete water and sewage systems, police headquarters, a gate house, an eight-foot fence around 3,000 acres, a dam, ice house, swimming pool, club house, fish hatchery, stables and tennis courts.

Outside the park itself the workmen erected two blocks of stores, which later became part of the Town of Tuxedo.

And all of this — houses, stores, roads — the entire community — was the property of Pierre Lorillard.

It was Mr. Lorillard's original intention to rent the houses to his friends and to keep the park well-stocked with game. But the imported pheasants and wild turkeys flew away, and some of the other game became too tamed for sportsmanship. (One hunter raised his rifle to shoot a handsome buck but lowered it in disgust when he noticed a dainty red ribbon around its neck. It had been put there by a youthful resident, a girl who became famous as Emily Post.)

Though Tuxedo Park didn't fare well as a game preserve, it rapidly became a country residence for some of America's wealthiest families. Among families who either owned a home in the park or belonged to the Tuxedo Club were the Astors, the Morgans, the Harrimans, and, of course, the Lorillards.

The "tuxedo" got its name from one worn by Griswold Lorillard to Tuxedo's Autumn Ball of 1886. Then unknown in this country, the coat was tailored after dinner jackets worn in England. The daring departure from tails created a sensation among Tuxedo Park's conventional society.

In 1952, the park was incorporated as the Village of Tuxedo Park, with a mayor at its head. The present village consists of about 2,000 acres, with a population of about 900. (The business section adjoining the park along Route 17 is not a part of the village but of the Town of Tuxedo.)

While some of Tuxedo Park's "palaces" of a former day are gone, there are still many fine old homes. Some have been converted into special uses, such as our Conference Center. Attractive residences have been made by remodeling carriage houses, garages and tenant houses. A whole new generation has moved in, people who live in the park permanently and commute to New York.

With all this change, Tuxedo Park has lost none of its natural charm — its rocky hills, its mountain streams, its graceful woods, its majestic lake. ■

Reports Given on Four Construction Projects

Pictures on this page, taken the middle of last month, show progress on four major construction projects in the Diocese. Three of the projects are being financed with money contributed to the 175th Anniversary Fund. (1960 is the 175th anniversary of the founding of the Diocese of New York).

In the Bronx, the Diocese's Department of Missions is building a $474,000 church, parish house and rectory. Site of this 175th Anniversary Fund Project is two blocks from the 3,000-family Castle Hill Houses. Completion of the new facilities is scheduled for spring. They will assume the work of the present St. Andrew's Mission on Sound View Avenue.

Another 175th Anniversary Fund undertaking is the $200,000 parish house being built by the Department of Missions adjacent to St. Margaret's, Bronx. After the parish house is completed, in the spring, it will be used as a church temporarily while the present church is being rebuilt. St. Margaret's is an assisted parish, meaning that it receives financial aid and program leadership from the Diocese.

At Valley Cottage, in Rockland County, a new All Saints church is being built by the Department of Missions at a cost of about $83,000. The funds are being loaned to the mission from the Revolving Fund raised in the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign. Work on the new church, which replaces a much smaller one, will be completed by Christmas. The old church will then be used entirely for parish house purposes.

On Staten Island, St. Simon's is replacing their church with a new one a mile away. The present building, located on a small triangle between two heavily traveled streets, will be demolished to make way for the Clove Lakes Expressway link to the new Narrows Bridge.

The new building is scheduled for completion by the end of the year. Besides the church itself, the plant will include a (continued on page 8)

. . . in brief

■ ANNOUNCER BILL SHIPLEY, widely known to television viewers as the spokesman for Prudential Insurance and Chase Manhattan Bank, has been given an award by the National Council of the Episcopal Church. The award, a bronze plaque, honors Episcoplians for unusual contributions to religious broadcasting.

Mr. Shipley is the regular announcer for National Council's radio show "Viewpoint," carried on WOR, and on the "Word for the Day" radio spots. A member of St. Stephen's, Ridgefield, Connecticut, he is a vestryman, lay reader and a member of the Diocese of Connecticut's Department of Promotion. He also speaks extensively on the role of the layman in evangelism.

■ IF THE VOICE of one of the lay readers at St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining, seems to have an especially resonant quality, it is to be expected. He is tenor John McCollum, whose home is near the church. Among the opera and concert singer's engagements during the coming season will be performances with the symphony orchestras of Detroit, St. Louis and Chicago. He will also tour for five weeks with the Little Orchestra Society of New York, concluding at Carnegie Hall.

■ EIGHT CHOIR BOYS from the Church of the Transfiguration (The Little Church Around the Corner) are participating in performances of the New York Pro Musica. The first performance was last month in Boston at the New England Conservatory of Music. Next month there will be performances in Washington, New York and Chicago. This past summer the eight choir boys toured Europe with a Pro Musica musical drama group.

■ JUDGE LEONARD P. MOORE, of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second District, spoke at the fifth annual service for the legal profession, held October 11 at Manhattan's Trinity Church. The service, which was attended by members of the Bench and Bar, was sponsored by the Church Club of New York and the Protestant Council of the City of New York.

■ THE FIRST NEW HEADQUARTERS building to be erected by any state or local council of churches in the nation has been dedicated in Hartford by the Connecticut Council of Churches. In addition to offices and a large conference room, the building has a completely equipped radio studio and two photographic laboratories.

■ A MISSIONARY working in Yokkaichi City, Japan, has been "adopted" by Christ Church, Bronxville. He is the Rev. John Lloyd, who spoke to the women of the parish in 1957. A parish adopts a missionary through the Church's National Council. The arrangement involves the parish's keeping close touch with him, providing material assistance, and helping him interpret his work to Churchmen in this country.

■ THE PUBLIC IS INVITED to a series of weekly Services of Music by the choir of the Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan. The services will follow solemn evensong at 8:00 p.m. on the last Sunday of each month through April. The exception is December, when the date will be Saturday the 24th. This will be the fourth annual series of the Service of Music. Included will be music by Bach, Haydn, Britten, Poulenc and Durufle.

■ FLOWERS GROWN at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center won four awards in the annual flower show of the Tuxedo Horticultural Society. The Center had five entries.

First prizes were won in the "Six Blooms of Dahlias" and "Vase of Double Asters" categories. Second prizes were won in "The Best Dahlia" and "Three Blooms of Incurved Cactus Dahlias" categories.

The winning flowers were grown by the Conference Center's gardener and maintenance man, Paul Petrosky, and by Mrs. D. George Adams, manager.

The Conference Center, a former country estate, is owned and operated by the Diocese. ■ wing for offices, plus parish house facilities in the basement. The former rectory has been moved to just behind the church.

The entire project, including moving the rectory, is expected to cost roughly $150,000. The work is being paid for entirely by St. Simon's, an independant parish.

When St. Simon's became a parish, the Department of Missions deeded the old property to the new corporation. It also loaned the parish funds to purchase the new site. The loan was repaid from the condemnation award.

About Bishops

What is the difference between a bishop, a bishop coadjutor and a suffragan bishop in the Episcopal Church in this country? Because many laymen are not sure of the distinctions, we list them here.

BISHOP—The term is used in two ways. First, it is one of the three orders of clergy, the other two being priest and deacon. In this sense, it applies to all bishops. In the other use of the term, "the bishop" is often used to refer to the head of a diocese or missionary district. In more precise terms, the head of a diocese is the "diocesan" or the "ordinary."

BISHOP COADJUTOR — A bishop-assistant to the diocesan who automatically succeeds him upon his death or retirement. Usually, a coadjutor is elected as the diocesan approaches the voluntary retirement age — 68, or the mandatory retirement age for all bishops — 72.

SUFFRAGAN BISHOP — A bishop-assistant to the bishop who does not have automatic right of succession. He may, however, be elected diocesan after the diocesan's retirement or death if the diocese does not have a bishop coadjutor. A suffragan bishop may be called to another diocese or missionary district, whereas a diocesan or coadjutor may not.

In the Diocese of New York, the diocesan is the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan. The suffragan bishops are the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton and the Rt. Rev. Stuart Wetmore. The diocese has no bishop coadjutor. ■

Bishop Elected Province Head

The Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York, has been unanimously elected president of the Second Province of the Episcopal Church. His term will expire in 1963.

Bishop Donegan's election took place during an October 18-19 meeting of the Provincial Synod in Buffalo. The synod is the governing body of a province. It is composed of the bishops in the province, and clergy and lay delegates from each diocese and missionary district. All dioceses and missionary districts of the Episcopal Church are in one of its eight provinces.

The Second Province is composed of the six dioceses in New York, the two in New Jersey, and the missionary districts of: Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, the Panama Canal Zone, and Central America.

The synod of the Second Province meets every year except that year in which the General Convention of the Church is held. General Convention meet every three years, the next meeting being in Detroit next September. ■

Why doesn't the Episcopal Church teach and believe in the Assumption?

Chiefly because the New Testament makes no mention of it. The earliest references are from the Apocryphal Apocalypses. The earliest date claimed for any of them is the Fourth Century, and some of them were not written until the Middle Ages. It is to be noted that the modern statements about the Assumption do not differ markedly from the popular Hebrew belief about Enoch and Elijah, both of whom were popularly believed to have ascended bodily into the heavens — in spite of the fact that the text does not really say this in either case.

The Church has for centuries observed the feast of the "Falling Asleep" of the Blessed Virgin, but in every ancient icon the Lord receives his mother's soul either in the form of a dove or as a shrouded figure as tiny as a baby's. There are historic levels of the observation of this feast: first, the simple one, which marked the death of the one who throughout all generations was to be called blessed; second, the taking on of portions of the apocryphal accounts as matters of pious faith; and third, the doctrine of the bodily assumption of the Blessed Virgin, which has recently become a dogma for our Roman Catholic brethren.

In strict honesty, one must say that there have for centuries been people who would have accepted this quite literally and without question. The only difference between their condition and the position just

Brotherhood of St. Andrew Stresses Layman's Mission

This is the first in a series of articles about organizations affiliated with the Episcopal Church.

It had been three years since Frank had been to church. At first he found excuses for not going; then he no longer bothered to do even that. But here he was in church again; and beside him knelt a man wearing a lapel pin of what looked like a red X.

The wearer of that pin was a member of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and the pin was a representation of the form of cross that St. Andrew is said to have died on.

Bringing lapsed Christians back into the Church is one of the many outright evangelistic activities of this organization for Episcopal men and boys. The Brotherhood is very explicit about its purpose: the spread of Christ's Kingdom. It is not a social club, not an organization for "spectator" members, but a group of men who have pledged themselves to daily prayer and continuous service. It is for those men and boys who take seriously the term "ministry of the laity."

Brotherhood chapters, which may be formed in any Episcopal church with the consent of the rector, are kept small—15 to 20 members. Some churches have two or more chapters. The purpose of small chapters is to encourage a feeling of communion among the members, a feeling of, yes, brotherhood.

Though Brotherhood chapters hold regular meetings, these are not the focal point of the organization. Meetings are held mainly to decide on new service projects and to review those in progress.

What are some of the projects of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. Here are just a few:

Visiting prisoners; bringing elderly and infirm people to church; conducting parish surveys; helping to establish missions; calling on parishioners, especially newcomers and invalids; personal evangelism.

Strengthening Brotherhood members for these tasks are the daily prayers which they pledge to say upon joining, and group worship and study.

An international organization, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew has 800 chapters and 12,000 members in the United States. In the Diocese of New York there are 25 chapters and 430 members.

For handbooks and further information, write to The Brotherhood of St. Andrew, 709 West Market Street, York, Pa. ■

Formosa New U.S. Mission

The Chinese Nationalist Island of Formosa has been made a missionary district of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A.

The new district is known as the "Missionary District of Taiwan (Formosa)." It includes only the Island of Formosa, not the 77 other islands of Taiwan.

The district was created by transfer of the jurisdiction from the Nippon Seikokai (Holy Catholic Church in Japan) to the Episcopal Church. Both Churches are branches of the Anglican Communion.

In authorizing the transfer at its meeting in Cooperstown, N. Y., a year ago, the Episcopal Church's House of Bishops declared that its intention was "to strengthen the mission of this Church to act responsibly as trustees for the Churches of the Anglican Communion."

The new district is under the Rt. Rev. Harry S. Kennedy, Missionary Bishop of Honolulu. Though not formally a missionary district of the Episcopal Church, Formosa has been administered by the Bishop of Honolulu since 1954.

According to the latest figures, Formosa has five congregations, four priests and 1,000 communicants. ■

Episcopal Churchwomen

Bishop Hunter To Address Advent Meeting Dec. 6

Episcopal Churchwomen from all convocations of the Diocese will gather at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Tuesday, December 6, for their Advent Meeting.

This day marks a high spot in the year's program and is an experience in which every devout Churchwoman is urged to participate.

The day starts with Holy Communion at 10:30 and the presentation of the United Thank Offering. (See U.T.O. article on this page.) Preacher at the service wil be the Rt. Rev. James W. Hunter, Bishop of the Missionary District of Wyoming.

From the Cathedral the group will move to the undercroft of Synod House for a box luncheon. (Synod House is on the Cathedral grounds.)

The meeting itself will begin at 1:00 o'clock in the auditorium of Synod House. Diocesan President Mrs. Gurney Williams will preside.

During the afternoon, a highly dramatic film concerned with the senior members of the family will be shown. Presentation of the film is a part of this year's program emphasis, "Aging — A Challenge." This study of aging rounds out the three-year theme, "One Family in Christ," which opened with "Children and Youth" and continued with "Today's Family."

Bishop Hunter, who will preach at the morning service, became the fifth bishop of the Missionary District of Wyoming in 1949. He had been named bishop coadjutor the previous year.

A 1928 graduate of Virginia Theological Seminary, he has been the rector of churches in Maryland, Kentucky and Texas.

BISHOP HUNTER

In the Diocese of Lexington, he was a member of the Standing Committee for five years and president of the Department of Christian Education.

In the Diocese of West Texas, he was chairman of the Department of Finance and vice president and president of the Sixth Province.

Bishop Hunter was a deputy to the Episcopal Church's General Conventions of 1934, 1937, 1940, 1943 and 1946. In 1956, he became a member of the Church's Joint Committee on Program and Budget and is convener of that committee at the 1961 General Convention. ■ taken by the Roman Catholic Church is that whereas it was for them an act of pious faith, a member of the Roman Catholic Church in our day must accept it as necessary doctrine. Our own Church's position is that we may not teach anything as necessary to eternal salvation which can't be concluded and proved by the Scripture.

What the Roman Catholic Church may require of its communicants is entirely its business. We also have rules. ■

UTO Spring Ingathering Total Exceeds $32,000

The Advent Ingathering of the United Thank Offering will be held December 6 at the Cathedral during the Advent Meeting of the Diocese's Episcopal Churchwomen. The offering will be the total of Blue Box contributions from the women of the Diocese.

There are two ingatherings each year, in the spring and fall, over a three-year period. The sixth and final ingathering of the period will be next May. The three-year total will be presented in Detroit next September at the Triennial Meeting of the nation's Episcopal Churchwomen.

The amount accumulated up to July 1, 1960, toward the Triennial Offering is $125,397, including interest. This exceeds the amount on the same date in the last triennium by $8,238.

At the time of the December 6 ingathering, there will be an exhibit of historical items connected with the U.T.O. One of these is the wooden Blue Box used by Mrs. Antoinette Lockett from 1898 until her death in 1946. Another is a check book from which more than $900,000 was forwarded to the national treasurer from 1934 to 1958.

Results of the spring, 1960, ingathering, by convocations, are:

| | No. of Women | Amount |
|---|---|---|
| BRONX | 823 | $ 1,692 |
| DUTCHESS | 850 | 1,717 |
| HUDSON | 470 | 921 |
| MANHATTAN | 2,769 | 14,977 |
| RAMAPO | 500 | 1,333 |
| RICHMOND | 554 | 1,247 |
| WESTCHESTER | 3,139 | 10,026 |
| OPEN OFFERINGS | | 139 |
| G.F.S. | 23 | 14 |
| TOTALS | 9,128 | $32,071 |

In reporting these figures, Mrs. William E. Leidt, U.T.O. treasurer and chairman, said that the goal for the December 6 offering is 10,000 contributors.

"This increase in the number of those sharing in the offering should be easy," she explained, "if we all remember that the United Thank Offering of the women of the Church is an act of prayer and sharing offered spontaneously, with a deep sense of thanksgiving for God's presence in our lives and for His many gifts to us." ■

Menu Matches Program Theme

A series of Advent supper meetings at Holy Trinity, Manhattan, won't start after the supper, but with the supper.

At the first meeting, November 27, the program will concern church work in Scotland. Appropiately, the supper will feature Scotch foods.

Mexican food and theme will be the order for December 4. Sweden will be spotlighted at the final meeting December 11.

Holy Trinity, which is on East 88th St., began the series of novel Advent meetings last year. The countries then were Japan, Italy and India.

This year, as last, the programs will consist of Evening Prayer at at 7:00.

The various foreign foods served have been so popular that Holy Trinity is publishing a cook book containing some of the recipes. It will be available December 1. ■

Work Begins On Seamen's Newark Site

Bishop Donegan laid the cornerstone last month for the Port Newark Station of Seamen's Church Institute. The Station, and an adjoining soccer field, will provide eating and recreational facilities for the thousands of seamen who put into the port.

The 300 guests who attended the ceremonies traveled to Port Newark from Manhattan aboard a chartered Hudson River Day Line ship. Also on board were 45 members of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy band, who played during the trip and at the dedication.

Among those appearing on the program, in addition to Bishop Donegan, were the Rt. Rev. Donald MacAdie, Suffragan Bishop of Newark, and F. E. Vilas, President of Seamen's Church Institute.

A soccer game, the first to be played on the partially completed field, followed the ceremonies. Teams were from Norwegian and English ships, with the English the victor.

Port Newark, which is near Newark Airport, has all the modern facilities for shipping but almost nothing in the way of recreational and eating facilities. To help meet this situation, Seaman's Church Institute has been running a shuttle bus service to the Institute in lower Manhattan. The new facilities will eliminate the need for this time consuming trip. ■

Role-Players Demonstrate How Prejudice Hurts Town

A mock school board meeting at Manhattan's Intercession Chapel had to be adjourned when the participants couldn't agree even to voting on a matter involving prejudice.

The fiery role-playing session took place as the climax to a six-week adult study course on "The Christian Idea of Race and Ethnic Tensions." The first five sessions, held weekly, considered environmental factors, one's self and prejudice, and the barriers to understanding.

There were 15 persons enrolled in the course, but another 45 were brought in for the final session. Each of the 60 persons was assigned a role in a controversial issue facing the fictitious town of Pinkerville.

The issue facing the community was: should the school board demolish two obsolete schools -- one predominantly Jewish, the other mainly Christian -- and replace them with one school for both groups.

The 60 role-players were assigned to various community organizations, such as the real estate board, civic clubs, and the ministerial association. These mock organizations were asked to decide on the issue as they thought the actual organization would decide. But there were "plants" in each organization, individuals who were privately briefed on the presentation of outright prejudicial viewpoints.

The role-playing session lasted three hours. During the first two and a half hours, the various organizations held meetings and decided how the group felt on the issue; and then the pro groups tried to sway the con groups, and vice versa.

The mock school board meeting was held the last half hour, but the forces favoring and opposing the new school were so unyielding that the meeting got nowhere.

Leroy Carter, of the New York City Commission on Intergroup Relations, summarized the novel session and cited examples showing the reality of the situation presented. He further explained how important it is for Christians to join community organizations and to try to counteract existing prejudices.

The entire course was under direction of the Rev. Roger O. Douglas, of the Intercession Chapel staff. ■

Diocese's Clergy Meet at Tuxedo

The 31st annual Clergy Conference of the Diocese was held September 26 at Tuxedo Park. The meeting, held at the Tuxedo Club, was preceded by lunch at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center. A dinner at the Center followed the meeting.

The one-day meeting at Tuxedo was a departure from past years, when two-day meetings were held at the Hotel Thayer in West Point.

Principal speaker at the Clergy Conference was Bishop Donegan, who called on clergymen to exert leadership in their church schools.

The progress of evangelism in the Episcopal Church was explored in a talk by the Rt. Rev. Charles A. Mason, Bishop of Dallas, and chairman of the Church's Joint Commission on Evangelism.

The final speaker was the Rev. Louis M. Hirshon, who spoke on the institutions of which he is president, Hobart and William Smith Colleges. Hobart, the men's college of the two institutions, was founded in 1822 and is the oldest Episcopal College in the country. ■

Irvington Rector Given Preachers Fellowship

The Rev. H. August Kuehl, Rector of St. Barnabas, Irvington, is one of ten clergymen in the country to receive a fellowship at the Washington Cathedral College of Preachers for the fall term.

The Fellows are chosen from among those clergymen who have attended four or five sessions at the college. As Fellows, they spend six weeks at the college, engaged in study, research, and assisting in cathedral services.

One purpose of the College of Preachers is to bring the clergy of the Church together in groups of 25 or 30 for five-day sessions. During this time they hear lectures on theological developments, practice preaching, criticize one another's preaching, and share their ideas about parish life.

A clergyman may not attend a session more often than once every three years, and only on invitation. ■

Diocese Given Chapel For Conference Center

Bishop Donegan conducted the first service, held October 20, in the recently completed Chapel of St. Simon and St. Jude. The chapel is in the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center at Tuxedo Park and was named in honor of the saints on whose feast day Bishop Donegan was consecrated.

A memorial to Isabelle Weart Tilford and Henry Morgan Tilford, the chapel was given by their daughters, Isabelle Wagstaff, Katharine Mortimer and Annette Haskell. The building which is now the Conference Center was the Tilford home from 1909 to 1944.

Mrs. Mortimer attended the initial service, as did members of the Diocesan Council.

During the service, Bishop Donegan dedicated the communion vessels. The chapel will be consecrated at a later date.

The Chapel of St. Simon and St. Jude was designed by architect William H. van Benschoten. The Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church, designed the cross, communion vessels, dossal, frontal, candlesticks and missal stand.

The new chapel has a normal seating of 40 and a capacity of 75. ■

Abide with us

. . . Waiting to be wanted is probably the most terrifying human experience—may you never know it. Millions of people overseas know it all too well. They are the homeless, the aged, the orphaned, the hungry. Only their incredible human spirit—plus the help of others—keeps them going.

Some are still in temporary camps in Europe—years after the war. Great numbers in many lands throughout the world have been made homeless by earthquakes, floods or political upheaveal. All lack clothing, jobs, food and adequate shelter.

Perhaps they seem too far away to help. But you need only go as far as your own House of Worship. There, your gift will be gratefully received. And delivered with love by the Overseas Aid programs of your religious faith.

New Cathedral Chapel Honors Bishop Gilbert

A new Cathedral chapel in memory of the Rt. Rev. Charles Kendall Gilbert was blessed and dedicated November 20 by Bishop Donegan. The service took place immediately after the annual Service for the Patriotic Societies of New York. (See article page 6).

Bishop Gilbert was Bishop Donegan's predecessor as the Bishop of New York. Serving his entire 42-year ministry in the Diocese of New York, Bishop Gilbert was Suffragan Bishop from 1930 to 1947 and Diocesan from 1947 to 1950. He died in 1958.

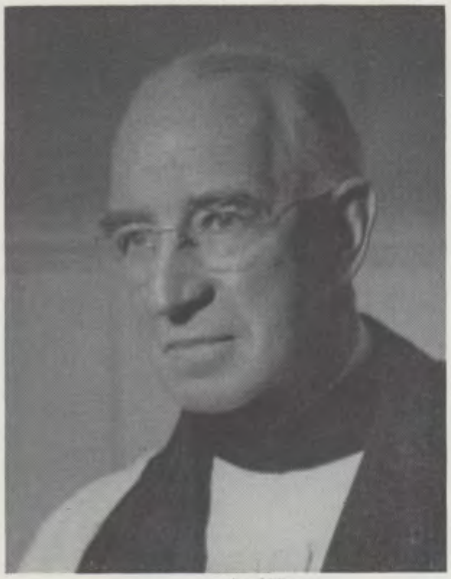
The Gilbert memorial has been named the Chapel of St. Michael and St. George. It is in the Army-Navy Bay, directly across the nave from the tomb of Bishop Manning, who was Bishop Gilbert's predecessor as Diocesan.

Bishop Donegan, in his sermon during the Patriotic Societies service, lauded Bishop Gilbert's foresight and leadership. Following are excerpts from that sermon:

"On this day, it is my purpose to bless and dedicate the Chapel of St. Michael and St. George in memory of my immediate predecessor, Charles Kendall Gilbert, Eleventh Bishop of New York. He himself has addressed you at these services and I, his successor, do so as he did — with pride.

"It is incumbent on me to speak of him, but it would only be appropriate were I to speak of him in terms of his mind and conviction about the things for which both you and I stand, and to which both you and I are committed.

"The Bishop was deeply concious of two fundamental things: one, the crying need of peace among men, all and each of whom were created by God in his likeness; and two, of the church's all essential ministry to this need.



BISHOP GILBERT

"Bishop Gilbert was an ardent patriot in his concern for this country's obligation not only to be its best but also to seem its best in the eyes of all men everywhere.

"I knew him very well, having served him both as Suffragan and Coadjutor, and I can certify to the fact that his every waking moment was engaged with the complex difficulties and anxieties of the times in which we live.

"No man who has served our church was more concious than he of the immediate and pressing responsibility which rests upon each individual Christian. He cared about his own people. In the strictest sense of the word, the Bishop was a compassionate man. He had the ability, God-given, to care so much for the sick, the suffering, the hungry, and the needy, that they became a matter of personal concern to him.

Bishop Donegan gives the blessing after dedicating memorial chapel to Bishop Gilbert. Also shown is the Rev. Maxwell Mc. N. Thomas, who acted as the Bishop's Chaplain. Among those attending the service was Bishop Gilbert's son, Frederick D. H. Gilbert.

The Bishop's Christmas Message

We celebrate at Christmas not only the birth of Christ, but also what it means. We call this miraculous event the Incarnation, — the Everlasting God coming to earth in the form of a human child. In this mightiest act of God, before which we bow in adoration and amazement, lies the sublime significance of Christmas.

Before the Saviour's birth, it was asked: if God exists, why does he not reveal himself, that his character, his purpose and his nature might be known? In the hearts and minds of mankind there was a longing for some sure word of God to release them from sin and fear, to give them hope, and to guide them into truth. The nativity of Christ was the answer. "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us full of grace and truth."

How improverished would be our knowledge of God and his purpose if there had been no Bethlehem! It has cleared up innumberable questions and mysteries that had haunted and disturbed. The Incarnation tells us what God is and always has been, and always will be. It tells us what God means us to be. It tells us what life can become if once the world takes Jesus Christ as its Master. And always it says, "We have seen the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." From that actual happening in the realm of history has flowed all that Christianity has meant to mankind.

God sent his own Son not just to people in the first century but to people in all times and places, to bring pardon, freedom, fulfillment, and hope. "Behold the tabernacle of God is with men and he will dwell with them and they shall be with them and be their God."

In our day, Christ comes to us again, right where we are in the midst of all our present needs. No matter what our failures, fears, frustrations and despairs may be, we can, through faith and surrender to him, find forgiveness, new life, and freedom to be all God intends us to be.

And so a joyful and blessed Christmas to you all.

Faithfully and affectionately, your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

IF YOU'RE A GODPARENT

A Godparent's Responsibilities - - Here's What They Are

BEING A GODPARENT involves serious obligations — obligations sometimes not clearly understood, sometimes taken too lightly. To help Godparents better understand their duties and to assist parents in the selection of Godparents, the editor of the Bulletin has directed a series of questions to the Rt. Rev. Stuart Wetmore. Bishop Wetmore, Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese, was before his consecration director of the Diocese's Department of Christian Education.

Who may be a Godparent? Must he or she be an Episcopalian?

Briefly, any responsible Christian. In many parishes there is a desire to restrict the privilege to communicants of the Episcopal Church, but this is not required either by the Prayer Book or by general custom. The questions Godparents answer assume that they have been baptized, but the Prayer Book doesn't state this as a requirement.

The key requirements seem to be that Godparents must be active in the life of the church, and must be in a position to fulfill the promises they make with regard to this particular child.

No age requirement is stated, but it is safe to assume from the promises Godparents must make that they have reached the age of discretion.

How many Godparents should a child have?

The second rubric for the Ministration of Holy Baptism (page 273 in the Prayer Book) states:

"There shall be for every Male-child to be baptized, when they can be had, two Godfathers and one Godmother; and for every Female, one Godfather and two Godmothers; and Parents shall be admitted as Sponsors, if it be desired."

I found this hard to keep straight until I realized that a child is to have two Godparents of the same sex as the child and one of the opposite. The last part of the section means that parents may serve as sponsors, in place of Godparents.

At about what age is a person considered old enough not to require Godparents at his baptism?

At the age when he is able and willing to make the necessary promises in his own name. But note that the Prayer Book calls for witnesses when an adult is baptized. See the fine print at the bottom of page 279.

What are the specific responsibilities of Godparents?

The specific responsibilities are indicated in the questions asked in the Ministration of Holy Baptism on pages 276-77 of the Prayer Book. In the name of the child, they must renounce evil, affirm the articles of the Christian faith, state (on the child's behalf) a desire for baptism, and a promise to keep the Commandments.

Then, in his own name, the Godparent must accept responsibility to see that this child be instructed as a Christian and brought to the Bishop to be confirmed.

In simple terms, Godparents have no assigned responsibility which is not already, and primarily, the responsibility of the parents. If the parents are not still alive, or are not properly disposed, Godparents must do what they can to see that the child is not deprived, and that the promises made in baptism are fulfilled.

Apart from specific responsibility, all Godparents are expected to take an active interest in their Godchildren and to show a continued Christian concern for them.

Does a Godparent's responsibility end after the child is confirmed?

No, his responsibility changes. The child, immediately before confirmation, affirms the baptism promises in his own name, having reached what is considered to be, for him, the age of discretion, and having been instructed. But he still has to live out the promises he has made, and he has still more to learn within the Christian community.

The continued active concern of his Godparents is as necessary to the older teen-ager as it is to the kindergarten child. The relationship of Godparents with child is essentially a spiritual one, and should be maintained as strongly as possible forever.

What happens if the Godparents die before the child is confirmed? Who assumes their responsibilities? Can other persons then be made Godparents of the child?

Each child normally has five adults who bear a commitment to God for him — two parents and three Godparents. In earlier times there was always a strong possibility that all five might be dead before the child was confirmed, but this is less likely now.

No provision is made for the replacement of Godparents in the event of their deaths. This responsibility would in all likelihood be carried by the remaining Godparents or parents, or by some other member of the child's family.

If the parents die, are the Godparents expected to take over direct supervision of the child's religious education?

If the parents of the child die, someone must take over the total care of the child — perhaps grandparents, perhaps an uncle or aunt, perhaps a Godparent. Primary responsibility for the religious education of the child would, of necessity, rest on the household in which he is brought up.

Since Godparents have no rights before the law, they must exercise their responsibility and concern through those who have the daily care of the child. In the event of tension developing due to differences in religious background or intent, Godparents must exert every Christian force to fulfill their commitment to God and to this child.

What are Godparents expected to do if the parents leave the Episcopal Church and decide not to have the child confirmed? If the child decides to become associated with some other church?

Even though the parents or the child should not desire confirmation, Godparents have a solemn responsibility to present the child for confirmation if this can in any way be brought to pass within the context of Christian love and concern.

We believe in religious freedom, and are very much aware of the decisions of Episcopalians to join other churches. Parents who have left the Episcopal Church should be reminded, however, that they cannot erase the fact of their own confirmation. Nor can they lightly ignore the vows they have made on behalf of their children.

"THE CONTINUED active concern of his Godparents is as necessary to the older teen-ager as it is to the kindergarten child," Bishop Wetmore points out.

CONFIRMATION, an important moment for the Godparents, as well as for the child. Godparents' responsibilites do not end with confirmation, only change. Picture shows Bishop Wetmore, author of this article, confirming a child at St. Luke's, Eastchester.

YCS Honors Youth Leaders

Two women — one a Girl Scout leader and the other a Youth Consultation Service volunteer for 51 years — were honored at the first annual awards dinner of Youth Consultation Service of the Diocese of New York.

Those honored were Mrs. Howard Phipps, President of the Girl Scout Council of Greater New York since 1942, and Mrs. William C. Dickey, who served Y.C.S. as chairman, president and secretary of the board. She has been a board member since 1941.

The two youth leaders were the first recipients of the Huntington-Manning Medal, named for the founders of Y.C.S. The medal will be awarded annually for oustanding service in the guidance of girls and young women.

Youth Consultation Service is now engaged in a drive for $350,000 for its 1961 program. Bishop Donegan, who was unable to attend the awards dinner because of a House of Bishops meeting, sent a message and a check for $1,000 from the Bishop's Fund for Diocesan Needs. ■

Patriotic Societies Have Annual Service

Representatives of 100 organizations marched in the procession at the 39th annual Service for the Patriotic Societies of New York. The service was held in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on Sunday afternoon, November 20, with Bishop Donegan the preacher. Total attendance was about 3,000.

Dedication of the Gilbert memorial in the Cathedral followed the Patriotic Societies service. (See separate article on page 2.

Organizations represented at the services included the Daughters of the American Revolution, Society of the Cincinnati, Children of the Confederacy, British War Veterans of America, Descendants of Signers of the Declaration of Independence, and many others. About 50 separate organizations were represented, some by two or more local groups. ■

Bishop Marks Tenth Year As Diocesan

Bishop Donegan observed his 10th anniversary as the Bishop of New York on October 28. At noon, the Bishop celebrated Holy Communion in St. Martin's Chapel of the Cathedral. Attending the service were the Bishop's mother, Mrs. Horace George Donegan, and members of the Diocesan and Cathedral staffs.

Godparents—

Godparents must remember that the decision to ignore these vows on the part of the parents does not absolve the Godparents from their own particular responsibility before God. Within the context of love and freedom, Godparents must fulfill their vows if at all possible.

Should a person be Godparent to more than one child?

A person may be Godparent to more than one child, but whether or not one should is dependent upon the amount of spiritual responsibility one is able to undertake for others.

Being a Godparent demands much prayer for the child, much time for the expression of genuine spiritual concern. God certainly decrees that certain parents should have several children: it is more than likely, then, that he also leads certain Godparents into the responsibility of several Godchildren.

In what other churches do children have Godparents?

In all churches which practice infant baptism.

May an Episcopalian be a Godparent for a non-Episcopalian?

It would depend on the promises he would need to make.

If what is desired or required falls short of what you are convinced ought to be required, or if you are expected to make promises that in all good conscience you cannot keep, then the direct and honest thing is called for — decline with thanks ■

Neighborhood Survey Used In Planning of New Church

Your old church burned, and you have been loaned a Methodist church that was available because its congregation merged with another. Now you want to build a new church, but not in the area of the old one, because of commercial encroachment and its relation to population growth. How can you be sure that your choice for a new location is good?

This is the question facing All Saints Church on Staten Island.

To help answer it, the Diocese's Department of Missions this summer engaged a seminarian to make a survey of every family living in the area. (All Saints is a mission of the Diocese.)

Making the two-month survey was M. Gayland Pool, an Episcopal seminarian at Union Theological Seminary. Mr. Pool called on every family (except All Saints members) in a one mile square area.

The basic purpose of the survey was to prepare a list of families who might attend the new church. Families that evinced an interest are being called on by the vicar, the Rev. William J. Clague, to determine the extent of their interest.

Mr. Pool called on 1,875 homes, which had a total of 7,072 persons living in them. Of these persons, 62 percent professed to be Roman Catholic, 35 percent Protestant, and 3 percent Jewish.

A total of 86 families professed to be either active or inactive Episcopalians. Of these, 19 had no parish affiliation.

Of the non-Episcopalians interviewed, 55 families indicated a definite interest in the new church; and 170 families are not active in a local church and might be interested in All Saints.

Of the 1,875 families called on, only 25 refused to give any information. ■

Church Parish Hall Becomes Study Hall

If you've ever tried to study in a crowded, poorly lighted room with the television set blaring, you can appreciate the value of a new service being offered by St. Edward the Martyr, 12 East 109th Street, Manhattan.

The church has set up daily study halls for the many children in the neighborhood who have poor study conditions at home. The facilities are provided Monday through Friday. An afternoon period, 3:30 to 5:00, is for the younger children; and an evening period, 7:30 to 9:00, for the older ones.

Many of the children are of Puerto Rican descent and have difficulty with the English language. To help them, an extensive remedial reading program was set up last year and continued this year. The program is being aided by a grant from Bishop Donegan.

This year, 16 volunteers, none of them trained teachers, took a course in the teaching of reading. The four-session course was given by a professional remedial reading teacher, Mrs. Rebecca Solenger. The newly-trained teachers are now giving individual tutoring.

The children who attend the study halls may secure help in any subject from the volunteer study hall supervisors. More supervisors are needed, according to the church's vicar, the Rev. Donald F. Gowe. The church's phone number is EN 9-1140. ■

A Parish Finds that a Stewardship Campaign Changes People, As Well As the Bank Balance

By the Rev. Lloyd H. Uyeki
Vicar, St. Gregory's, Woodstock

A stewardship campaign meant only one thing to us -- money, our money. What's more, we weren't in a position to give one cent more.

That was the downright belligerent attitude that faced Diocesan Director of Stewardship Eric E. Ley when he first visited our parish last summer to talk about a stewardship campaign.

But let me give you a little background of St. Gregory's before I go on with my story.

St. Gregory's started with a priest of our Diocese bringing the Sacrament to an invalid living in Woodstock. Soon other Episcopalians living there asked to be ministered to on these visits; and the priest secured permission from the Bishop to hold services in various homes. As the congregation grew, services were moved to the Odd Fellows hall, and then to a donated corn crib, which was converted into a tiny chapel.

We were accepted as an organized mission of the Diocese in 1954, and two years later the Department of Missions completed the present church building. Part of the construction money was raised by the mission, but a far larger portion came from the Diocese in the form of a gift and a loan.

Things went well for us in our fine new church. Membership grew, parish organizations sprang up, and by last spring a parish house had become a "must." Back to the Diocese we went for another loan.

That's when the question came up, the question of how we were going to repay a new loan, as well as the one on the church building. We would obviously have to raise our level of giving. We didn't think much of the idea, but there seemed to be no other way.

I was all prepared for Mr. Ley when he first met with our Advisory Board in June. I was going to tell him that this was a most unusual mission and that the usual methods wouldn't work at all here. I'm glad

Before major parts of the service, there was a brief explanation of their meaning and place:

Man speaks to God (Confession, Venite, Psalms); God speaks to man (Absolution, Lessons, and Creed); Man speaks to God (Collects and Prayers).

The service was conducted by the Rev. G. Duncan Buchanan, assistant minister, with the rector, the Rev. Robert Cromey, giving the instructions.

Fr. Cromey held the Instructed Morning Prayer service because, "It has been our feeling that people do not know much about the Office, and therefore do not participate very deeply."

According to the Bible, after the crucifixion Christ descended into hell, and rose three days later. Why if he was "sinless" did he descend into hell, or is this a mistranslation? If it is not a mistranslation, what were the reasons and has this anything to do with purgatory?

The Prayer Book, on Pages 15 and 29, makes it clear that the phrase, "He descended into hell" can just as well be translated, "He went into the place of departed spirits." The phrase in the First Epistle of Peter which describes Christ's going and preaching "unto the spirits in prison" is a reference to Christ's making the Gospel available to all who have ever lived, rather than any inference that all of these spirits were wicked.

One of the most charming pictures among the ancient icons is that which shows Christ in hell giving Adam back his halo. The ancient Church was not concerned with the idea of purgatory as a condition existing more or less half-way between the state of the wicked, which is the medieval definition of hell, and the state of the just, which is the medieval idea of heaven. Rather, the Church considered what we commonly think of as heaven and hell as being essays into the life of souls of the departed. That for almost all of these souls there was either a small or a large amount of dross to be purged out was a matter which no one bothered to argue.

The author of Hebrews believed that the ultimate heaven

Woman's Council Gives Report At First Anniversary Luncheon

The Woman's Council of the Episcopal City Mission Society held a First Anniversary Luncheon October 24 at Manhattan's Top of the Six's Restaurant. Bishop Donegan was the principal speaker, with 160 of the 300 Woman's Council members present.

The Woman's Council was organized in November, 1959, to assist in the 37 public hospitals, prisons, reformatories and homes for the aged in which the official Protestant chaplain is sponsored by the City Mission Society. Thirty-two staff and associate chaplains of the Society minister each year to over 28,000 Protestants in these institutions.

Bishop Donegan, who is president of the City Mission Society, declared that:

"This Council is your response to our Lord's command to visit the sick and those who are in prison. Your kindness evidences to people in hospitals and prisons that our God is a loving God who cares and has concern for all his children.

"Do remember as you go about the work of this Council that you are not visiting as nice Episcopal ladies; you are going as good Christians — that is what your religion makes you do. Remember that in every call you make, and with every person you see, you are representatives of our Lord and of our Church."

Reports of the seven convocation chairmen summarized accomplishments of the Woman's Council during the past year.

Church Army Offers Men and Women Opportunities in Evangelism, Service

If the leaders of the Church Army in the U. S. A. thought that bigness was vital to success, they would have disbanded their organization long ago. The entire Church Army in the U. S. A. consists of 60 men and women.

Despite its small size, possibly because of it, the Church Army carries on a militant program. Church Army workers, all of them laymen, carry on their ministry in remote missions, urban parishes, prisons, hospitals and other institutions, plus many other areas. A Church Army worker may be found preaching at a remote mountain-top church in Tennessee, helping with establishment of a mission on the plains of Kansas, visiting families in a trailer camp near a California aircraft factory, or working with underprivileged children in a crowded, noisy tenement section.

Church Army is a lay evangelistic society founded in England in the 1880's. Its founder was the Rev. Wilson Carlile, a man whose motto was "Go for the worst." Over the world, the Army has 1,500 members. The Church Army in the U. S. A., with headquarters in New York City, is headed by Captain Robert Jones, the National Director.

Church Army accepts single women and married or single men. Candidates should be between the ages of 25 and 50, though exceptions may be made. A high school education is desirable, a college education valuable. At least two years of secular work is required for entrance into Church Army.

Church Army workers provide leadership in parish schools and young people's programs.

Candidates are given a two-year training period, which includes academic and field work. Graduates are commissioned, by authority of the Presiding Bishop, as Captains or Mission Sisters for full-time work.

Men and women are also trained for part-time work, and may be commissioned as Lieutenants by their own Diocesan Bishop for work under his direction, while supporting themselves by secular work.

Making house calls, such as this one, is an important ministry of the Church Army.

In the Diocese of New York, Church Army workers have been active this year in two chapels of Trinity Parish, Manhattan: St. Augustine's and St. Christopher's.

Further information on the Army may be secured from: Candidates and Associates Secretary, Church Army in the U. S. A., 662 Sixth Ave., New York 10, New York. ■

Episcopal Churchwomen

Chairman Explains Education Program

By Mrs. Frank R. Stitch
Education Chairman

In this period when all churchmen are looking afresh at the old familiar concepts, the term "mission" becomes vivid as the real business of the church. The Episcopal Churchwomen exist to help accomplish this mission, but since we are able to advance the truth only insofar as we understand it, we all need education.

A made-to-order means for such education is the program of our parish groups. And since we hope to be a unifying influence, there is great merit in uniting our study.

Our Diocesan Board receives certain guide lines from National Council and Diocesan Departments which we attempt to adapt to the interests of our seven Convocations and our some 200 women's groups. These suggestions are passed on for the free selection of the women as these ideas have relevancy and merit for each parish situation.

For some time past, each Triennial Meeting (the Churchwomen meeting held at the same time as the General Convention of the Episcopal Church) has chosen a general theme around which its proceedings are centered. Our Diocesan Board elected to use this as a three-year directive.

This is the source of our current theme, "One Family in Christ." The broadness of this phrase has prompted us to focus on one particular segment of Christ's family each year and, hence, we find ourselves in the final year of this triennium working with the emphasis "Aging - A Challenge!"

This emphasis was decided upon by the full Board at its annual planning conference held in January at the Bishop Donegan Conference Center at Tuxedo Park. At this conference we were fortunate in having the advice and guidance of the Rev. Herbert C. Lazenby, of the Division of Health and Welfare of the National Council. It is interesting to note that the grant which covers the salary of Dr. Lazenby was made possible by our United Thank Offering. Several of our Convocations have been having help from Dr. Lazenby as they relate this emphasis to the programs of their parishes.

In addition to our Theme and Emphasis, we also present the annual choices for study of the United Churchwomen. Our National Church sends representatives to the meetings where these topics are chosen, and in turn, Episcopal materials are prepared and added to the excellent study books and discussion guides available. These are written each year to apply to two themes: one traditionally "foreign" and one "home."

This year the "foreign" theme is "Into All the World Together," pointing up the confusion caused by denominationalism and leading directly, of course, to the ecumenical movement.

In an effort to supply our parish education chairmen with current information on this subject, a seminar was held on October 24 last. The Dean of the Cathedral, the Very Rev. John V. Butler, was most helpful in offering us the facilities of Cathedral House and in securing two outstanding speakers: Miss Leila Anderson, Assistant General Secretary for program; and the Rev. William Norgren, Director of Faith and Order, both of the staff of the National Council of Churches and both, appropriately, Episcopalians.

Dean Butler summed up the thinking of this meeting by saying that the coming unified Church will certainly not be like anything we now know.

We can help bring about its wholeness, he added, by becoming the very best Episcopalians it is possible to be. And it is to make us better Episcopalians that our whole effort of education is directed.

The home theme of the United Churchwomen this year is "Heritage and Horizons in Home Missions." This has a general connotation which allows us to linger with last year's suggestion, "The Church in Town and Country." ■

The Silence of Christmas

By Mrs. Douglas Glasspool
Devotional Life Chairman

When our Lord, in His early ministry, gathered little children unto Him and said to His Disciples and all the crowds which followed Him, "Verily I say unto you, whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein," He uttered a truth which is all too easily forgotten in our sophisticated, adult world, a truth to keep in mind as we consider the deepest significance of becoming "One Family in Christ."

For the qualities suggested by our Lord as prerequisites for being able to receive His kingdom are indeed "child-like": a simple, trusting nature; the ability to lose oneself in wonder and awe; a clear-eyed, single vision; and, above all, a wholehearted lovingness, free and uninhibited in its expression.

Christmas and the wonderful holy days of Advent which prepare us for it provide an ideal time for all of us to discover anew at least a little of the childlike nature we once possessed, which may indeed make our hearts more worthy dwelling places for the Christ when He seeks to be born in us this Christmas.

All the beauty of holiness which fills our churches at this blessed season — the silent glow of candles, the brightness of holly wreaths — is mirrored in the eyes of children. And it is the silence of Christmas, not its noise, however merry, which weaves the most lasting spell. It is the stillness and silence of that night so long ago which touches the hearts of every member of the family with mysterious longing.

In that moment before the angelic hosts shouted forth the tidings of the heavenly birth, there was silence on the hills of Jerusalem as simple shepherds watched and waited, while in the stable of the inn, away from all the noise, a simple Jewish girl

Bronxville Parish House Dedicated by the Bishop

A new parish house at Christ Church, Bronxville, was dedicated by Bishop Donegan October 30.

Though it appears to be a completely new structure, the parish house was created by remodeling two apartment houses next to the church and by building a connecting link containing an auditorium, a lounge, and an altar guild sacristy.

The auditorium seats 500 for a meeting and 400 for a meal. It was erected on a street that formerly separated the church and the apartment houses. Because the street sloped sharply, the auditorium's roof is at nearly ground level and is used as a courtyard.

Also in the parish house are: church school rooms, parish offices, kitchen, audio-visual room, and two apartments for the assistant ministers.

The cost of the project, including the purchase of the land and the apartment houses, new construction and furnishings, is approximately $700,000. Furnishing is still incomplete, with many special gifts being made.

The new parish house replaces a structure that was demolished this year. Plans are being made to landscape the area where it stood. The old building was the original church and was converted to a parish house in 1926.

Christ Church was established in 1900. The present rector is the Rev. George W. Barrett. ■

St. Gregory's—

I never said that, because I would have had to eat my words. The fact of the matter was that I didn't want to disrupt our complacency. Everything was going so well and so smoothly.

Mr. Ley did indeed talk to us of giving -- sacrificial giving. But he wasn't talking about giving our money but of giving our souls! What we heard and talked about is something that we will never forget. We were being asked, and were asking ourselves, what it means to each of us to be a Christian. We were to encounter God and the meaning of Christ in our lives as we had never done before. We were to look into the very depths of our being and to search our souls. We were to make an inventory and to then stand up and be counted. Each of us stood with empty hands. We had been so busy receiving that we hadn't given much thought to giving. God in Christ meant a lot more than dollars and cents at this piont. Surplus money can no longer be considered adequate or even a token, when we stand face to face with Him who has given his life for us.

At the Loyalty Dinner someone remarked to me that everyone was dressed as though they were going to a birthday party. I think I commented that they were really going to their own funeral. In a deeper sense, both comments were true. If we were to lay down our lives and our old selves, we were being given the chance to be born again. Life, death, and resurrection were real possibilities for all of us. It could indeed be a birthday party.

The Loyalty Dinner had all the possibilities of a full and joyous life or rebirth for those of us who listened to our own men get up before us and say what it meant for them to be with Christ, and to speak as we had never heard them speak before. I know that there was a rebirth, because I can see it in the faces of my people.

The parish house is no longer the end-all of existence for us -- though it seems likely that it will be built. We have received much more than a building in our stewardship campaign together. The Diocese is no longer the Diocese way out there, but our Diocese, working through God's plan in our Church, here in the Catskills, yes, but also in the whole inhabited earth.

And our church didn't start in the corn crib, or even in that marvelous upper-room experience in the homes of the people of Woodstock, but in that first upper-room experience 2,000 years ago. We are a mission of the Diocese, but we now understand our mission as that of witness to everyone we meet.

I know that I speak for all my people when I say that our lives have been enriched by this tremendous experience together. We have become better Christians as a result of it. For some of us, we have become Christians for the first time. It was a wonderful experience for me. I have learned to be a priest of God to my people. ■

Hastings Adds To Parish House

An addition to the parish house at Grace Church, Hastings-on-Hudson, was dedicated November 20 by the rector, the Rev. Arthur R. Willis.

The new structure is of concrete and cinder blocks, with a stone facing on the end towards the street. The interior consists of one room, 40 by 45 feet, which can be separated into six classrooms by means of sliding and folding doors. There is also an entrance hall with cloakroom, and a small office-vestry room. A cross above the side of the building facing the street will be floodlighted each night.

New Chapel—

"My predecessor was noted for his gentleness, but I would have you understand that this was the gentleness of the beatitude. He was big, enough, sure enough, strong enough, and secure enough, to be generous.

"No combination of saints would possibly express his own fundamental ambitions more thoroughly than St. Michael and St. George. St. Michael, the power of God, and St. George, that power's agent.

"In a larger realm and in a happier clime, my beloved predecessor will know what we do and why we do it. This is more than this world and its wisdom can assure any of its children.

"I cannot close without mentioning the very summation of all that he is and all that he has meant to us. As expressed in his own words, describing the position to which I, by God's providence have succeeded, 'In God's scheme of things no man is indispensable, but every loyal servant of His must regard himself as expendable.' Certainly that is true of a Bishop in the Church of God. He gives himself to the people under his care. He is the always available pastor of his clergy, ready to hearten and strenghthen them in their work. And his must be the vision and inspiration, and his the wise direction that will make the Master's Church the instrument through which he may get his will done among men!" ■ of heavens was not really available to any one until the whole body of the Church could move into it, which could only happen at a period beyond our time, that is to say, when death itself is destroyed and God again is all-in-all.

The Church is extremely hesitant about being definite in matters on which the New Testament touches but lightly. If one wishes to know what the Church really thinks about the dead, the best thing to do is find out how it prays. From the Prayer for the Church we have this phrase:

"And we also bless thy holy Name for all thy servants departed this life in thy faith and fear; beseeching thee to grant them continual growth in thy love and service, and to give us grace so to follow their good examples, that with them we may be partakers of thy heavenly kingdom . . ."

In the collects from the Propers for the Burial of the Dead, the following phrases are found:

"O eternal Lord God, who holdest all souls in life; Vouchsafe, we beseech thee, to thy whole Church, in paradise and on earth, thy light and thy peace; grant that we, following the good examples of those who have served thee here and are now at rest, may at the last enter with them into thine unending joy; . . . "

"O God, whose mercies cannot be numbered; Accept our prayers on behalf of the soul of thy servant departed, and grant him an entrance into the land of light and joy, in the fellowship of thy saints; . . . "

On page 332 is the following prayer:

"Remember thy servant, O Lord, according to thy favour which thou bearest unto thy people, and grant that, increasing in knowledge and love of thee, he may go from strength to strength, in the life of perfect service in thy heavenly kingdom: . . ."

On page 598 we find the following under For an Anniversary of One Departed:

"Almighty God, we remember this day before thee thy faithful servant, and we pray thee that, having opened to him the gates of larger life, thou wilt receive him more and more into thy joyful service; that he may win, with thee and thy servants everywhere, the eternal victory; . . . " ■

If we would keep this Christmas with ears attuned to the heavenly anthems, eyes wide open to all the wonder, and hearts on fire with all the love involved in the Incarnation, we must make room in our busy days for silence, give ourselves a chance to become as little children. For only in the stillness can we begin to catch something of the deep mystery of this mighty act of God. ■

HOW MUCH SHOULD I GIVE ?

BEFORE YOU MAKE YOUR CHURCH PLEDGE, ASK YOURSELF:

- Is my gift to God proportionate to his gifts to me?
- Is my gift meaningful to me, or just a token offering?
- How much do I keep for myself, as compared to my pledge?
- Would I be willing to personally present my offering to God?

A Whimsical Study of Bird Lore in the Parish Flock

When a clergyman speaks of his "flock," he's not referring to birds. Or is he?

He might have read the article in an English church paper that examines the various kinds of "birds" in a parish flock. The article, which is humor with a barb, was first published by St. Mark's, London. We reprint this guide for ecclesiastical birdwatchers, together with some sketches we had drawn by artist Les Kinning.

ECCLESIASTICUS CRITICUS

This is a rather common species of bird that inhabits most parishes. It is a close cousin of the Ruffled Grouse, because it is easily ruffled and makes grousing noises when disturbed. It rarely joins in the activity of the flock, but hops around on the edges and utters critical cries that sound something like: "Why-did-they-do-that?" or "they-should-do-something-about-it." Sometimes it leaves the flock altogether, but sooner or later it turns up again to utter its odd cries. Often it builds a well-feathered nest, and the other birds tend to respect it.

BACKWARD LOOKING DODO

Though this bird is an odd creature, it is not a rare species. It is prevalent in parishes over 25 years old. Its head is turned backward most of the time — it wants to see where it has been. It is disturbed by changes. When other birds start to build nests, it gives great cries of alarm that sound like: "Things-are-not-what-they-used-to-be." It lays no eggs, because this would change its life and cause it to look to the future. Some normal birds become Dodos when they reach a certain age. When there are too many of them, they can stop the normal growth of a whole flock.

PEGASUS FIDELIUS

This animal is not exactly a bird but a relative of the horse family. It is distinguished by its rounded and worn back, deformed by its willingness to carry heavy burdens over the years. The female of the species predominates in most parishes. It hardly ever utters a cry, but is always found where the greatest amount of work needs to be done, carrying more than its share of the burden. Great care must be taken of this useful creature, as it breaks its back by its willingness. Cases have been known where one slight straw has broken the back of the willing Fidelius.

THE COVER — View of the grounds of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Photo made last winter by J. B. Martin after an ice storm.

GREGARIOUS CONFERENCIUS

This bird is attractive upon first sight. It likes to travel. It flits from flock to flock and its favorite haunt is the large bird conferences held throughout the country. It will often neglect its own nest and young to attend committee meetings, where it may chirp loudly about what it thinks, or thinks others should do. It becomes very enthusiastic about group action, but never does anything because it is too busy going to another gathering.

LOYALUS LABORUS

This bird provides basic structure in an otherwise flighty flock. Having no distinguishing call or feather markings, it is often mistaken for the common sparrow because of its humility and modesty. While the rest of the flock flits here and there and leaves for warmer climates, the Loyalus stays put and pecks away at whatever needs to be done. If attention is called to what it is doing, it makes chirping noises, quickly distracts attention and disappears into the anonymity of the flock. Some ornithologists claim that under the right atmospheric conditions and in the right light, this bird has a golden aura around its head. ■

The Bishop's Message

It is my great pleasure to announce the formation of EPISCOPAL LAYMEN OF NEW YORK as a Diocesan layman's program, which supersedes the former Bishop's Men program. This venture in our Diocesan life is begun with prayer that it may further strengthen the Church's work among laymen in our congregations.

There are already thousands of laymen active in the official and program life of the Church in this Diocese. There are more than four hundred lay delegates to Diocesan Convention, and more than three hundred men are licensed lay readers. There are more than two thousand men serving as churchwardens, vestrymen and members of Advisory Committees in our missions. More than a thousand men sing in our choirs, many hundreds serve as acolytes, and hundreds more as Sunday School teachers and group leaders.

Over and above these individuals, there are many layman's groups, some under the name of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and many others which conduct entirely independent programs. Two of our convocations . . . Bronx and Hudson . . . have men's programs.

There is, therefore, no intention to start a layman's work in the Diocese, or begin something new . . . laymen already have an important place in the life of the Diocese and its congregations.

EPISCOPAL LAYMEN OF NEW YORK intends to acknowledge the large work the men of the Church already undertake, to provide a means whereby more men may be encouraged to participate, and to explore further ways in which the men can serve the Church.

We are all thrilled by the consistent way in which the leaders of women's work in the Diocese have been able to rally their forces and develop new approaches through which the women might exercise the rich and fruitful ministry they carry out with such distinction.

Through EPISCOPAL LAYMEN OF NEW YORK I now hope to similarly recognize the contribution thousands of men are making. By the guidance of specially selected laymen, I trust the congregations may be led to present still greater challenges to the men, and encourage them to greater concern for that ministry which is the responsibility of us all.

I have asked Bishop Wetmore for the time being to provide executive leadership for this venture, but it is my desire that as soon as possible responsible laymen will take complete charge of the program.

Faithfully and affectionately, Your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

A striking new church that combines beauty and economy was formally opened by Bishop Donegan at a special afternoon service on Sunday, December 11. The new structure is for All Saints, Valley Cottage, a mission of the Diocese.

Construction money for the frame building, $83,000, was loaned to All Saints from the Revolving Fund of the Diocese's 175th Anniversary Fund. Over 30,000 people have given more than $2,000,000 to the Anniversary Fund. The money is being used all over the Diocese for new church and parish house buildings.

All Saints Church was filled at the opening ceremonies, despite a threatened snow storm. The storm, December's 17-inch blizzard, began after the service.

Attending the opening, in addition to All Saints members, were clergymen from other churches, the Diocese's two archdeacons — the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy and the Ven. George F. Bratt — and other Diocesan officials and guests.

The new building consists of the church itself and a wing containing a sacristy, a small meeting room, a kitchenette and a utility room. Seating capacity of the church is about 175. The choir loft is in the rear.

Behind the altar is a large mosaic portraying Christ the King. Of red, blue and gold Venetian glass, it was executed and given to the church by artist Hazel Slaughter. Mrs. Slaughter is a member of The Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan. Besides her work as a professional artist, she is a volunteer art teacher at St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan.

In the steeple of the new church is an electric carillon given by Stephen, Jr. and Virginia Hendricks as a memorial to their father, Stephen Hendricks. The keyboard of the carillon is next to the organ console.

The windows of the church are panels of Belgian cast glass, the colors ranging from gray to blue.

Architects for the 83-foot-long structure were George M. Schofield and John M. Colgan, of Nyack. Contractor was the J. H. Martin Co., of West Nyack.

The new building is on Route 303. It is a few hundred feet from the former church, which will be used as a parish house. The vicarage, which was blessed by Bishop Donegan before the church opening ceremonies, is also a few hundred feet away.

GFS Is the Oldest National Girls Group in the Country

The Girl's Friendly Society, U.S.A., will celebrate its 84th birthday during GFS Week January 22-29.

The American GFS, sponsored by the Episcopal Church, is the oldest national girl's organization in the United States. The GFS is also active in 30 other countries, including England, where the Society was founded in 1875.

In this country and elsewhere, the organization originally operated lodges for working girls, sponsored protective legislation for women workers, and held discussion groups on college campuses.

Today's American GFS is open to girls from 7 to 21 and is active in 70 Episcopal dioceses, including New York. There are 15,000 members, of which 550 are in the Diocese of New York.

The GFS offers programs of study, worship, play and service, including a "G-3" program for older girls who make a three-year commitment to daily personal devotion and services to the Church through GFS.

Other areas of GFS activity are: the Summer Opportunities Program, in which teen-age girls serve in Church projects here and abroad; scholarship aid; the development and improvement of camping techniques; and a new project in creative arts.

Since the GFS national office at 345 East 46th St. is across the street from the United Nations, UN tours and seminars are an important part of its program. The GFS has had an official representative at the UN since 1952.

National president of the Girls' Friendly Society, U. S. A., is Mrs. Stephen G. Nichols, of Winchester, Mass. The executive secretary is Mrs. Stephen K. Mahon, of New York City. Mrs. Arthur Lichtenberger, wife of the Presiding Bishop, is honorary president.

In the Diocese of New York, the president is Miss Jean Pflomm.

The GFS has an office in Diocesan House, on the Cathedral grounds. Administered by Mrs. George Diering, it is open Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. ■

This is an excellent book to give to those persons who are looking at the Church with an "inquiring mind and eye." Dr. Simcox has written it in response to many requests and the book is based upon his teaching in the field of religion within the Episcopal Church.

"AN APPROACH TO THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH" is a book I am satisfied to give to anyone . . . within the Episcopal Church or interested in the flavor of life inside it. Because it begins at the point of 'no faith at all' and proceeds up the ladder to the final question 'Is this particular Church for me?' most readers will be able to find their own footprints at some point in this progression and begin moving. But at all points along the ladder the material is cogent and concise and it is my feeling that the several copies I intend to purchase will circulate themselves."

St. James Is Given New Bells, Amplifier For Present Carillon

A new set of five bells and an extension to the carillon were dedicated at St. James, Manhattan, December 18 by the rector, the Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving.

The cast bronze, true Dutch swinging bells range in weight from 1,540 pounds to 190 pounds. In tone, they are G, E, D, E and G. They are activated by buttons at the organ console and swung by electric motors. Though the bells can be rung singly or in clusters, they cannot play tunes or changes.

Gift of Mrs. Milbank

The new bells and the improvements to the carillon are the gift of Mrs. Katharine Fowler Milbank and are a memorial to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Powell Fowler.

The carillon could previously be heard only inside the church. Now, with the installation of special speakers in the tower, the 25-note carillon can also be heard outside. The carillon can be activated either by keys at the organ console or by an elaborate automatic device using perforated rolls pre-set for hymn tunes to be played at designated times.

Included in Mrs. Milbank's gift were the replacing of the leaded tower windows with gilded bronze grills, strengthening of the tower, and the installation of floodlights aimed at the bells.

Daily at Noon and Five

The bells are played daily at noon, the carillon daily at five. Both are also played before and after the principal Sunday services.

Mrs. Milbank is the widow of Dunlevy Milbank, financier and philanthropist, and the sister of Ludlow Fowler, Chancellor of the Diocese of New York.

The gift to St. James is one of many benefactions by the Milbanks. In 1957 the Children's Aid Society was presented a million dollars to construct the Dunlevy Milbank Children's Center on 118th St. in Harlem. It includes a gymnasium, playground and indoor swimming pool. This past summer the Dunlevy Milbank Foundation joined with the Jeremiah Milbank Foundation to assure funds for erection of a hospital for the Institute for the Crippled and Disabled ■

'St. John' Interrupts Sermon

The children of St. Matthew's, Bedford, will long remember the day "John the Baptist" came to their church. The memorable day was November 27, the first Sunday in Advent.

To dramatize John the Baptist's role as the preacher of Christ's coming, one of the parishioners dressed as the saint. As the rector, the Rev. John C. Harper, was telling the congregation at the family service about the kind of person John the Baptist was, a voice was heard in the rear of the church mumbling words from Isaiah.

"Who art thou?" the rector asked.

"I am not the Christ," replied an old man with a long staff as he came down the aisle.

"Art thou Elijah?"

"I am not he," the man replied, approaching the chancel.

The congregation sat stunned as "John the Baptist" came to the front of the chancel. Then, facing the congregation, he spoke dramatically the familiar words: "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness ..."

Taking the part of John the Baptist was Brigadier General Hampton Anderson (retired). ■

St. Augustine's — An Episcopal Chapel for the Men in Sing Sing

Church

When a man enters Sing Sing, he wears a special uniform for three weeks and associates only with other new prisoners. During this period he takes part in an indoctrination program — a program to acquaint him with what will be his new home for anywhere from one year to the rest of his life.

Each new prisoner, if he so desires, has an individual consultation with either the Protestant, Roman Catholic or Jewish chaplain. If the man professes to be an Episcopalian, the Protestant chaplain tells him that his Church has a chapel in the prison.

Thus it is that a prisoner learns of his new spiritual home, learns of a chapel that brings into sharp focus the Biblical words: "I was in prison, and ye came unto me."

The Episcopal Church is the only denomination of the Christian faith that has its own chapel at Sing Sing. Known as St. Augustine's Chapel, it has seating for 21. The chapel was established about 26 years ago, after an inmate wrote to a member of the Order of the Holy Cross and asked that Holy Communion be brought to him.

Since its establishment, the chapel has been ministered to by a member of the Order of the Holy Cross, which has a monastery in West Park, about 60 miles from the prison. Priests of Trinity Church, Ossining, have also held services and counseled prisoners, as St. Augustine's is a chapel of Trinity.

The Holy Cross priest who now serves the chapel is the Rev. William E. Harris, who travels by train to the prison every Saturday. Father Harris arrives at the prison at 12:15 and for the next three hours hears confessions, counsels, and visits all patients in the prison hospital. After spending the night at Trinity, he returns to the prison Sunday morning for an 8:00 o'clock celebration of Holy Communion.

Behind Bars

As in other churches there are Confirmation services at St. Augustine's. Bishop Boynton confirmed seven men in 1959.

Not all Episcopal prisoners at Sing Sing worship at St. Augustine's. Some prefer to attend services in the Protestant chapel, which is on the floor above St. Augustine's. The Protestant chapel is served by the Rev. Luther C. Hannum, the full-time Civil Service chaplain for all Protestant inmates.

Chaplain Hannum, a Methodist minister, has been a chaplain at Sing Sing for 21 years. During this time he has come to know intimately every type of prisoner, from the normally law abiding citizen who impetuously commits one illegal act, to the man who has been in and out of prisons most of his life. He has counseled and walked to the electric chair with 56 men, found jobs for over 450 former prisoners.

We talked to Chaplain Hannum in his home, which is about 100 feet outside the prison walls (in photo, next to road at upper right). We had just completed a tour of the prison.

"What about the really hardened criminals," we asked, "do many of them turn to religion while in prison?"

"No, I'm afraid not," he replied, "the prisoners we make the most progress with are the first offenders, especially those who were active in a church.

"When a really tough criminal decides to begin a new life, it is usually because of his membership in the prison chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous. Most habitual offenders are alcoholics; and AA offers them help with the most serious problem they face when they enter prison. The spiritual basis of the AA program sometimes makes a deep impression on a prisoner and causes him to examine not only his drinking problem but his whole life and relationship with society."

The Sing Sing chapter of Alcoholics Anonymous, of which the chaplains are the directors, has been established for ten years. Chaplain Hannum considers the chapter's program to be the most effective means of beginning the conversion of the chronic offender.

A great deal of Chaplain Hannum's time is spent in the death house. Each Sunday he holds services just outside the cells of the inmates. And he counsels with each of the men at least twice a week, preparing the prisoner for the moment uppermost in his mind. Of the 56 men Chaplain Hannum has walked to the electric chair, only one did not face death calmly.

"By the time a man is executed, we have had a series of talks in the death house for as long as two years. He is ready mentally and spiritually."

The veteran chaplain knows of a number of men who first became interested in religion while in prison and continued this interest after their release. One was a robber who entered Sing Sing at age 23 and was released at 34. Now head mechanic of a large New York City garage, he serves as part-time director of religious education at a summer camp for boys. His goal is to become a clergyman, and for the past five years he has been studying part-time. The course takes seven years.

Chaplain Hannum spoke of the difficulty former prisoners have in getting jobs.

"A job interview usually comes to a sudden end as soon as the man

*Miss Alice Palmer, left, meets an English couple at one of New York's piers. # Churchwomen Pledge $39,550 at Convention

The Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese approved two pledges totaling $39,550 at their Advent Meeting December 6. Both pledges are for 1961 and are the same as for 1960.

The General Church Program was pledged $35,000.

Christian Social Relations (of Episcopal Churchwomen) was pledged $4,550 to continue ECW's aid to the port and immigration work of the N. Y. Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. The money will be allocated as follows:

To Miss Alice Palmer, $1,200, at the rate of $100 a month.

To the Mission Society, $3,350, to be applied to Miss Dorothy M. Bigelow's salary.

Miss Palmer retired January 1, after 32 years as director of the Mission Society's Port and Immigration Department. She was succeeded by Miss Bigelow.

The women of the Diocese helped support Miss Palmer's work during all the years she headed Port and Immigration. The $100 monthly from Episcopal Churchwomen will be in addition to Social Security payments and a pension from the Mission Society.

Commenting on Miss Palmer's retirement, Episcopal Churchwomen President Mrs. Gurney Williams said:

"After 32 years, it is a bit difficult to divorce the person from the job. To most of us, Miss Palmer is Port and Immigration. But to her the important thing is the job, because she knows how vital it is.

"There is a Roman Catholic immigration worker, but the Episcopal City Mission Society — with our help — provides the only worker for our Church and all Protestant Churches. It would be tragic if this service were suddenly discontinued.

"We are most fortunate that another dedicated woman has been found to carry on this work. Miss Bigelow, a communicant of St. James Church, Manhattan, has an impressive record of teaching and social work. She is an excellent speaker and will be available later for visits to parish groups." ■

Annual Retreat To Begin Feb. 1

The Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop, will conduct the annual retreat sponsored by the Diocese's Episcopal Churchwomen. The retreat will be held at the House of the Redeemer, 7 East 95th St., Manhattan. It will open with vespers at 5:30 on Wednesday, February 1, and close with breakfast on Friday.

Because of the number of rooms available, reservations are limited to 20. For the past two years, there have been more applications than could be accepted.

Cost of the retreat will be an offering made according to the ability of the individual retreatant.

Reservations should be made through Mrs. Douglas M. Glasspool, Box 358, Goshen, N. Y.

The practice of "retreat," or the "withdrawal and return" pattern, is as old as Christianity itself. Jesus and Paul spent periods in the desert. Our Lord's command to his disciples to "Come ye apart" was issued at a time when they were under great pressure, and Jesus knew well their need for silence and a deepening of the spirit. ■

. . . in brief

■ TO ALLEVIATE its clergy shortage, the Anglican Church in Malaya plans to use worker priests, men ordained to the priesthood but continuing their normal secular work.

■ NEW PRESIDENT OF the American Church Union is the Rt. Rev. William Francis Lickfield, Bishop of Quincy (Illinois).

■ THE ORGANIST at St. Peter's, Rome, was guest artist at a recent Sunday afternoon service of music at St. George's, Manhattan. The organist, Fernando Germani, had just completed a two-month concert tour of the United States.

■ A MANUAL for the guidance of florists in Tulsa, Okla., is being prepared in cooperation with the Tulsa Council of Churches. The decision to publish the manual grew out of a forum for clergymen and members of florists associations. The florists want rules to follow, especially for weddings and funerals.

■ ORPHANS OF THE ORIENT may face a brighter future as the result of a study just launched by Church World Service, overseas relief agency of the National Council of Churches in the U. S. A.

A survey team composed of three nationally recognized authorities in the field of social welfare will leave this month for Korea and Hong Kong. Purpose of the on-the-scene study is to find ways of implementing the adoption of Oriental orphans by American families. Many American families who have made requests are still waiting.

Orphans have been a major and tragic problem in Korea since the end of the Korean War, which shattered the country's economy, inducing desperate poverty. Any child under 14 who has been placed for adoption by one or both parents is classed legally as an orphan. Many of the children are offspring of Korean mothers and soldiers of other countries. Because of their mixed blood, they are unacceptable in Korean society.

In Hong Kong, the children have been relinquished by impoverished refugees from the Communist Chinese mainland.

■ AN ART EXHIBITION, open to the public, is being held in the lounge of St. Paul's Chapel at Columbia University. On display are works of the candidates for the Master of Fine Arts degree. The current exhibit, which closes in March, is the fifth of a series by students and alumni of Columbia.

■ IF YOU PASSED Holy Trinity, East 88th St., after the afternoon service on Christmas Eve, you probably saw scores of youngsters carrying quarter-pound packages of Christmas pudding. And if you had passed the Manhattan church a few days earlier, you would have seen the same children bringing in sandwich bags containing the pudding ingredients.

The pudding, 60 pounds of it, was prepared by the rector, the Rev. Cuthbert Pratt. Dr. Pratt got the idea for the cooperative Christmas pudding after hearing from Bishop Page of Michigan ( now deceased ) about a woman who sent him a Christmas pudding for many years. At Holy Trinity, and at other churches where Dr. Pratt has been rector, the pudding is used as a symbol of unity, fellowship and love. ■

Epiphany Survey Indicates How To Draw Newcomers

A survey conducted at The Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan, gives an indication of how new people hear about a church. Epiphany is at York Avenue and 74th St.

The survey covered 52 persons who signed Newcomer Cards and were called upon. The cards were signed at services on seven consecutive Sundays (Sept. 25-Nov. 6).

23 came through friends.
8 noticed the building.
8 searched the classified phone book.
8 were attracted by the church's "welcome slips."
5 checked newspaper ads.
2 read of the church in a hospital brochure.
1 came because of a card on a hospital bulletin board.

This totals 55, because three people heard of the church from two sources.

Of the 52 persons, only 29 (55%) were Episcopalians.

The "welcome slips" which attracted eight persons are left at new or recently renovated houses or apartment buildings. The slips are folded into calling card size and inserted in the calling card slot provided in many mail boxes. The new resident is welcomed to the neighborhood, told of the hours of services, and given an offer of assistance or information. The names and phone numbers of the parish staff are also included.

The Rev. Hugh D. McCandless, Rector of Epiphany, first distributed the slips by mail. The Rev. James W. Kennedy, Rector of Ascension, Manhattan, borrowed the welcome idea and introduced the plan of folding the slips into calling card size. ■

the Cathedal Church

Did you (or any other religious leader) ever doubt the existence of God?

Few men ever doubt the existence of God; what they tend to doubt, until they learn better, is that God is always loving and always good. (The ordinary thoughtful atheist or agnostic is rarely a man who does not believe in some sort of objective power which is in control of everything in a general way; rather, he is one who, for some reason or other, cannot accept what he assumes to be the Christian definition of God.)

To answer the question, as honestly as I know how, I can only say that I have never doubted God's existence, but it took an aged woman dying of cancer to explain to me how loving God was to her. She had learned that Jesus did better than stop her pain — he shared it! I then started to understand that my God is not un-loving, when he manages still to ask so much less of us than he asked of his own beloved Son.

New Committee To Study Mission Episcopal Church

The National Council of the Episcopal Church has established an advisory committee on evaluation and strategy of the mission of the church. The action was taken at the Council's quarterly meeting in Los Angeles December 1-3.

The new committee will be composed of "members of the National Council and others." Provision for a staff and financial support was made by the Council. The Presiding Bishop, as President of the National Council, was requested to appoint the advisory committee and its staff, which will report to him.

Though the new committee will concern itself with the entire mission of the church — in this country and abroad — it was established as a result of a report from the Committee of Conference on Overseas Missions. ■

Clarence G. Michalis has been given a 1960 Distinguished Service Award by the Protestant Council of the City of New York.

The award recipient is treasurer and a trustee of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and senior warden of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan. He is also a trustee of The Seamen's Bank for Savings.

The award to Mr. Michalis was one of the three made at a Protestant Council testimonial dinner November 22. It was "in grateful recognition of his devoted and sacrificial leadership in the moral, spiritual and social welfare of our city and nation."

The award dinner, $50 a plate, marked the opening of a Protestant Council campaign to raise $100,000 for youth work in areas of high delinquency. ■

Wedding Rings and Gowns Used As Missionary Aids

Wedding rings and gowns are being used as missionary aids in Haiti. Here's how:

A number of the couples in Haiti have been united either by voodoo ritual or by a simple agreement to live together. Some of the children of these couples, drawn by activities at one of the Episcopal Church's missions, become interested in the Church and eventually baptized and confirmed.

This awakens the interest of the parents in becoming members of the Church also. But they can't become members until they are married in a Christian ceremony. And, because they know of Christian wedding customs, they place great importance on using a ring and a wedding gown.

This presents a financial problem, for Haiti is a poor country and few couples can afford a ring and a gown.

About three years ago, the Bishop of the Missionary District of Haiti decided to do something about this situation. He set up a program to provide free wedding rings and the loan of a wedding gown.

Now, when an Episcopal clergyman is convinced of the sincerity of a couple's desire to become active Christians, he provides the ring and gown needed for the marriage ceremony. The gowns are drawn from the Missionary District's wardrobe and then returned after the ceremony. The rings are, of course, not returned.

Some of the rings and gowns used in the unusual missionary effort are contributed by Americans and others. Most of the rings, however, are purchased in New York in quantity lots at a cost of $2.00 each.

Persons who wish to make contributions of either gowns, rings or money may send them to the Rt. Rev. Charles A. Voegeli, Bishop of the Missionary District of Haiti, Box 1309, Port-au-Prince, Haiti. ■ mentions his prison record."

Yet, he pointed out, that of the 456 men for whom he has found jobs, only three have again been returned to prison.

Finding jobs is only one of the ways in which Chaplain Hannum helps the men in a practical way. He often visits the family of a prisoner who is worried about some particular domestic problem. He attends to business and personal matters that the men were unable to settle before their imprisonment. Helping prisoners with their personal problems, he finds, often opens the door to helping them with their spiritual problems. ■

Gardeners St. John's Beautifying Grounds

Four years ago, plantings on the grounds of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine consisted almost entirely of trees and hedges. Today, the park-like area abounds in gardens, shrubbery and other types of evergreens.

Behind this transformation has been an organization known as the Gardeners of St. John's. Headed by Mrs. Albert P. Loening, the Gardeners are a committee of the Cathedral Guild.

All of the work being done is part of a master plan for the grounds. Financed through the Gardeners of St. John's, the beautification project is being carried out by Rosedale Nurseries.

What have been the major improvements made to the Cathedral grounds by the Gardeners of Saint John's?

(1) Shrubbery and ivy planted on the south side and front of the Cathedral.

(2) Along the entire length of the north side, planting of crab apple trees, specimen privet and undercover of flowering shrubs.

(3) Planting of six gardens, four of them in the corners of the area surrounding the outdoor pulpit.

(4) Plantings in the front and sides of Synod House and Diocesan House.

(5) A garden for the Bishop on the north side of his house, and plantings along the front of the house.

Next spring, the Gardeners of St. John's will have these improvements made:

(1) To cover the bank along the lower driveway, planting of cranberry cotoneaster, a spreading low shrub with flowers in the spring and red berries in the fall.

Along the streets on the north and west sides of the grounds, planting of 30 trees, shademaster thornless honey locust.

In a letter to Mrs. Clarence G. Michalis, President of the Cathedral Guild, Bishop Donegan expressed appreciation for the improvements.

"The Gardeners of St. John's, the Guild's agents in this matter, have much to be proud of in terms of their contributions to the total effect the Cathedral has upon the thousands who visit it.

"My own pleasure is great, each morning and evening, when I have a moment to enjoy what you all have done in planting the Bishop's Garden.

"Quite apart from this, I am delighted to observe the effect — I may say even the missionary effect — which the planting in all our grounds has had upon the hearts and minds of those who come to the Cathedral as pilgrims."

Children's Art Contest Opens

Budding young artists have a chance to display their talents in the annual Creative Art Contest sponsored by the Department of Promotion of the Church's National Council.

The contest, which is open to Episcopal children from six years up, is held each year in conjunction with the Church School Missionary Offering and children's mission study. Major purposes of the contest are to promote interest in the offering objectives and to stimulate learning through creative activity.

Contestant's artwork must relate to either of the two fields chosen to receive the offering. The 1961 Offering will be used to help meet capital needs in the Missionary Districts of Mexico, Nevada, and San Joaquin (Calif.) Detailed descriptions of these needs are in the study materials included in the Church School Missionary Offering packet.

The young artists may use any medium which can be reproduced, such as crayon, colored chalk or pencils, tempera or poster paint, water color.

Entries must reach the National Council not later than May 1, 1961.

Winners will be selected from two age groups: 6 to 11 and 12 and over.

Engraved watches will be awarded to six winners in each age group.

Winning entries will be reproduced as covers on National Council parish bulletins. In addition, a number of the best entries may be used in a National Council film strip.

Further information on the Creative Art Contest may be secured from Miss Kitty Haworth, Department of Promotion, The National Council, 281 Park Ave. South, N. Y. 10, N. Y. ■

Almighty God, as I sit here by the fire this lovely Sunday morning, surrounded by the Sunday paper and half listening to one of the preachers over the radio, it has just come to me that I have lied to thee and to myself.

I said that I did not feel well enough to go to church. That was not true. I would have gone to my office had it been Monday morning. I would have played golf had it been Wednesday afternoon in the summer.

But it is Sunday morning, and Sunday illness covers a multitude of sins. God have mercy on me! I have lied to thee and myself. I am lazy and indifferent. Amen.

Dr. Ramsey Is Appointed Archbishop of Canterbury

The Most Rev. Arthur Michael Ramsey has been appointed Archbishop of Canterbury. He will succeed the Most Rev. Geoffrey Francis Fisher, who will retire May 31 at the age of 73.

Dr. Ramsey, one of the outstanding scholars of the Anglican Communion, has been Archbishop of York since 1956.

Ordained to the priesthood 32 years ago, he has been Canon of Durham Cathedral and Bishop of Durham.

A noted lecturer and teacher, Dr. Ramsey has been professor of divinity at the University of Durham, regius professor of Divinity at Cambridge, and select preacher at Cambridge and Oxford.

The 56-year-old church leader visited New York in the fall of 1959 and preached at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. He also conducted a Quiet Morning at the Cathedral and spoke at a dinner in his honor given by the Church Club of New York.

During part of his stay in New York, Dr. Ramsey was the guest of Bishop Donegan. Commenting on Dr. Ramsey's appointment as Archbishop of Canterbury, Bishop Donegan praised him as "a worthy successor to Dr. Fisher — a distinguished scholar, a wise statesman and a devoted pastor. The Anglican Communion throughout the world will look to Archbishop Ramsey for consecrated and courageous leadership and will not be disappointed." ■

The Bishop's Message

Once again the Church calls us to observe the Season of Lent. Through the years Lent has been regarded as a time of preparation for the Easter festival, but originally it was a time when the laity took it upon themselves to share in the training of those who were preparing for baptism at Easter. Eventually, Lent became, as it is today, a season of penitence and prayer.

"The importance of Lent," as Dom Gregory Dix says in The Shape of the Liturgy, "was that it was not one more ascetic exercise for the devout, but that it was recognized as being of universal obligation. Lent was intended to be a strictly corporate effort of the whole Church, from the Bishop down to the humblest catechumen, to live at least for a season as befitted the body of Christ in fervent and frequent prayer, in order that at their Easter corporate communion all might be found truly members of the Body.

"There was great wholesomeness about this annual requirement of a season of serious self-discipline and intensification of private prayer. It reminded the careless and the sinful Christian as insistently as it did the devout of the claims of the Christian standard, 'Be not conformed to this world but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind.' "

We would all agree that we need Lent to remind us that the Christian way of life is not do-as-you-please, but a disciplined way of living. We need a season in which to intensify our prayers, to really work at our religion, and to strive earnestly to walk in the Christian way.

Vagueness is the enemy of Christian life; so to help you to be definite about your observance of Lent, I suggest this simple, minimum, seven-point rule:

1. To be more faithful in personal prayer and reading of the Bible.
2. To receive the Holy Communion each week after careful preparation the night before.
3. To share regularly in the work of the Church.
4. To mark Ash Wednesday and Good Friday as Fast Days, and to observe all the Fridays and Ember Days by abstinence and a special act of devotion.
5. To make a true effort to put aside some unnecessary indulgence or pleasure in order to have more time for the things of the spirit.
6. To make a self-denial and put the cost of it in the Easter offering.
7. To read at least one Lenten book.

This year, let us all, clergy and laity alike, observe Lent more strictly than ever before. Then our religion will become a greater power in our lives; and our Church will be stirred with new zeal to do its work for God.

Faithfully and affectionately, your Bishop,

why do we sing hymns ? . . .

By Alec Wyton
Organist and Choirmaster
The Cathedral of St. John the Divine

A recent survey by the Christian Herald reported the following eight hymns as being the best loved among Protestants in America, in the order given: "The Old Rugged Cross" — "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" — "In the Garden" — "How Great Thou Art" — "Sweet Hour of Prayer" — "Abide with Me" — "Rock of Ages" — "Nearer My God to Thee."

Now, hymns become beloved of people through association; and if it is reasonable to suppose that family hymn singing in the home is largely a thing of the past, we must assume that the association which made these hymns beloved took place in the church. If this be so, what an indictment of the confused understanding of corporate song!

The function of hymns in corporate worship is to give congregational commentary on the mighty acts of God set forth in the liturgical services ordered in the Book of Common Prayer. Hymns are not designed simply to "get the congregation into the act" or to provide a sort of "seventh inning stretch" between prayers or before and after sermons. They are an act of congregational praise and as such must represent the very finest examples of poetry and music that we can lay hands on.

Martin Luther knew how powerful a force congregational song could be. He gave us positive examples of congregational praise in such noble pieces as "A Mighty Fortress is Our God" — "From Heaven High I Come to You" and "Break Forth Oh Beauteous Heavenly Light."

There is an inexhaustible store of great material before Luther's time: the song of the angels at the first Christmas (Glory to God in the Highest and on Earth, Peace, Good will toward Men); the great "Te Deum Laudamus." From more recent times we have the hymns of the Wesleys, such as "Love Divine All Loves Excelling" — "Christ Whose Glory Fills the Skies" and "Let Saints on Earth in Concert Sing."

But let us look again at the eight favorite hymns. All of them are of an intensely personal nature. They deal not with the church which is "The Glorious Company of the Apostles, The Goodly Fellowship of the Prophets, The Noble Army of Martyrs, The Holy Church throughout all the World", but with the individual seeking comfort and release in the loneliness of his little existence — and on a terribly shaky theological level.

It has been said that the purpose of religion is as much to afflict the comfortable as to comfort the afflicted. Any person whose faith is centered in such concepts as "In the Garden" and "Sweet Hour of Prayer" ought to read and take to heart the words of Hymn 437 in our Episcopal Hymnal 1940: "They Cast Their Nets in Galilee." This is a concept of the peace of God which is far closer to truth and shattering in its realism.

There is a danger in constant use of such hymns as our eight "favorites" in corporate worship. If they do in fact help to render the worship "corporate," the whole act of worship is dragged down to a level of sentimentality and introspection which will deny to the worshipers a vision of God, because they are never made to hold up their heads and to lift their eyes towards heaven.

Personal hymns (dealing with "I" rather than "We") have an occasional place in special services in times of public distress or penitence. For the most part, however, corporate worship demands that we offer to God our very best in thanksgiving and self-dedication. In so striving, we transcend ourselves and go back into the world changed people.

Read if you will the words of Hymn 126 ("For All the Saints") for a hymn which is in fact "a song of praise to God." Sing it (but to the first tune, if you please!) with vigor and joy. Then wonder if this list of eight best loved hymns can in fact be true. ■

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedal Church

Is a Christian supposed to love himself, and must he love himself before he can love his neighbor?

Christ's practical mind was coping with the simple fact that self-love is part and parcel of humanity at every level. The growing child gradually becomes so obsessed with his own wishes and concerns that by the time maturity is reached he has become the center of the universe, with both God and other people out at the periphery.

The problem isn't whether a Christian must love himself first — he does so anyway. Spiritual maturity, however, brings a new understanding as to the type of love one should have for one's self.

It comes as a shock to the adolescent to discover that there are actually people who don't like him. Eventually, he finds so many unlovable characteristics in his own nature that his sense of guilt and disillusionment is so great that he starts to suspect that no one who knew him as he really was could possibly have any use for him.

All this has come about because he loved a self which had never really existed. It is at this point that he stands his first real chance of finding his true self, and recognizing it as the stuff out of which his eternity shall be wrought.

To love this self requires both patience and humility, and a constant awareness that it will grow and brighten in direct proportion to the warmth and joy it shares with other selves — God's or men's.

To be unforgiving with one's own self when God has granted forgiveness, is to be involved with one of the ugliest forms of pride that can afflict the human soul. ■

New Headquarters Building To Be Completed Next Year

The new national headquarters building for the Episcopal Church will be of modern design with a medieval effect. Detailed plans for the 12-story structure were announced recently. The site is on the east side of Manhattan, at Second Avenue and 43rd Street.

The building, which will be on the northwest corner, should be ready for occupancy late in 1962. Total cost for the project is estimated at $4,917,400, including $1,050,000 for the 125 x 80 feet site and $3,867,400 for the building.

On the site now are five buildings containing 71 apartments and seven stores.

All of the new building will be used for the Episcopal Church and some of its affiliated agencies.

Recessed behind an open arcaded passage two stories in height for the full length of the Second Avenue facade will be the chapel, main entrance and lobby, and a combination information center and book store — all on the ground floor.

Above this will be nine floors of offices, conference rooms, etc.

On the top floor will be a small apartment for the Presiding Bishop, plus air conditioning and other equipment.

Now working in three separate locations in New York and Greenwich, Conn., some 300 officers and staff employed by the National Council of the Episcopal Church will be able to operate more efficiently when all are housed in the new building. The present headquarters building at 281 Park Avenue South, in use since 1894, has long been inadequate in space. Compared to 57,829 square feet now available, there will be 101,680 square feet of usable space, with allowance made for some expansion of personnel.

The structure will house the Executive, Christian Education, Christian Social Relations, Finance, Home, Overseas, and Promotion Departments; the general divisions of laymen's work and of women's work; the units of church vocations, administration services, and processing; the Seabury Press, publishing house of the Church; six affiliated agencies; libraries, conference rooms, auditorium, projection room, and shipping and storage facilities.

General contractor for the new building is the George A. Fuller Company. The architects are Adams and Woodbridge, who have designed a number of church buildings in the Diocese of New York. ■

'Drama in the Church' to Be Subject of March 7 Meeting

Episcopal Churchwomen in the Diocese of New York are expected to turn out in record numbers to hear an authority on drama, the Rev. Sidney Lanier, discuss "Drama in the Church" at the Diocesan meeting on Tuesday, March 7. The meeting will start at 10:30 a.m. and will be held at the General Theological Seminary, 175 Ninth Ave., New York City.

Mr. Lanier is assistant to the rector at St. Thomas Church, Manhattan. He has made many appearances on television, including the CBS presentation "Look Up and Live." He has written scripts for both television and radio, as well as serving as drama critic for "Christianity and Crisis" and as host on the ABC radio program "Religious Composite."

Mr. Lanier is on the Advisory Board of Union Theological Seminary's Drama Department; a member of the Religious Drama Committee, Department of Worship and the Arts; and is currently serving as chairman of the Religious Drama Council of Manhattan.

He will speak on various aspects of religious theatre, and the use of drama in the parish. There will also be a dramatic presentation of pertinent material. ■

Chairman Explains Youth and College Program of Women

By Mrs. Woodson D. Scott, Chairman, Youth and College Work.

As Diocesan Chairman, the most frequent questions I have to answer are, "What IS youth and college work, and what do you do?" Before I answer those questions, let's look at some statistics.

Many of you know that our seminaries are about 80% full, that a shortage of approximately 800 priests exists. Of our seminarians, only 50% are from Episcopal homes. There are ten jobs offered to every qualified director of religious education who graduates from Windham House or St. Margaret's House. We have only about 115 priests and chaplains for the 1800 college campuses in our country.

The obvious conclusion to these rather distressing facts is that two great needs exist: the need in our Church for devoted and dedicated workers, clergy and lay, men and women; and the need of our young people for an opportunity to know and grow in the wider life of our Church. They must learn to relate their religion to their activities outside of the Church and Church School situation, and be guided toward Christian vocation.

These needs provide the answer to our first question, as we consider Christian vocation in its broadest sense. And Christian vocation should be considered in its broadest sense, including not only the missionaries in the field and our cloistered Sisters, but also those who teach Church School, type the rector's notes, and, like most of us, try to guide ourselves and our families in the Christian tradition. Christian vocation, then, is a long-continuing process of growth, learning, evolvement, and increasing involvement.

So the answer to the question, "What do we do?" is that the parish Youth and College Chairman must keep her parish informed of the various opportunities in which our young people can begin, at a tender age, to practice their Christian teachings in broader areas. It is for her to encourage young people to participate in the "extracurricular" activities, and to urge the support, both physical and financial, of the parish.

Mr. Cragon, of Dallas, Is Named Director of Christian Education

The Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Jr., has been appointed Director of the Department of Christian Education of the Diocese of New York. The appointment, made by Bishop Donegan, becomes effective April 15.

In his new position, Mr. Cragon will give advisory guidance to the Christian Education programs of the Diocese's churches. He will also direct the Department of Christian

MR. CRAGON

Education's Divisions: Children's Work, Youth Work, College Work, Adult Work, Leadership Training, and Boarding and Day Schools.

The new director succeeds the Rt. Rev. Stuart Wetmore, now a Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese.

For the past six years, Mr. Cragon has been Director of Christian Education for St. Michael and All Angels Church in Dallas, Texas. The church has 3,000 members.

During his years at the Texas church, the Sunday school has grown from 28 to 76 adult workers and from an average pupil attendance of 300 to an average of 500. A new education building was recently completed.

The parish day school — nursery through the third grade — has an enrollment of 155. The fourth, fifth and sixth grades will be added during the next three years.

One part of Mr. Cragon's work has been preparation of all adults seeking Confirmation. The parish has 65 to 70 adult Confirmations a year.

Born in Ruston, La., 36 years ago, Mr. Cragon grew up as a Presbyterian. He was graduated from Tulane University, New Orleans, in 1944 with a major in economics and a minor in Spanish.

It was during college that he was attracted to the Episcopal Church. A few months after graduation, he entered the seminary of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., and received a Bachelor of Divinity degree in 1947.

He has served as curate or rector of several churches in Louisana. For two years he was on the staff of Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N. J., as teacher of sacred studies and as a housemaster of the lower school. Mr. Cragon was "impressed deeply with the high standards possible in the environment of a boarding school."

Immediately before his present position in Dallas, he spent a year at St. Augustine's College in Canterbury, England. His studies there were concentrated on Eucharistic theology and on St. Paul.

In 1959, he was awarded an M. A. in elementary education by Southern Methodist University, Dallas.

In the Diocese of Dallas, he has been a member of the Department of Christian Education and chairman of its Division of Leadership Training. He has also been a member of the Department of Promotion.

Mr. Cragon was married in 1960 to the former Rene Webb Cleveland, of New York City. She was a communicant of the Church of the Incarnation and employed by Harper & Brothers.

Fond of travel, Mr. Cragon has made extensive tours of Europe, Mexico and the West Indies. His avocations include hiking, swimming and Latin American dancing. He enjoys the theatre and classical music, especially opera. ■

Church Sends Priest To Florida to Help Refugees from Cuba

A missionary formerly assigned to Cuba has been appointed by the National Council of the Episcopal Church to work with Cuban refugees. He will work through the Florida Protestant Committee, formed to coordinate aid.

Representatives of major denominations are taking part, in cooperation with Church World Service (the international welfare arm of the National Council of Churches) and the NCC Division of Home Missions.

Finding shelter, food and employment for the refugees from Castro's Cuban regime is the first objective of the new agency, which will also help those who wish to be resettled in other parts of the country. ■

STRINGS IN HIS HEART

It has been said that old age is a state of mind and is not necessarily related to the number of years one has lived. There's support for this thesis at St. Edmund's Church in the Bronx, where an 86-year-old harpist has come out of retirement to play before and during the 11:00 o'clock Sunday service.

The harpist is Stefano Di Stefano, who has contributed his talent to the church for the past four years. And, as we shall see later, this talent is considerable.

Mr. Di Stefano's association with St. Edmund's began soon after he came to see the then rector of the church, the Rev. John B. Langstaff. Though the small, soft spoken harpist is not an Episcopalian, he said he would like to volunteer his services. He had played in many churches, he explained, and would like to play in one again. A friend suggested that he inquire at St. Edmund's, a few blocks from his home.

His offer was readily accepted, for Father Langstaff knew him to be one of the nation's foremost harpists. The two had met many years ago, when Mr. Di Stefano was harpist at Grace Church, Manhattan, and Father Langstaff was an assistant there. Mr. Di Stefano did not know Father Langstaff was at St. Edmund's, though, when he called at the church.

Mr. Di Stefano, whose vitality belies his 86 years, had a long career as a professional harpist. He gave his first public performance at the age of nine. His audience: Sarah Bernhardt and a few of her friends.

This was in Paris, where the talented youngster was brought from his

Diocesan Mission Program is Cut

1960 Missionary Giving Meets Only 80 Percent of Needs

Only 80 percent of the approved Diocesan program for 1960 could actually be carried out, because of inadequate funds. The inadequacy also meant that the Diocese could not meet its rightful share of the National Council's program for domestic and overseas work.

Reason for the cuts was failure of a number of parishes and missions in the Diocese to meet their Missionary Quotas.

Missionary Quotas for both the Diocese and the individual parishes and missions are set by formula. Vestries and Advisory Boards are notified of their quotas several months in advance of the quota year — and only after their representatives in Convention approve the missionary fund's objective. The 1960 objective of $1,135,590 was approved by the 1959 Diocesan Convention. But only $909,178 — or $226,412 less than the objective — was actually received.

Because the Diocese must operate on a balanced budget, the only re-

THE SEASON OF LENT

In the Early Church

And in Today's Church

By the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton
Suffragan Bishop, Diocese of New York

LET US SUPPOSE for a moment that you are living in the very early years of the Christian Church. And let us suppose also that, despite the strong possibility of persecution and actual bodily harm, you are drawn to becoming a follower of Christ.

As a catechumen, you would undergo forty days of rigorous, concentrated preparation. This period would have its climax on Easter and the three days before. On one or more of these days, you would observe an absolute fast. Nothing, not even water, would pass your lips.

On the Thursday before Easter, the bishop would examine and question each of you thoroughly, to assure himself that you were adequately prepared to become a Christian.

The bishop would baptize on Easter Even, and continue into the next morning with the administration of Confirmation and Holy Communion.

It is from this period, from this forty days of preparation for our new birth in Christ, that the season of Lent has its origin.

At an early date, Christians in general began to observe the fast along with the catechumens.

Later on, the fast period was extended to include the six days before Easter — Holy Week.

As early as 340 A.D., however, there was a general movement to fast at least partially for the entire forty days of Lent, a fast probably suggested by the forty days fast of Moses, Elijah, and, especially, of our Lord himself.

Until the 5th Century, the whole tenor of the seasonal fast of Lent was positive — a looking forward with keen anticipation to the joy of Easter — to the time when those being baptized were "buried with Christ" that they might be raised with him to "walk in newness of life," and a time when all Christians commemorated Christ's victory over death and sin.

Lent changed in character from that of a season of joy to a season of increasingly penitential nature in the 5th and following centuries. The main reason for this change was the invasion of the barbarians, which made Christians feel that God was punishing them and that they must purge themselves of this disfavor.

The "flavor" of Lent became one of adversity, punishment, relief and defense, rather than joy.

In his book "Prayer Book Interleaves," Dean Ladd points out:

"The first day of Lent was given the appropriate name Ash Wednesday. And then the forty days of mourning were found to be too few.

"The Lombard invasion struck Italy hard, and at the end of the 6th Century the Pope added 'those three Sundays before Lent,' which, as our low-brow hymn says, 'will prepare us to repent, that in Lent we may begin earnestly to mourn for sin.'"

The purpose of the fast, which was originally of a positive nature, also changed. As the length of the fast expanded, it changed from being absolute, to slightly less rigid, to very strict — one meal a day towards evening, with meat, fish, and in some places, cheese and eggs forbidden. Now we have the much alleviated modern fast, with primary emphasis on penance and the abstaining from festivities.

How should we observe Lent today?

First, and above all, try to comply with the definition of a fast in our own Book of Common Prayer, page 1i: a day "on which the Church requires such a measure of abstinence as is more especially suited to extraordinary acts and exercises of devotion."

It should be noted, however, that in the days when the Prayer Book was compiled it was still common to have days on which an absolute fast was kept. This is why Ash Wednesday and Good Friday are indicated on page 1i as "fasts," without any qualification. Most religious orders and numbers of other people still observe this austere regulation.

But, however we fast, or from whatever we abstain, let us recover the element of joy in it all. In giving up things, let us do it in the knowledge that what we give up is as nothing compared to the joy which it anticipates.

If our abstinence from, for example, cigarettes, the theater, movies, candy, etc., saves us money, let us be sure to give that value to the Church's work or some worthy charity. This is the element of almsgiving which was one of the original ends of the Lenten discipline.

Finally, let us return, as far as possible, to the basic purpose of Lent, namely, that by reading, meditating and hearing sermons and addresses we may deepen our understanding and appreciation of the precious death and glorious resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ — that, in turn, we may truly know that we are "dead indeed unto sin but alive unto God," through him. ■

"I tell you it's not incense, my dear! They had bacon and eggs at the breakfast after the early service."

Anniversary Present: Full Church, $1,000

The weather was miserable January 15 on Staten Island, but the island's Christ Church, New Brighton, was as packed as on Christmas.

One reason for the church's large attendance was the Rev. Andrew C. Long's 20th anniversary as rector. As an anniversary present, the parishioners were asked to fill the church to overflowing by all attending the 11:00 o'clock service.

The request to the parishioners came in a letter from a special committee. The letter also said that contributions were being accepted for a purse for the rector.

The purse came to a little over $1,000, all of the money coming from individuals. Presentation was made at a parish tea Sunday afternoon by the president of Episcopal Churchwomen, Mrs. Jere Tamblyn. A message of congratulations to the rector from the parish was conveyed by the senior warden, Charles O. Minot. ■ native Italy. His father, a professional harpist, recognized his talents early and brought him to Paris to study under some of the world's great teachers.

Young Di Stefano turned professional at 15, playing with an orchestra in Paris.

He came to America five years later and was a professional harpist here for 55 years. Here are a few highlights of that long career:

For 17 years, ending with 1923, he was a soloist at Grace Church in Manhattan.

The next ten years Stefano Di Stefano played at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan.

For seven years he was solo harpist on the NBC radio network. He was the first harpist to play on American radio and composed a number of pieces that would "sound well over the air."

He made two European concert tours and several American tours.

For 35 years he played in the orchestras of Broadway theatres.

He has given concerts in 37 New York City churches.

For 24 years he gave nightly solo performances in the lobby of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Mr. Di Stefano is also a composer and has had ten pieces published. At St. Edmund's, he composes harp music for special services and has dedicated a composition to the church.

Mr. Di Stefano retired from professional life in 1949, when his wife became ill, two years before her death.

For 30 years he lived in an apartment seven blocks from St. Edmund's but moved into a home three months ago. There he gives concerts regularly, and recently made a record for distribution to other homes.

Our interview was held at a reception after the service of institution for St. Edmund's new rector, the Rev. David Sass. Mr. Di Stefano played at the service, his harp placed in its usual position at the front of the nave.

As we talked over coffee at the reception, many people came up to chat with him. Turning aside from the past for a moment, he looked around the room and considered the present. "I have many friends here," he said quietly, "and I love them all." ■

Magazine Honors Father Gusweller

The Rev. James A. Gusweller, rector of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan, has been named one of "Ten Americans to Watch in 1961."

The ten Americans were named by Pageant magazine, which published pictures and biographical sketches of the ten in its February issue.

Fr. Gusweller

The magazine honored one person in each of these categories: science, art, acting, literature, architecture, religion, medicine, race relations, music and education.

Father Gusweller's citation points out the work he has done in the past few years in improving housing conditions of Puerto Rican families in the neighborhood of his church.

"We believe," the editors of Pageant wrote, "that these ten will make their impact upon the times, as Pageant selections in previous years have done."

The editors also referred to the ten as "people who promise excitement and accomplishment in the months ahead."

A recent book, "Shepherd of the Streets," recounts Father Gusweller's work. ■

Youth & College—

Now, what are these extracurricular activities? They include: the Girls' Friendly Society for junior girls, ages 7 to 14, senior girls 14 to 21; the St. John's-in-the-Wilderness camps where, for a nominal cost, young people explore the relationship between work and worship; the Wooster School conferences for junior and senior high school students that teach an awareness of Christ and a Christian's responsibility; and the Seabury Vocational Conference in February each year, for college age women, which urges and explores Christian vocation in many fields, such as teaching, social work, nursing and journalism.

In early spring we ask your parish's support for the Diocesan Youth and College Fund. To date, this fund has provided almost half of all scholarship money available for young people in missions and assisted parishes to attend the St. John's-in-the-Wilderness camps and the Wooster School conferences.

Our work also includes the Canterbury program on the many college campuses in the Diocese. We distribute literature and encourage participation in: the Summer Opportunities program of the Girls' Friendly Society, the Summer Service projects of our National Council, the Apprenticeship Program, and our Episcopal Committee for Foreign Students on the East Coast.

You may well ask, "How does this work tie in with that of Christian Education and Christian Social Relations in this Diocese?" My feeling is that we plow a wide path between them, touching them both at times, but our emphasis is on outside activities which we hope will lead to Christian vocation.

It is sometimes difficult for us as women to recruit for the ministry, but in our roles as parents we can create a Christian atmosphere and attitude. Further, we must accept our responsibility to be vocational counselors and not leave this completely to teachers in our public schools.

These, then, are some of the activities of the Episcopal Churchwomen in this Diocese who are interested in youth and college work. These are exciting, challenging programs, designed and re-designed for our intelligent and dynamic young people. Won't you join us in this work? ■ course when anticipated income is less than the indicated cost of the program is to curtail the program.

Program Cut—

Of Diocesan departments and agencies, the largest dollar cut fell on the Department of Missions. Other departments were cut proportionately.

The National Council portion of the overall requirement was 54.9 percent of the total amount actually received. Regardless of how much or how little is received from the parishes and missions, the National Council is still given almost 55 cents of every dollar.

The Diocesan Convention has never failed to recognize the needs of the Program of the Church. Yet, the Diocese has never been able to meet the obligations placed upon it, either by National Council or Convention, because many congregations do not meet the obligation to which they gave support in Convention.

However, there are two encouraging signs. The $909,178 is the largest amount ever received in quota payments from parishes and missions. And the amount paid to National Council, while 20% short, is still the largest ever paid by any diocese. ■

Foreword by Henry Irving Louttit, Bishop of South Florida. In this frist ACU book, parish priests share with us their method of presenting the ancient truths of the Catholic Faith. In a very real way this book is an attempt to give substance to prayers which are continually upon the lips of Episcopalians. At Holy Communion we pray that "having in remembrance his blessed passion and precious death, his mighty resurrection and glorious ascension" we may render unto God "most hearty thanks for the innumerable benefits procured unto us by the same." # Church Periodical Club Was Founded in Diocese

The Church Periodical Club, which now has branches in over 3,000 Episcopal churches, got its start in the Diocese of New York. Organized 73 years ago, CPC traces its beginning to a few women at the Church of the Holy Communion, Manhattan. With probably no thought of founding a national organization, these women began remailing the church magazines they received at home. The recipients were needy clergymen in remote areas of Wisconsin.

A Liberian student browses through a library provided by the Church Periodical Club. The organization furnishes new books for libraries in institutions throughout the world.

Though the original activities of CPC have been greatly expanded, and though it now has more parish branches than any other Church affiliated organization, it is still closely allied to women's work in the Church.

In the Diocese of New York, CPC is an integral part of Episcopal Churchwomen — on the parish, convocation and diocesan levels. In all other dioceses, CPC is either a part of or closely allied with the diocesan women's organization.

On the national level, CPC is part of the General Division of Women's Work of the Episcopal Church's National Council.

The main functions of the Church Periodical Club are: (1) the collection and distribution of used books and magazines to hospitals, prisons, homes and other institutions; (2) the purchase and distribution of all types of books to schools, seminaries and mission churches; (3) the collection or purchase of records, tape recordings and visual materials for distribution to the same groups that receive books and magazines.

Magazine collection and distribution is carried on almost exclusively at the parish, convocation and diocesan levels, for national CPC hasn't the storage or shipping facilities to handle such bulky materials.

National CPC has an office at 297 Park Avenue South, directed by Miss Ruth Lindvall. The upkeep of this office is met by a grant from the Episcopal Church's National Council, because CPC acts as a book purchasing agent for mission workers.

National CPC operates mainly through its National Book Fund Committee, which processes requests from all over the world. It collects and disburses about $20,000 a year and could effectively spend twice that amount. Requests range from a single prayer book to be used in teaching in Africa, to grants for the furnishing of entire libraries for seminaries and church-sponsored universities and hospitals.

Many books and grants are also distributed directly by diocesan Church Periodical Clubs.

An added service of CPC in the Diocese of New York is the Seminarians' Book Fund. Each seminarian from the Diocese, regardless of where he is studying, is given at least $15 with which to buy the nucleus of a theological library.

The director of the Church Periodical Club in the Diocese of New York is Mrs. R. F. Mattesich, 310 East 70th Street, New York 22, New York. ■

"We shall rest, and we shall see; we shall see, and we shall love; we shall love, and we shall praise. Behold what we shall be in the end, and shall not end." These words in which St. Augustine describes heaven are the theme of this book by Dr. Mascall. Here is wisdom, drawn from one of the timeless classics of Christian writing, and applied with sympathetic understanding to our own time.

THE TRUTH AND THE LIFE

Essays on Doctrine by Priests of the American Church Union. Foreword by Henry Irving Louttit, Bishop of South Florida. In this first ACU book, parish priests share with us their method of presenting the ancient truths of the Catholic Faith. In a very real way this book is an attempt to give substance to prayers which are continually upon the lips of Episcopalians. At Holy Communion we pray that "having in remembrance his blessed passion and precious death, his mighty resurrection and glorious ascension" we may render unto God "most hearty thanks for the innumerable benefits procured unto us by the same." The essays in this book are a commentary on this wonderful passage in our Liturgy. Published for The American Church Union by Morehouse-Barlow Co.

The Bishop's Message

THE LORD IS RISEN! This was the incredible announcement that transformed the frightened, dejected disciples into fearless, devoted followers of the living Lord.

Before Easter Day they were disappointed and doubtful men. But when they knew that God had raised Jesus from the dead their wavering faith was restored. From that day forward their loyalty never faltered. With amazing courage and exuberant joy they proclaimed the gospel of the Resurrection.

Our loyalty to Christ is often as weak and wavering as that of the disciples after Calvary. We are not completely committed Christians. We do little or nothing for the sake of Christ, or for the good of his Church.

The good news of Easter is not only the promise of eternal life to all who accept Christ as Lord and Saviour, but it is also the assurance that through the power of the Resurrection our feeble faith can be transformed.

But the conditions our Lord set forth must be fulfilled. Some of them are: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me. Love your enemies. Forgive until seventy times seven. Do this in remembrance of me." It is through loving, loyal obedience to our Lord that we are changed and receive his strength for living, and share in his victory over sin and death. Our Lord is gracious beyond our understanding, but he is also exacting.

THE LORD IS RISEN! At Eastertide and always, may we pray that we may know him and the power of his Resurrection.

God grant you all a blessed and happy Easter.

Faithfully and affectionately your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

Lift up your hands

in the sanctuary, and praise the Lord — Psalm 134, verse 3, B.C.P.

The priest faced the congregation, touched the palm of one hand and then the other. No words were spoken, but the people understood perfectly — understood the words "Jesus Christ."

The service continued — through the sermon, the offertory anthem, the Holy Communion, and finally the blessing. And still not a sound was uttered.

This was a Sunday service at St. Ann's for the Deaf, a church in which all services are conducted in sign language. Even the choir uses this strikingly expressive form of communication.

St. Ann's, established in 1852, was the first Christian church for the deaf in the United States. During its 109-year history, it has been in several locations, all of them in Manhattan. Since 1959, it has used the facilities of St. Michael's, 99th St. and Amsterdam Ave. St. Ann's also has a once-a-month Holy Communion service at the Church of the Good Shepherd in the Bronx, this location being more convenient for members living in Westchester and East Bronx.

We recently attended a Holy Communion service at St. Ann's. May we share this experience with you, the experience of a hearing person in a church for the deaf?

The service was not held at 11:00 o'clock but at 3:00. This custom goes back to the early years of St. Ann's, when the first rector, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Gallaudet, carried on a very successful ministry with two congregations. There was the usual Sunday morning service for the hearing congregation and another service for the deaf congregation, using sign language, in the afternoon or evening.

This established a pattern of afternoon or evening services which later came to be adopted by nearly all other churches for the deaf, especially those congregations which use the church of a hearing congregation.

Before the service began, we met and talked with the present vicar of St. Ann's, the Rev. Dr. Edwin W. Nies. Dr. Nies, like a good many deaf persons, converses with hearing persons by reading lips and then replying orally. Deaf persons, we learn, strongly dislike the terms "deaf and dumb" or "deaf mute." A deaf person may not speak, but this does not necessarily mean that he is physically incapable of doing so. There are other ways of learning to speak besides by imitation of sound.

The service began. As the procession entered the church, an usher came to the front and motioned the congregation to rise. As a hearing person, we were conscious of the silence as the procession entered — conscious that there was no processional hymn. But, as we learned with great impact during the silent one-hour service, there is a unique reverence to silence, a feeling of detachment from the world and a oneness with God.

The service followed the Book of Common Prayer, of course, so we had only minor difficulty in participating in it. The only basic difference between a service for the deaf and one for the hearing is that one uses a language of signs and the other a language of sounds.

For the offertory anthem and the hymns, the choir left their stalls and stood facing the congregation at the top of the chancel steps.

How does a deaf choir sing? By extremely graceful and flowing motions of the arms and hands. Though deaf choirs use sign language, the signing is different from that used in conversation. The motions are much slower, more sweeping and place greater emphasis on grace and rhythm. Deaf choirs use their arms and hands in much the same way as dancers do — and the motions are equally beautiful.

At the end of the service, the congregation met for coffee in the parish house. Churches for the deaf usually serve as a social center as well as a spiritual center, for deaf persons in widely scattered areas do not often have the chance to get together.

St. Ann's, the only church for the deaf in the Diocese of New York, has parishioners from all over the metropolitan area. In the early years, before other denominations established their own churches for the deaf, the services at St. Ann's were attended by people of all faiths — including Jews and Roman Catholics.

The present congregation of St. Ann's for the Deaf, which is a mission of the Diocese, numbers about 100 communicants. Dr. Nies, the vicar, became a member of the congregation in 1914 and a lay reader in 1920. He practiced dentistry in New York City for 35 years, retiring from that profession to study privately for the priesthood. He has been vicar of St. Ann's since 1949.

In our conversations with Dr. Nies, we learned something of the sign language used by the deaf. Contrary to what many people think, deaf people do not depend entirely on the manual alphabet, do not spell out all the words. The manual alphabet is used far less than are signs that communicate a whole word or even a complete thought. A person with a good vocabulary of signs spells out very few words.

The sign language is an effective means of communication and allows two people to carry on a conversation at about the same speed as speaking. Not just the fingers, but the arms and other parts of the body are used.

Acolyte joins in responses as Dr. Nies celebrates Holy Communion.

Part of the four-member choir "sings" a hymn. Choir, also shown in photo on opposite page, uses modified sign language that stresses the beauty of graceful movement.

Using sign language, the Rev. Dr. Edwin W. Nies conducts a service at St. Ann's for the Deaf.

Lift up your hands—

Some of the signs are simple and easily understood, such as pointing to yourself for "me" and joining the hands with fingers pointed upward for "amen."

Many signs express a dominant characteristic. "Bishop" is signed by placing the hands over the head in an inverted V — the bishop's mitre. Touching the collar indicates "priest." "Mother" is signed by a rocking motion with the arms.

Some words require two or three signs. "Bible" is signed by indicating "Christ's" and then "book." To indicate "Christian" you give the sign for "Christ" and then that for "follower of."

There is even slang in sign language. If you want to express an idea like "I don't want anything to do with that," you simply brush your shoulder with the back of your hand.

What advice does Dr. Nies have for hearing people in their relationships with deaf people?

Be patient in trying to understand the speech of deaf people. Many deaf people's speech is in in a monotone but can be readily understood after you get used to it.

Stop suggesting that a deaf person get a hearing aid. Hearing aids are for the hard of hearing but are of no value to the deaf person.

Don't expect a deaf person to read your lips at a great distance.

Though there are certainly disadvantages to being deaf, there are also a few advantages. For instance, a deaf congregation is not subjected to such distractions outside the church as barking dogs, the clatter of passing trains, or the backfires of trucks. During the service I attended, a fire engine came screaming down Amsterdam Avenue, and a group of children just outside the church got into a

Speech without Sound...

Heaven

Many words are signed by means of two or more descriptive words. Here, Dr. Nies indicates "heaven" by giving the signs for "sky" and "above." Deaf people with good vocabularies use signs much more than they use the manual alphabet.

noisy argument — but I was the only one in the church who was distracted.

It may be an advantage or a disadvantage, but a preacher in a deaf congregation certainly can tell whether the people are paying attention to his sermon. If nobody's watching, nobody's "listening." He can't delude himself into thinking, as can other preachers, that all those bowed heads mean the people are meditating on his provocative ideas.

Deaf people are ingenious at communicating without sound. How about this, for instance? To get the attention of a room full of deaf people, you simply stamp your foot. Everyone feels the vibration.

How many Episcopal congregations for the deaf are there in the United States? Ninety-nine. At the National Council, work with the deaf is directed by Clifford Horton, of the Home Department.

Though it has been only in the last three years that the National Church has become officially concerned with work for the deaf, the Conference of Church Workers Among the Deaf has been active since 1880. As stated in the masthead of the Conference's magazine, The Deaf Churchman, it is "An organization of Protestant Episcopal clergymen and lay workers for the promotion of Church work among the deaf in the United States of America."

In building up programs tailored for the deaf, the Episcopal Church has a foundation of many "firsts." The first school for the deaf, in Hartford, Conn., was established by the Rev. Dr. Thomas H. Gallaudet. One of his sons established Saint Ann's for the Deaf. Another son, a layman, was a founder and first president of the first college for the deaf. Gallaudet, in Washington, D. C., is still the world's only college for the deaf. ■

Episcopal Churchwomen

Chaplain Nelson confers with a resident of the Westchester County Home. The Episcopal clergyman will speak on the institution when Episcopal Churchwomen meet there April 4.

Churchwomen to Tour Welfare Institution

Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese will meet on Tuesday, April 4, at the Westchester County Home in Valhalla.

The meeting will begin at 11:00 and will be followed at 12:30 by a box lunch. A tour of the buildings and grounds will be conducted after lunch.

Speakers at the meeting will be Mrs. George W. Barrett, a member of the Woman's Council of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society; and the Rev. Stanley Nelson, chaplain for Westchester County Home, Grasslands Hospital, and Westchester County Penitentiary, a ministry supported by the City Mission Society.

Mrs. Barrett will picture the work of the Mission Society and the part the Woman's Council plays in implementing that work, especially as it concerns the Episcopal Churchwomen.

Chaplain Nelson will explain the workings of the County Home and the adjoining Grasslands Hospital. The two institutions are connected by a tunnel.

In order to make the program on April 4 more meaningful to those who attend, Chaplain Nelson has provided the following information:

The Westchester County Home is a unit of the Westchester County Department of Public Welfare. Medical care for residents of the Home is provided by Grasslands Hospital.

The median age of men and women in the County Home is 73 years. Many are chronically ill, blind or disabled.

The home now has 642 residents, 210 of whom are infirmary residents and require continual care.

One of the features of the County Home care program is a rehabilitation unit, which helps re-train the residents to a maximum level of self-sufficiency for living in the Home. A number of Episcopal Churchwomen serve as volunteers in this therapy.

Recreation is of a great variety, and here, too, Episcopal Churchwomen are serving as volunteer aides.

Volunteers are needed to assist Chaplain Nelson in the religious programs, including Bible reading and teaching. ■

Chairman Outlines Aims of Christian Social Relations

By Mrs. James W. Kennedy, Chairman Christian Social Relations, ECW

The function of any committee or department of Christian Social Relations is to make clear the relevance of the Church to the world. For the Church is not "in a box", isolated, ingrown. It exists to minister to the needs of individuals and society, applying Christian insights about God and man to the practical problems of a changing world. Practicing Christian social relations means using the Christian approach to all relations of people with people, showing concern for total human life.

While our Christian Social Relations Committee is concerned with problems affecting large groups of people, such as juvenile delinquency, refugees, and legislation, we realize that the practical action point for most women lies in volunteer service. During the past year, such assistance to the many institutions in which the official Protestant chaplains are sponsored by the City Mission Society, has been channeled through the Woman's Council to the Society. We will hear details of this work at our April 4 Diocesan meeting. We are very thankful for this vigorous new development and encourage women in all parishes to become involved in some particular job, even while keeping informed on the larger issues of Christian social relations.

Concerning our current emphasis, "Aging—A Challenge!"—our efforts have been directed toward finding out how to meet the growing volume of requests for recreation, housing, infirmary care, and simple human companionship. With this in mind, our Christian Social Relations Committee participated in a meeting of the Diocesan Christian Social Relations Department, where we discussed this whole matter and heard of a pilot project now being carried on at St. Michael's Church, Manhattan. There, a recreation center has been successfully developed under the guidance of Dr. Carol Lucas of Columbia University, and Miss Jean Hall. Since the need for such programs grows more obvious every day, we hope that other parishes will draw on the experiences of St. Michael's, adapting the pattern to the individual neighborhood and situation. ■

■ THE WEST POINT chapel choir gave a concert of sacred music at St. Matthew's, Bedford, on Sunday, February 26, at 4:00 p.m. All members of the Bedford community were invited. This was the fourth consecutive year that the choir has sung at St. Matthew's.

■ THE MEN of the Church of the Holy Innocents, Highland Falls, were hosts to the men of St. Mark's, Fort Montgomery, at a Washington's Birthday Corporate Communion and breakfast. Also present were a number of men from the cadet and post chapels at West Point.

■ THE INDIANA COUNCIL of Churches has announced that more than 300 persons registered during the first week of its new telecourse on "The Life and Teaching of Jesus." The 13-week television course is being given in cooperation with DePauw University.

■ THE EDITOR of The Episcopalian, Henry L. McCorkle, is the son of a communicant in the Diocese of New York. Editor McCorkle's father is Guy A. McCorkle, who recently retired as treasurer of the Church of Christ the King in the Rondout Valley, near Stone Ridge.

■ PRESIDENT Kennedy's personal physician, Dr. Janet Travell, is a member of the Church of the Redeemer, Pelham. In private life she is Mrs. John Powell. Mr. Powell has served several terms on the vestry; and the couple's two daughters grew up in the parish. The family will move to Washington, where Mr. Powell will continue with the investment firm with which he has been associated in New York City.

■ THE TOP Regents scholar in Orange County is a member of St. Andrew's, Walden. He is Robert V. Brokaw, Jr., a 17-year-old high school senior who plans to enter the ministry. His score on the Regents scholarship exam was 256 out of a possible 300. In St. Andrew's, he is president of the youth group and director of the acolytes.

■ A MEMORIAL to the Rev. Dr. Hutchens Chew Bishop, rector of St. Philip's, Manhattan, for the 25 years from 1886 to 1911, was dedicated at the church last month. The bronze bas-relief, which has been placed in the baptistry, is the work of Onorio Ruotolo and the gift of Mrs. Zilla W. Dennery.

■ TRINITY, New Rochelle, is holding noon-day preaching services Monday through Friday every day in Lent. Trinity is thought to be the only Episcopal church in Westchester holding such services. Each service lasts 20 minutes. Prominent clergymen of various denominations speak, a different preacher each day. Among those attending the services are business people from the downtown area. ■

These sources include the Episcopal Churchwomen, clergy of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, non-parochial clergy, Diocesan and Cathedral staffs, earned interest and special collections.

Commitments for expansion, new construction and Revolving Fund loans are made as quickly as cash becomes available.

In the Bronx, one project has been completed and two are well under way. The completed project is a church house, which includes apartments for the clergy, at St. Paul's. Under construction at St. Andrew's is a combination church, parish house and rectory; and at St. Margaret's a parish house is being built.

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedal Church

In this monthly column, Canon West answers some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

Can a Christian say that all of the great religions of the world worship the same God? For example, Confucianism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Judaism, and Christianity.

One should probably eliminate Confucianism from the list, for strict Confucianism is a system of ethics rather than a religion; but the question would apply to all the others in the list, and the answer is yes. The problem between great religions is not the existence of God, but the nature of God. The question even for the atheist is not whether there is power in the universe, but rather what that power is like. Is it personal? Is it good? Is it loving? Does it reveal itself, and have we any relationship with it?

Buddhism is a lofty religion of renunciation. Judaism is a living relationship with a living God who is not only himself holy but demands holiness from his people. Mohammedanism, or more properly Islam, is a religion of absolute conformity to the ethical mandates and will of a living God as known and understood by Mohammed. Christianity is a religion of mystical absorption into the very life of God himself — a God who revealed his nature and his methodology supremely and finally in the person of Jesus Christ.

From the Christian point of view, God not only revealed his will, but in the Incarnation he revealed himself. Interestingly enough, the other great religions tend to take Christ quite seriously. The only thing they cannot understand is Christians.

Missions to Be Topic Convocation Meetings

The spring convocation meetings of the Diocese of New York will be held on Thursday evening, April 20.

Though detailed plans for the seven simultaneous meetings had not been made at the time of this writing, the general theme will be the missionary work of the Episcopal Church. It is anticipated that speakers will outline the goals, accomplishments and problems of the Church's over-all missionary program. This is a subject which has been receiving a great deal of study in the Church and one which will be discussed at the General Convention in Detroit next September.

In addition to hearing an outstanding speaker, each of the seven meetings will hold election of convocation officers.

Some of the meetings will be preceded by supper, and others will not. Meeting schedules will be announced later.

The Diocese of New York has seven convocations, each a geographical area. At least two meetings of each convocation are held annually, one in the fall and one in the spring. ■

Christian Education Conducts Workshop On Audio-Visual Aids

Representatives of 26 parishes in the Diocese attended an audio-visual workshop sponsored by the Department of Christian Education. The workshop, which was free except for room and board charges, was held at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center January 31 through February 2.

Leader of the workshop was the Rev. John G. Harrell, executive secretary for the National Council's Division of Audio-Visual Education. Others on the program were the Rev. E. J. Rooney, acting director of Christian Education for the Diocese, and his assistant, Mrs. Margaret Lightfoot.

The content of the intensive workshop included the theory and practice of using audio-visual materials in Christian education work. The focus was on particular problems experienced at the parish level.

Among the 30 persons attending were clergymen, teacher trainers, directors of religious education, and Sunday school superintendents. ■

Two tenement buildings west of St. Edward the Martyr in Manhattan have been purchased and will be demolished to make way for a two-story and basement building to house a gymnasium and group activities facilities. The church is on 109th St. just east of Fifth Ave.

Loans from the Revolving Fund have been granted to several surburban and rural congregations, among which are All Saints, Valley Cottage, for the recently completed new church and meeting room wing; Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, for purchase of a new rectory; Church of Christ the King, near Stone Ridge, for a new church, parish house and rectory; and St. Gregory's, Woodstock, for a parish house addition, not yet under construction.

Also financed with 175th Anniversary Fund monies have been purchase of a rectory at Red Oaks Mill in Dutchess County and a four-acre site at Washingtonville in Orange County for the future use of St. Anne's Mission. ■

67 Episcopalians Serve in Cabinet, Senate or House

Secretary of the Treasury C. Douglas Dillon, a communicant of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan, is among the 67 Episcopalians serving in the Cabinet, Senate or House of Representatives.

The Kennedy cabinet includes seven Protestants, two Jews and a Roman Catholic — all active in their churches or synagogues. Besides Secretary Dillon, the Protestants are two Presbyterians, two Methodists, a Lutheran and a Mormon.

A Reader Suggests

that individual parishioners not monopolize the clergy at the church door after Sunday services. Engaging the clergy in prolonged conversation at this time makes it difficult for them to greet other parishioners.

In the Senate, there are 86 Protestants (including 13 Episcopalians), 12 Roman Catholics and two Jews.

In the House, there are 87 Roman Catholics, 11 Jews and 334 members of other faiths. Included in this 334 are 53 Episcopalians.

Three Congressmen list no religious affiliation.

Among the 50 state governors, there are 40 Protestants and 10 Roman Catholics. Three governors are Episcopalians — those of Delaware, Nebraska and Wyoming. ■

McKay Is Honored For His 32 Years Service to Parish

Note to rectors: If any of your parishioners ever complain of not knowing just what to do for the church, have them talk to William J. McKay, of Christ Church, Pelham Manor. He's an expert on knowing what jobs a layman can do, for he's done most of them himself.

Mr. McKay's varied contributions to his parish extend back over the 32 years that he has been a member. So impressive have been these contributions that the rector, wardens and vestrymen presented him with a scroll naming him "Warden Emeritus of Christ Church" upon his recent retirement as senior warden.

In addition to his other work for the parish, Mr. McKay has been auditor or treasurer for 32 years. And he continues as auditor, as well as being a member of the Budget Committee.

He has also served as vestryman, junior and senior warden, Sunday school teacher, chairman of the Every Member Canvass, chairman of the Budget Committee, chairman of the Grounds Committee, and in many other capacities.

His community activities include 25 years as treasurer of the Village of Pelham Manor.

Mr. McKay, who retired from business in 1957, was treasurer of the Mutual Chemical Division of Allied Chemical Corporation. ■

National Council?

Church people are sometimes confused by the term "National Council." The confusion results from the fact that there are two National Councils.

The National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A. is the governing body of the Church between General Conventions. Conventions are held every three years, the next one in September, 1961.

The Episcopal National Council carries on the day-to-day operations of the National Church through its various departments and divisions. The Presiding Bishop is the president of National Council. Its headquarters are at 281 Park Avenue South in Manhattan.

The National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. is a cooperating agency of this country's Christian Churches. Thirty-four Churches, including the Episcopal, are members. Like the Episcopal National Council, it operates primarily through its departments and divisions. President is J. Irwin Miller. Headquarters are at the new Interchurch Center, next to Riverside Church in Manhattan.

Protestant Directory Lists 1,825 Churches In City of New York

The 1961 Protestant Church Directory, published by the Protestant Council of the City of New York. lists 1,825 Protestant and Orthodox churches in the five boroughs.

Brooklyn can still lay claim to being the "City of Churches." The borough has 573 Protestant churches, affiliated with 60 denominations. Manhattan is next with 566 churches, Queens with 346, the Bronx with 238, and Staten Island with 92. ■

EDITORIAL

"FOUR persons were killed and 11,000 were left homeless today by a fire that swept through a New York City housing development. Over 1,000 homes were destroyed."

If this had actually happened, the story would have made banner headlines all over the United States. After all — four killed, a thousand homes destroyed, 11,000 men, women and children without places to live.

But, though it did not happen in New York City, this fire did occur. It happened in Hong Kong.

No, you didn't read about it on the front page of your paper. We doubt if it made the papers at all. We read about it in a newsletter published by Church World Service. Here's how the CWS item started:

'The worst fire since 1953 has leveled more than 1,000 ramshackle huts in the Hung Kom section of Hong Kong, leaving four dead and some 11,000 refugees destitute."

Like many Americans, we have become rather jaded about human misery in distant parts of the world. A child starves on the streets of the Congo; a father searches for the family supper in a garbage can; a woman dies from infection for the lack of a ten-cent sterile bandage. But we don't get worked up about these things. We take human suffering for granted.

And so it was that the Hong Kong fire didn't really shake us — until we contrasted it with something that just happened in our own parish.

We have in the parish a family in which the father has been out of work for several months. By American standards, the family's plight has become desperate — very little food, the children badly in need of clothing.

Well, the rector of our church told one of the women's organizations about this situation and asked for contributions of food and used clothing. There was quite a stir, much excitement about the needy family. And the contributions poured in, everything from canned peaches to pink booties.

Just think about the contrast between that situation in our parish and the fire in Hong Kong. The misfortune of one family galvanized the parish — because that misfortune was just down the street. The misfortune of 1,000 families in Hong Kong, and the misfortune of millions of families in other parts of the world, hardly raises an eyebrow — because these misfortunes are far, far away.

It's like they say in the newspaper business: a dog fight on the corner is more news than a war in Asia.

But we must train ourselves to be less parochial in our thinking. Help the family down the street, yes, but don't ignore the millions of desperate families around the world. Brotherhood knows no boundary lines.

One way we can practice brotherhood is through Church World Service, overseas relief agency of the National Council of Churches. After the Hong Kong fire, for instance, CWS immediately sent food and blankets, and the next morning began making plans for building fireproof homes, using concrete siding and asbestos roofing. When the CWS newsletter was written, bulldozers had already moved away the fire debris preparatory to the construction.

Where more fitting than in overseas relief are the words of our Lord: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my bretheren, ye have done it unto me."

The Bishop's Message

The New English Bible is a memorable achievement, the result of thirteen years of devoted work by a group of distinguished British Biblical scholars. The translators have succeeded admirably in their purpose to render the Greek into the English of the present day, that is, "into the vocabulary, constructions, and rhythms of contemporary speech." No ordinary man can now say that the New Testament does not make sense to him. Old truths come alive with new urgency and striking relevance to the people of the space age. The changeless Word of God is communicated in the speech and idiom of the present day.

In this translation of the New Testament, well known phrases take on illuminating freshness and directness; Certain passages stand out as they have never done before. As for example:

> 'God loved the world so much that he gave his only Son, that everyone who has faith in him may not die but have eternal life.' John III, 16.

> Jesus replied, 'I am the way; I am the truth and I am life; no one comes to the Father except by me.' John XIV, 6.

> In a word, there are three things that last for ever: faith, hope, and love; but the greatest of them all is love. 1 Corinthians XIII, 13.

> And so the hymn says:
> 'Awake, sleeper,
> Rise from the dead,
> And Christ will shine upon you.'
> Be most careful then how you conduct yourselves: like sensible men, not like simpletons. Use the present opportunity to the full, for these are evil days. So do not be fools, but try to understand what the will of the Lord is. Ephesians V, 14-17.

> And what is faith? Faith gives substance to our hopes, and makes us certain of realities we do not see. Hebrews XI, 1.

This memorable translation is not only great scholarship, but also is provides that for which it exists — great religion. It makes the reader feel the power of the message of the Bible — the Word of God speaking to us through the minds and hearts of the world's spiritual geniuses, and supremely through the mind and heart and life of him whom we acknowledge as Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

I heartily commend the New English Bible for personal devotions, private study, and for occasional use in public worship.

Faithfully and affectionately your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

TIME ON MY HANDS

A Moving Story Told By a Retired Executive

BY C. H. BROWN

I MUST SAY that I never thought I would be writing an article like this. My experience is not unique, I am sure, but it has all been so rewarding to me that when I told our rector how my work in the church affected me, he suggested I tell somebody about it.

My parents were Episcopalians. In fact, they met through the church. My father was interested in church music, and at home we would march around the house playing choir boys. It was a wonderful age. It was from this background that I proceeded into work in the Church. I was treasurer of the church school, choir boy, and acolyte. I later became a member of the men's club and was active in other aspects of church life. This was fifty years ago.

As age changes concepts of life, so it also changes concepts of the church and its role in the life of a man. Business cares and the activities of a growing family had their effect, distracting me from active leadership in the church. It seems that with me then, as with many now, the church is forced far back. There just isn't enough Daddy to go around. Those busy years leave little of a man's time for the work of the church. Perhaps feelings will change; let's hope they do.

Now I am retired, and I look back at those years, from the point of my contributions of time and leadership to the church, with no small feeling of shame. But we get nowhere looking back. Now is now. In this "now" we see that government and society provide many forms of security for the older person. My wife and I have a full and happy life in retirement, and we are thankful for the many benefits we have. We did, however, begin to wonder about the spiritual needs of older persons. Are there ample spiritual facilities for us? And if there are, how shall we avail ourselves of them?

Now that I have retired, I find I have one great commodity . . . time. And this is the key to the attainment of the spiritual facilities offered older persons. Some retire and are busy; some are just plain bored. I feel it is the responsibility of the busy to direct their activities to the highest level; and it is the responsibility of the person who is bored to see that the time, which appears a curse to him, can be used as a blessing in the work of the church. The retired man has something to give the church that few can give. Time. How this time is used is an individual matter — but it cannot be used until it is offered.

I have found real joy in using my time to work for the church. So much of what I do is new. I may paint a room, do telephoning, run the duplicator, or do that job for the rector that frees him for a job only he can do. I feel I make a contribution when I take a carload to some function. Nothing I do may be really important. I suppose that is why it is often difficult to get workers for some jobs, but what I do becomes important. It is important to me, for it is my expression and gift to the work of the church.

He writes this article at my request, for I feel that his experience reveals a seldom used source of manpower, and that it also brings a message of opportunity for personal joy and growth for the retired person.*

Mr. Brown, a member of Holy Trinity, Pawling, has been a vestryman, delegate to the Diocesan Convention, and member of the Stewardship Committee. He works at any task given him — with vigor and dedication. It is a great aid to have men like Mr. Brown ready as "time-stretchers" in the busy life of a parish. No task is too small and no challenge is too great. The only thing that he is slow to offer is advice.

Illustrative of his unselfish and humble approach to church work is the way he began his "new career." He walked into my office one day and, after explaining that he had retired from business, asked a simple but meaningful question: "What can I do?"

Being retired, I am able to serve in capacities where men in active business cannot devote the time. I have learned that the church is an all-day, seven-day operation. Many see only an hour on Sunday morning or an evening a week. There is a small study group that meets weekly in the morning. We are all people with time, but we feel that through this application of our time it becomes a means for learning and stimulation that might have otherwise escaped these years of life. Week-day Communions have become a real and regular part of my life.

Perhaps one of the most important aspects of active church life in retirement years is that of involvement. A broader concept of life comes when nature works to narrow the concept of life. Through the church I have come to know and work with many wonderful people I would have never met had I retired to my own little group of friends and former business associates. The church is a family to me, and I feel I am a member of that family. It is not an institution but a body. I am not a number but a member. This is an essential feeling to the older person.

It is fun. The little hours and minutes I give bring me to a greater understanding of my church and her needs — and of my needs. Not until I began to do a little did I realize how much there was to be done. How I wish that more retired members would realize what a part they can play and what a contribution they can make. Not only does one profit because of the satisfaction of accomplishment, but one also opens the door to a new meaning of regular worship and of service to the church. The young children, the teen-agers, the active and busy people who seemed to move all around me in life — they have become, through the church, all parts of my life. In becoming closer to the church we have in common, I have become closer to them.

Looking backward, I am saddened to realize that I allowed other activities to come before the church. I attempt to speak of this when the occasion seems proper.

Church work has added a new dimension to my retirement. It has expanded my outlook; it has opened my eyes to new friends and new joys.

The days are all too short. But in these days we are never too old to give — if we are never too old to offer. ■

Two tenement houses to right of St. Edward the Martyr will be demolished to make way for a new parish house. The project is being financed with monies contributed to the Diocese's 175th Anniversary Fund. St. Edward the Martyr is on East 109th Street.

Parish House Will Be First 175th Project in Manhattan

A two-story and basement parish house will be built adjoining St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan. The new structure will be located on the west side of the church, on a site now occupied by two tenement houses.

Demolition of these buildings will begin as soon as adequate other housing can be found for the 30 tenant families. Finding new homes for the families is being carried out by Relocation and Management Associates, Inc.

The new parish house, of cement block with brick facing, will be built with monies contributed to the Diocese's 175th Anniversary Fund.

Cost of the entire project, including acquistion of the site, tenant relocation, demolition, and construction, is expected to cost about $250,000.

At ground level between the church and parish house will be a narrow, park-like area containing flowers, shrubbery and benches. Both the church and the parish house will be entered from this area.

The basement of the new building will contain a gymnasium, instructor's office, locker rooms, storage facilities, and a game room.

The first floor will be taken up largely with the upper portion of the gym, though there will be a balcony for spectators, as well as a men's activities room.

On the second floor will be a women's activities room, club room, hobby room, office, arts and craft room, and a kitchen and a dining room.

The building has been so designed, by the New York City architectural firm of Mazza and Seccia, that a third story can be accommodated.

St. Edward the Martyr, a mission of the Diocese, is located on 109th St. just east of Fifth Avenue. The neighborhood, mostly old brownstone tenements, is densely populated. St. Edward the Martyr is the only Episcopal church located where it can perform an effective ministry to an area bounded by Fifth Avenue, 125th Street, the East River and 96th Street. There are more than 215,000 people here who live in old housing and 55,000 more who will eventually occupy new public housing built to replace some of the city's worst slums. ■

Bishop Conducts Four-Day Mission During Holy Week

Bishop Donegan conducted a four-day preaching mission during Holy Week at St. John's, Larchmont.

The Bishop preached at 8:00 p. m. Monday through Thursday. Under the theme "The Passion and You," his sermon topics were: The Friend of All; The Enemy of All; The Test of All; The Food of All.

Also during Lent, the Bishop preached at a special service at St. James, Manhattan. Bishop Donegan was rector of St. James from 1933 to 1947, when he was elected Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese. He has preached at St. James every Lent since 1947.

On Good Friday, the Bishop preached at the three hour service at St. Thomas, Manhattan.

At the request of Radio Free Europe, the Bishop prepared an Easter message which was broadcast in five countries behind the Iron Curtain.

Another Easter message was written for the New York Journal American. The message, written at the newspaper's request, was published on Easter, along with one from a Roman Catholic leader. ■

Diocesan Convention Set For May 9 in Synod Hall

The 181st Convention of the Diocese of New York will be held on Tuesday, May 9, in Synod Hall, Cathedral Close, 110th St. and Amsterdam Ave., N. Y. C.

The business sessions of the Convention will open at 10:00 a.m., following a celebration of the Holy Communion in the Cathedral at 8:15 and breakfast in the undercroft of Synod House.

The Convention is the legislative body of the Diocese. It consists of all canonically qualified clergymen, three lay delegates with a combined one vote from each parish in union with the Convention, and one lay delegate with one-half vote from each organized mission.

All those not entitled to vote in the Convention are requested to take seats in the balcony. This is because of limited seating on the floor and to facilitate delegates entering and leaving their seats. ■

Executive Chaplain To Serve Hospitals For 14 Churches

The Protestant Chaplains Committee for East Midtown Hospitals has announced the appointment of the Rev. Carleton J. Sweetser as Executive Chaplain. The Episcopal clergyman will have charge of the work in New York Hospital, Memorial Hospital and Lenox Hill Hospital.

This is one of the first instances in New York City in which an informal, inter-denominational group has set up a full-time chaplaincy for voluntary (non-profit) hospitals.

The churches and individuals supporting the venture are:

The Bishop of New York and the following Episcopal churches: the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, St. Bartholomew's, Epiphany, Holy Trinity (East 88th St.), Heavenly Rest, and Resurrection; the following Presbyterian churches: Brick, Central, Madison Avenue and Fifth Avenue; Christ Methodist Church, All Souls' Unitarian Church, Park Avenue Christian Church and Central Park Baptist Church.

For more than ten years, clergy from nearby parishes have gone into the three midtown hospitals on regular schedule, taking the time from their parish work or on their days off. This work will continue; and the executive chaplaincy will make it more thorough and more continuous, especially in the case of patients hospitalized for long periods.

Chaplain Sweetser, who will assume his new duties July 1, has been in parish work and has been a chaplain at Bellevue Hospital. He is now associate director of the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Laymen's Work. ■

Good Morning — — — Cathedral

BY RUTH WEBER

MARGUERITE HANLEY spends her entire day seated in one place, but sometimes when five o'clock comes she feels as if she's been around the world.

Occasionally, such as when a call has been received from some distant city like London or Seattle, this feeling is understandable. But more often it's just the result of people. "People," declares Mrs. Hanley, who is the switchboard operator for the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and the Diocesan offices, "never let you have a dull moment."

Not long ago a man phoned to ask, quite seriously, "Where is St. Patrick buried?"

"I told him, too," says Mrs. Hanley, who has a good bit of an Irish twinkle in her blue eyes. When she was a little girl her mother taught her a jingle which goes: "Three Irish saints one grave do fill: Bridget, Patrick and Columkill." They're all buried in the little town of Down Patrick, Ireland.

Many people, of course, telephone to ask how to reach the Cathedral. "I always ask them where they are, and you'd be surprised how often they don't know," reported Mrs. Hanley. "Often these callers are strangers in New York, though," she explained with characteristic kindness.

One hectic morning, when the switchboard was flashing like a display of neon lights along Broadway, a woman who said she was calling from 125th Street (only a quarter mile away) wanted to know if it was raining.

"It was pouring pitchforks," said Mrs. Hanley. Actually it was the day of the late Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia's funeral at the Cathedral, and this woman said she thought she'd like to go "if it wasn't raining so hard down there."

Mrs. Hanley has been at her job for 18 years. She arrived one cold, snowy February in 1943 as a temporary substitute, expecting to stay only a week. But her predecessor failed to return, and apparently Mrs. Hanley, who was then Miss Murphy, so pleased the late Bishop Manning that he sent out a call for her.

She and her husband live in an apartment on East 83rd Street, and she is something of a rarity in New York City — a native who has never lived more than ten blocks away from the street where she was born. Mr. Hanley is a chauffeur for the Railway Express Co., and the couple have a summer place in Clinton, Conn., where they go for summer weekends and vacations.

With her relief operator, Miss Genevieve Platt, Mrs. Hanley handles 15 trunk lines and 78 working extensions. The New York Telephone Co., which surveys private switchboards from time to time, and has given the Cathedral operators "A" on all of their report cards, reports that 22 per cent of all the calls which are made to the Cathedral terminate with the operator. This means that Mrs. Hanley and staff are a great deal more helpful to the public than operators who simply refer every call to some department.

There are many requests for time of services, and Mrs. Hanley answers these herself. During Holy Week, for example, she must have said hundreds of times: "No, tickets are not necessary at the Cathedral on Easter, but we suggest you come a little early . . ."

Often people call to ask for the location of a church near them. Sometimes, "characters" says things like: "I want to know if you people believe in God."

"Yes, we do," Mrs. Hanley will reply.

"Well, I don't."

When she has time, she sometimes tries a little persuasion.

One day, just before closing time, a little girl's voice came piping over the wire. "I have to talk to my daddy. My mommy fell down the stairs, and she can't get up," the child kept repeating. But it was impossible to make her tell who her daddy was, or where she was calling from.

It took half an hour and considerable finesse, but, finally, with the help of the telephone company and the police department, the call was traced, and an ambulance dispatched to the house. The woman, who was pregnant, actually had fallen down the stairs, and without Mrs. Hanley's patience and her success at keeping the frightened child on the wire, obeying a few simple instructions, the woman would have lain there for hours and might have died.

Just before New Year's, Mrs. Hanley said, she talked a girl out of committing suicide.

As might be expected, a woman with such varied talents is honored with a variety of names. To many, she is either Mrs. Hanley, or still "Miss Murphy," but to others she is affectionately "Murph." The late Bishop Gilbert invariably called her "Murphy dear." To Bishop Wetmore, she is "Butch," and to Canon West she's "Murphy Durphy." Some like to call her "Marguerite." Only a few close friends dare to say "Maggie."

Probably Mrs. Hanley's success and popularity can be explained by her unflagging interest in people and their problems. She says her hobby is writing poetry, but actually the poetry is nearly always written to help a cause or give a friend or fellow worker a boost in some way or other. Several years ago a girl who was going to Liberia as a missionary confided that she was supposed to be taking trinkets to the natives as a good-will gesture, but she hadn't the faintest idea of how to go about collecting these things.

Mrs. Hanley wrote a pleasant poem, sent it around the office with a please-lend-a-hand note. The Liberians got their trinkets. ■

Episcopal Churchwomen

Annual Meeting And Ingathering Saturday, May 13

Two events of major importance to Episcopal Churchwomen in the Diocese of New York will take place on Saturday, May 13. One is the Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering; the other is the annual meeting, at which officers will be elected.

The Ingathering will be held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine at 10:30 o'clock. The preacher at the Communion service will be the Very Rev. John Vernon Butler, Dean of the Cathedral.

United Thank Offering Custodians from all over the Diocese will present the offerings of the women of their parishes.

This is the final ingathering of the Triennium, before the presentation of the triennial offering at the time of General Convention in September, in Detroit. These offerings of the women of our diocese will be presented with those of all other dioceses of the Church at that time.

"We have a very hopeful report from the Ingathering of last Advent," says Mrs. William E. Leidt, UTO Diocesan Chairman. "The amount is the largest ever given in Advent, and best of all, 9,895 women took part in it."

Following is the report by convocations:

| | No. of women | Amount |
|---|---|---|
| BRONX | 879 | $1,733.61 |
| DUTCHESS | 915 | 1,931.24 |
| HUDSON | 555 | 1,073.96 |
| MANHATTAN | 2911 | 12,655.10 |
| RAMAPO | 536 | 1,203.14 |
| RICHMOND | 631 | 1,296.45 |
| WESTCHESTER | 3468 | 11,707.46 |
| OPEN OFFERINGS | | 143.64 |
| TOTALS | 9,895 | $31,744.60 |

The morning service will be followed by luncheon at noon, and the annual meeting in Synod House starting at 1:00. Mrs. Gurney Williams, Diocesan President of Episcopal Churchwomen, will preside.

Bishop Donegan will be the guest speaker.

Since the offering designated for the Provincial Pledge was not taken in February due to cancellation of the Diocesan meeting, a special offering for this purpose will be taken at this annual meeting. ■

Diocesan Board To Meet in May, Implement Theme

Members of the Diocesan Board of Episcopal Churchwomen will hold their annual Spring Conference on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 23 and 24, at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park.

"The Ministry of the Laity" has been selected by the Board as the program theme for 1961-62. The Rt. Rev. J. Stuart Wetmore, Suffragan Bishop of New York, will be conference advisor.

Bishop Wetmore has been influential in developing the organization of Episcopal Laymen in this diocese which was brought into being by Bishop Donegan on January 3, 1961.

The 1961-62 edition of the Episcopal Churchwomen's Handbook will be ready for use at the Conference, and for parish reference in program planning. ■

ECW Supply Department

By Mrs. K. George Falk, Chairman Supply Department

The Supply Department is organized to provide for the expendable material needs of missions, schools, hospitals and other institutions in foreign, domestic, and diocesan fields.

This work has many by-products. It is the out-reach of our devotional life, the fruits of our Christian social relations, and a broadening of our horizons as we learn more about the people we are assisting. Episcopal Churchwomen of every diocese and missionary district participate in this endeavor.

The assignment for foreign and domestic fields, made by the General Division of Women's Work and planned by National Supply Secretary Miss Anne Kremer, is of primary concern. This includes requests for cash as well as goods. Each year this assignment contains fewer items that can be produced in parish work rooms and more which must be factory made. The Ready-Made Buying Fund provides the money needed for these articles.

Cash is also required to provide materials for groups of Churchwomen in the mission fields — women who are trained in tailoring and dressmaking and have both the time and the talent to make garments, but lack funds to purchase goods. In other instances, high duties and heavy shipping charges make it inadvisable to send materials, but supplies may be purchased to advantage locally. The Special Gift Fund takes care of these needs, as well as personal checks for workers in the mission field, and emergencies that come to the Department's attention.

When the mission assignments are complete, parish groups are asked to turn to the needs of our Diocesan institutions. Lists containing the specific needs of each institution are compiled and circulated. Many of these items are appropriate for groups that can do little sewing. Some items are ideal projects for shut-ins.

Good used clothing is always in demand by our own missions, as well as by Church World Service. Sewing may also be done for this organization.

Contrary to general belief, the scope of the Supply Department is far wider than sewing or knitting. The Supply Room, in Diocesan House, on the Cathedral grounds, is maintained for the benefit of the parishes. Operated by volunteers, it offers cut garments at wholesale prices, assembled layettes, wool for knitting, and material by the yard. There is work for volunteers to help lay material, draw patterns, cut, mark, assemble, and pack garments, and assist with the many clerical aspects of the work. The Supply Room is open every Tuesday and Thursday from 10:00 to 4:00 from October through April.

During 1960, 189 parishes in the Diocese contributed a total of $36,615 in sewing, knitting, and cash contributions for this work. ■

. . . in brief

■ TWO MEN have recently been elected to the board of managers of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. They are the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, rector of St. Thomas, Manhattan, and Mrs. Francis A. Goodhue, Jr., a member of St. Mark's, Mount Kisco.

■ RESIGNATION as the Bishop of Johannesburg, South Africa, has come from the Rt. Rev. Richard Ambrose Reeves, Anglican prelate deported last September by the South African government because of his opposition to apartheid. He resigned March 2 in London, where he is now living, after having been Bishop of Johannesburg since 1949.

Dr. Reeves will attend the General Convention of the Episcopal Church in September. A book by him, "Shooting at Sharpeville: The Agony of South Africa," was published recently.

The 61-year-old bishop receives no further salary from his former diocese. His brother Anglican bishops of South Africa, however, have voted to pay him a monthly amount from their own pockets.

■ THE SECOND ANNUAL Columbia University Festival of Religious Arts will end April 30. The festival, which is open to the public, features lectures, films, concerts and exhibits and presents the artistic fabric of the major religious faiths.

Co-chairman of the festival, which was first held last year for two weeks and which was held for two months this year, is the Rev. Jack C. White, assistant chaplain of Columbia and advisor to Episcopal students.

Among institutions participating are St. Paul's Chapel of Columbia University, St. Vladimir's Russian Orthodox Seminary, Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Jewish Theological Seminary of America, Union Theological Seminary, and the Interchurch Center. Sponsor of the festival is Columbia's Inter-Faith Council of Earl Hall.

■ EXCHANGE of parishes for a year between an Episcopal priest from Michigan and a Church of England priest from London will begin next October. This will be the second such arrangement under the Wates-Seabury plan of clergy exchange between the two countries. Begun last year, the exchange acquaints parish priests with each other's Church and country. While abroad, each man will use the other's house and car.

■ REPRESENTATIVES from a number of churches in Yonkers attended a special brotherhood Sabbath service at the city's Temple Emanu-el. St. Andrew's was among Episcopal churches represented at this Brotherhood Week observance.

■ TWO FACULTY MEMBERS at Union Theological Seminary's School of Sacred Music have been appointed associate professors. They are Alec Wyton, organist and choirmaster and headmaster of the Cathedral Choir School since 1954, and Vernon de Tar, organist-choirmaster at the Church of the Ascension, Manhattan, since 1939.

■ MOTHERING SUNDAY was observed at Holy Trinity, East 88th St., Manhattan. The fourth Sunday in Lent has for centuries been known in the Anglican Communion as Refreshment Sunday or Mothering Sunday, because of the themes in the Epistle and Gospel appointed for the Service of Holy Communion for that day.

The traditional Simnel Cake, baked by the rector and his son, was served to Holy Trinity's congregation after the 11:00 o'clock service. Years ago Simnel Cake was baked by children and, together with flowers, given to their mothers. The presentation usually followed a service at the mother church of the parish in which the child lived. This is the origin of our present Mother's Day. ■

Full Fellowships For Seminarians Entering Ministry to the Deaf

Theological fellowships for full seminary training for men to enter the deaf ministry of the Episcopal Church are now available.

Although there are 99 deaf congregations in 44 dioceses, only 17 men are trained to minister to them. To allay this shortage, the Conference of Church Workers among the Deaf, a cooperating agency of the National Council, will provide fellowship funds for hearing men or deaf men.

Applicants accepted may attend any Episcopal seminary. Fellowship funds will pay for room, board, tuition, fees, and books.

In order to apply, a man must be accepted by his bishop as a postulant for Holy Orders. It is hoped that trainees will make work among the deaf their life ministry, but they will be required to minister in this field for five years after graduation.

A request for a fellowship for the 1961-62 school year, together with nomination by the postulant's bishop, must be sent by this June 1 to the Rev. Douglas Slasor, chairman of the Recruitment and Training Committee, at Gallaudet College, Washington 2, D. C. For ensuing years, the request deadline will be the preceding Nov. 1. ■

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedal Church

In this monthly column, Canon West answers some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

If a communicant arrives late at a service, from what point of the Communion Service is it permissible to receive Communion?

The rubric before the Invitation certainly makes it clear that people who plan to receive the Holy Communion must be physically present in the church by that time. The rubric reads: "Then shall the Priest say to those who come to receive the Holy Communion, . . . "
There are on occasion times when people canot show up before this point of the service, but such occasions are always exceptional. Ideally, of course, the whole service is intended to be heard by everybody who plans to receive the Holy Communion. Medieval practice insisted that people must be present to hear the Gospel, but the legalistic medieval mind soon found a way around this by paying a deacon to say an additional Gospel at the end of the service. The reforming fathers and the liturgical movement would have no part of this.

Drop In At the Rectory and Let's Talk About Religion, Priest Advises

An item caught our attention as we were going through the scores of church bulletins and newsletters that we read each week. The item appeared in the Sunday bulletin of St. Stephen's Church, Woodlawn, in the Bronx. Here's the item in its entirety:

"As announced last week, anyone who is interested in talking about religion, the Church or Church history, etc., is invited to the rectory this evening at 7:30 or thereabouts. Come when you can, stay as long as you can. This is for those adults who are seriously interested in their Church, its teachings and its problems. If you have friends who do not belong to St. Stephen's but would be interested in attending this group, bring them along."

We called the rector of St. Stephen's, the Rev. E. Perrin Hayes, for further details.

When we talked to Fr. Hayes, he had had only one of these sessions, but it turned out to be so successful that he plans to hold them regularly on the second Sunday of each month.

As the notice about the first session implies, informality is the keynote. There is no agenda, no lecture, no list of questions submitted in advance. The idea is simply to give parishioners an opportunity to discuss religion. Coffee and cake add to the relaxed atmosphere.

Six people came to the first session, people of all age groups. The discussion ranged from the apparent conflict between evolution and the Bible (a question raised by a high school girl) to recent statements by Bishop Pike.

Fr. Hayes said that the idea for the informal discussion sessions was not original. He got it from a friend in the Diocese of Albany. Chief advantage of the plan is that it permits depth discussion of individual topics, discussion which might be too involved for a question and answer period after a lecture. It also creates a relaxed atmosphere that brings out questions from persons who might be reluctant to stand up and ask a question at a larger, more formal gathering. ■

New Cathedral Lights Excellent, Dean Says

New lighting in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine has proved so satisfactory that the Dean has given out details — with the thought that other churches in the Diocese might want to employ similar lighting.

The Dean, the Very Rev. John V. Butler, said that 40 projecto-light fixtures in the nave have been replaced with sealed beam floodlights. The new fixtures are 500-watt, half the old ones. Despite the fact that current consumption has been halved, lighting is vastly improved, due to better fixture design.

A further economy is effected in maintenance. The old bulbs cost $9.50 each and lasted 800 hours. The new sealed beam units cost $6.40 each and last 2,000 hours. ■

Princeton, Finger Lakes Conferences This Summer

Two annual conferences of special interest to Episcopal laymen have been scheduled for early summer. One is the Princeton Conference, which will be held at Princeton Seminary (N. J.) June 23-27; and the other is the Finger Lakes Conference, to be held at Hobart and William Smith Colleges, Geneva, N. Y., June 25 — July 1.

Theme of the Princeton Conference will be "The Christian Mission," with the keynote speaker the Rt. Rev. Daniel Corrigan, director of the Home Department of the Episcopal Church's National Council.

Four courses and workshops will be given, among them workshops on Christian education and Christian social relations. The Christian educaton workshop will be conducted by the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Jr., newly appointed director of the Department of Christian Education of the Diocese of New York. A workshop for Episcopal Churchwomen will be conducted by Mrs. Robert H. Howe, member of the General Division of Women's Work of National Council. She will be assisted by Mrs. Gurney Williams, president of Episcopal Churchwomen in the Diocese of New York.

The Princeton Conference begins at 2:30 on Friday, June 23, and ends at 1:30 on Tuesday, June 27. The fee, which includes registration, lodging and meals, is $30. Non-resident students pay $5.00, plus $1.50 for each meal.

The registrar is Mrs. J. Woodward Tallman, Edgewater Park, N. J. ( DUdley 7 - 1245 ). The Princeton Conference is sponsored by the Dioceses of New York, New Jersey and Newark and is open to clergymen and laymen.

The Finger Lakes Conference will be held in the heart of the Finger Lakes country on the campuses of two closely-related Episcopal colleges — Hobart and William Smith. The conference opens on the evening of Sunday, June 25, and closes at noon on Saturday, July 1.

The Diocese of New York is prominently represented on the faculty of the 1961 Finger Lakes Conference. The general lecturer will be the Rev. Frederick Q. Shafer, chaplain at Bard College at Annadale-on-Hudson. His topic will be "The Unique Position of Anglicanism." The conference chaplain will be the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, rector of St. Peter's, Westchester Square, the Bronx. The Rev. William Norgren, a clergyman of this Diocese who is director of Faith and Order Studies of the National Council of Churches, will give a course on "The Role of Anglicanism in the Coming 'Great Church.'"

Other courses to be offered are "Christian Behavior in Today's World," "Prayer Book and Worship," "Communicating the Gospel," and "Sensitivity to Human Needs."

Accordng to a spokesman for the Finger Lakes Conference, the conference is, "an appealing and balanced combination of worship, classes, fellowship and recreation."

Each day begins with Holy Communion. Most of the morning is occupied with the general lecture and classes. Most of each afternoon is free for athletics, trips and other recreation. In the evening there is a hymn sing and Evening Prayer, with a meditation by the chaplain.

Members of the Episcopal Church who are 18 years or older are eligible to attend. Provisions are made for married couples to room together. The fee is $42, which includes registration, room and board.

Descriptive folders are available from the Diocesan Department of Christian Education, parish clergy and the Episcopal Churchwomen. Inquiries may also be addressed to the conference registrar: Miss Charleen Young, 26 Forest Place, Fredonia, New York.

The Finger Lakes Conferences are sponsored by the Second Province and a number of the dioceses in New York State, including the Diocese of New York. On the Board of Governors there are from this diocese the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, the Rev. George W. Barrett and Mrs. K. George Falk. ■

Woman's Council To Hold Children's Camp Benefits

Five spring benefits have been scheduled by the Convocation Committees of the Episcopal City Mission Society's Woman's Council. Proceeds will be used to help send over 1,500 boys and girls to Elko Lake Camps, which are Mission Society camps in Liberty, N. Y., and to Edgewater Creche and Rethmore Home, a camping area in Englewood, N. J., that is affiliated with the Society.

These are children who truly need a camp experience and could not have it without the Society's sponsorship. Of those already registered, 532 are boys and girls from parishes in the most congested areas of the Diocese.

Bishop Donegan, president of the Mission Society, has written each rector in the convocations where benefits are being held. His letter says, in part:

"I believe you will agree with me that it is genuinely important that these youngsters be given this opportunity and experience in one of our Church's own camps, and that the $94,561 cost is a formidable responsibility. I hope that you and your parishioners will support the benefit in your convocation."

The various benefits in the convocations are as follows:

Westchester — Crystal Ball at "Brookside," Rye estate of Mrs. Ricardo C. Gonzales, Friday, May 26. The black tie dance, from 9:00 to 2:00, will be held under spacious canopies in the gardens. Continuous dance music will be provided by Barney Sorkin and his Orchestra, the band which always plays for Mrs. Gonzales' internationally-famous parties and at many Hollywood social functions. Tickets, $15.00 a couple, from Mrs. John Cathcart Evans, 112 Iden Ave., Pelham.

Richmond — Bridge, canasta and dessert in parish house of Christ Church, 76 Franklin Ave., New Brighton, on Friday, May 19, at 1:00 p. m. Tickets, $5.00, from Mrs. Joseph J. Scott, 223 Hylan Blvd., or from Mrs. George C. Hartmann, 20 Fairway Ave.

Bronx — Chicken dinner and Spring Dance at Mayer's Restaurant, 613 East 233rd St., on Thursday, May 25, at 7:00 p. m. In addition to dance music by Cass Carr and his Orchestra, there will be a West Indian singer. Tickets, $5.00, from Mrs. Albert D. Ketchum, 236 Bedford Park Blvd.

Ramapo — High tea at Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park, from 3:00 to 5:00 on Sunday, June 11. Will be in honor of the clergy of Ramapo Convocation. Hudson and Dutchess — Family picnic at Elko Lake Camps, Liberty, N. Y., on Sunday afternoon, June 25, just before the camps' opening. Further details later.

20 Churches to Observe Annual Day of Witness June 17, Bronx

Some 20 churches in the Diocese will participate in the eighth annual Day of Witness on Saturday, June 17, at St. Ann's Church, the Bronx. The theme will be "One Family in Christ."

The observance is sponsored by the Diocese as a tangible demonstration of the Church's vital concern for every individual. A street procession of bands, floats and marching units is followed by a service of Holy Communion.

This year's Day of Witness will be the first to be held in the Bronx. The observance originated in Manhattan, was moved to the Cathedral, and now is being held at St. Ann's to strengthen a feeling of neighborhood "witness."

An innovation this year will be the distribution of fliers in English and Spanish to homes throughout the neighborhood after the procession. Every participating parish has been asked to have a corps of laymen ready to make these visits. The handbills will contain the names of all Episcopal churches in the vicinity, their hours of services and a brief explanation of what the Episcopal Church is.

Units of the procession will form on St. Ann's Avenue shortly before 10 a.m. under the direction of the Rev. David Kern, priest-in-charge of St. Ann's, and coordinator of the observance.

The marchers will proceed along St. Ann's and Brook Avenues, past the Millbrook Houses, through several side streets and back to the church. Bishop Boynton will officiate at the service. ■

Parishioners Pay Visits To Neighborhood Homes As Part 7-Day Crusade

Parishioners at the Church of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan, made hundreds of personal visits to homes in their West Side area recently as part of a week-long evangelistic crusade conducted by three captains of the Church Army, U. S. A.

Capt. Thomas Wheat, who was in charge of the project, trained the churchgoers to conduct the visitations and invite attendance at the crusade services.

These services were held nightly at 7:30, beginning April 30, and were climaxed by a street meeting in Central Park on May 6. Capt. William Phy and Capt. William Eckroth assisted Capt. Wheat. The Rev. James A. Gusweller is the rector. ■

The Bishop's Message

At its meeting last month, the National Council of our Church restated the action of General Convention of 1949, which resolved that "we stand unalterably against the use of Federal or State funds for the support of private, parochial or sectarian schools," and it was further resolved that "dioceses and parishes be urged to study and take appropriate action in respect to Federal aid to education in the light of the foregoing action of General Convention."

The pressing question as to the place of religion in public education and the problem of the legality and rightness of Federal aid to private and parochial schools calls for the most thoughtful study by all people of spiritual integrity and good will.

I am convinced that secular education needs supplementation and integration with religious faith and nurture if it is to realize its purpose under God. I urge the continuation, expansion and strengthening of such experiments as released-time religious training.

In seeking to achieve the dual purpose of excellence in educational attainment and growth in faith and moral character, the nation's intellectual and religious leaders should explore every avenue of cooperation that appears consistent with the principle that public funds not be used for religious indoctrination.

It is my judgment that the educational problem can and should be dealt with on the local level in every part of the country. If we are to preserve the principles of spiritual and intellectual freedom which are at the center of our democracy, the point of view of no single group can prevail.

My suggestion would be that the educational leaders of all faiths in each and every community across the nation meet in a series of conversations designed to establish a program to bring about an orderly development of the dual purposes of excellence in educational attainment and growth in faith and moral character, under the Constitution.

If such an approach were made in a spirit of mutual trust, humility, and patience, ways would be found to accomplish this objective which do not in any way jeopardize the fundamental American principle of separation of church and state.

Each one of us must accept our share of the responsibility for the spiritual and moral nurture of our young people as they develop intellectually. We cannot leave the matter to be decided on purely secular grounds, nor can we allow the spiritual nurture of our young people to become the center of a public controversy to be settled only on the basis of political expediency.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

TO SING OR TO MUMBLE

A Choirmaster Faces a Familiar Complaint: "Why Don't We Sing Hymns We Know?"

By Vernon de Tar

"THE CONGREGATION is requested to participate heartily in all the musical portions of the Service that are found in the Hymnal, and in all spoken responses and Amens."

This request is printed regularly in the bulletin given to worshipers at the Church of the Ascension. It's carried at the head of the Order of Service.

"Why," you might ask, " is such a request necessary?" Because, with a few exceptions, Episcopal congregations in this area do not participate heartily, do not share fully in the services.

Some of us feel that the Church still suffers from the effect of a long period when not enough was done to encourage the congregation to participate in all the parts of the service which are its responsibility. Too often the choir has been left to carry on a dialogue with the clergy, the people following more or less inaudibly, except in the hymns. And even in the hymn singing, few permit themselves to be heard by their pewmates!

Will you agree that full and hearty participation by the entire congregation would give our Liturgy the exciting and inspiring quality that has always been intended for it? Let us consider how such participation can be achieved.

At the Church of the Ascension, we are using several approaches. In addition to the "request" noted above, we list the Prayer Book and Hymnal pages for every part designated for the congregation. "But this is not unusual," you say. "What else?" The rector, the Rev. Dr. James W. Kennedy, frequently admonishes the congregation to respond and sing with greater conviction; and the choirs provide leadership in the spoken portions, as well as those that are sung.

What should the congregation be expected to sing? Hymns, chants, versicles and Amens (when these and the prayers are intoned) and portions of the Communion Service taken from the Hymnal. Some parishes go beyond this basic list to learn additional settings of the Communion Service.

"Aren't chants too difficult for the congregation to learn?" Without teaching and practice sessions, perhaps. Many parishes rely on a chant being learned by hearing and singing it Sunday after Sunday; and if the organist and choir will forego the subtleties of "performance" and play and sing it "straight," much can be accomplished. But more effective is the holding of a few pre-service or post-service rehearsals, when the simple, basic rules of chant are explained and applied to a few verses of a canticle.

When Anglican chant is used, it is desirable to sing the same chant settings for several consecutive Sundays (until a repertory has been built); but it is deadly to sing one setting for ever and ever! The imagined difficulties of Plainchant are greatly exaggerated by those who must "harmonize" and have their music in march rhythm.

"How can we sing hymns heartily when we don't know them?"

One might as well ask a teenager or a college student how he can "bat out" the latest hit tunes. A ready answer might be, "Get a gang around the piano* and learn them!" Then why not do the same with hymns? But let us also do it in the church — "around the organ."

Just how do you go about this?

At Ascension, we have a HYMN OF THE MONTH, a plan used by many churches across the country and which we have used more or less consistently for several years. One of the lesser known hymns, appropriate to the season, is introduced by the rector

Mr. de Tar is organist-choirmaster at the Church of the Ascension, Manhattan, a position he has held for 22 years. He is also an associate professor in the School of Sacred Music at Union Theological Seminary.

in the course of his announcements. The congregation is asked to follow attentively while the choir sings the first stanza. Then choir and congregation sing it through from the beginning. (The choir sings it in unison, so that the melody will be learned first.) This hymn is sung again in the services for the following two or three weeks and occasionally in the ensuing months to strengthen its place in the parish's hymn repertory. A HYMN OF THE MONTH from last year may turn up at a "hymn practice" a week before being used formally in a service.

Learning a "new" hymn would cease to be a problem if we were to sing it or hear it as often as we are subjected to new "show tunes" on radio and television. (In this connection might be mentioned the Columbia record "Praise to the Lord," which consists of 24 of the greatest hymns from our Hymnal. The record, a project of the Episcopal Church's Joint Commission on Church Music, was made by the choirs of General Theological Seminary and the Church of the Ascension.)

At Ascension, hymns are played and sung from "moderately full" to "all stops out" — on a climactic stanza. We try to protect the worshiper from fearing the effect of his voice on his neighbors. Our "new" hymns, which, incidentally, may be drawn from any of the five or more centuries of hymnody, do not crowd out the familiar hymns. But, as one of our parishioners recently exclaimed, "After singing Hyfrydol (#347) who would ever want to sing Beecher (#304) ?"

When a new hymn is introduced, a brief account of the origin of text and tune is printed in the leaflet (usually culled from our fine Hymnal 1940 Com-

A rector in northern Westchester who has been appealing for the same kind of enthusiasm suggested by Mr. de Tar's article, likes to tell this story about a colleague who had just said to his congregation, "I want you especially to sing the Amens."

He paused. "Do you know what Amen means?"

Now, most people know that the word signifies "so be it." But the rector's eye was attracted to a small boy who was waving his hand excitedly.

"Amen," said the youngster, "means 'me too!' "

The clergyman smiled.

"Yes," he agreed, "I guess it really does."

panion). Frequently, all the hymns, together with pertinent information, are listed under the heading "Hymns for Advance Preparation: read the words, hum the tunes." We have several parishioners who, when they receive the leaflet in the mail during the week, get out their Hymnals and practice the hymns. Similarly, interesting facts about the anthem and the organ prelude and postlude are given, in the latter case with emphasis on the function of organ music as a part of worship. No, organ music was not intended to accompany the noise of arriving and departing congregations or to fill up silences in the service . . . but that is another chapter.

In all the foregoing we have been speaking of the regular parish and of the morning services. The singing of hymns at these services has been helped also by the extraordinary singing of the congregations present at the monthly Services of Music, when great choral masterworks are sung. The participation of large numbers of musicians, music students, and music lovers, together with the use of hymns whose quality (text and tune) matches and blends with the works being sung, results in an exciting experience of worship through hymns.

We have been working at these things for several years and still have far to go, but we are quite happy about our steadily increasing sense of audible corporate worship "in all the musical portions of the Service found in the Hymnal, and in all spoken responses and Amens." And the singing of our congregation in hymns and chants is often singled out for mention by visitors to the services. ■

West Side Parish Will Build $200,000 Community Center

The Church of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, 24 West 84th Street, Manhattan, expects to start building a $200,000 Community Center in June.

The new center will replace two old brownstone houses next to the church which have been used for an educational and recreational program in one of New York City's most overcrowded neighborhoods.

Blake and Neski, architects, have designed a two-story and basement structure which probably will be faced with sandstone to match the church. Classrooms and a gymnasium will be located in the basement. The street floor will contain a library, nursery, meeting room and housing clinic offices. The rectory and a conference room will be on the top floor.

A fund drive was begun about a year ago. To date, cash and pledges total $105,000. While the drive continues, work will start.

Rector of the parish is the Rev. James A. Gusweller, who several years ago battled New York City officials over housing conditions in his area.

For the past four years, Father Gusweller has conducted a weekly housing clinic and daily after-school classes for children. He has offered the facilities of the church basement and two adjoining houses as a neighborhood meeting place. He frankly describes the mid West Side as "a neighborhood with problems."

Because the neighborhood is drab, "The church must endeavor to offer some small measure of beauty to the lives of so many who are surrounded by the sordid atmosphere," he points out.

If St. Matthew and St. Timothy is to continue and enlarge its work, better physical facilities must be provided, Father Gusweller adds. The new center will be the only one of its kind in a wide area. ■

Elect New Convocation Officers

Five new deans were elected and two were re-elected at the annual spring convocation meetings held simultaneously through the Diocese on April 20.

Most of the convocations also elected a secretary, treasurer and members of the executive committee. General theme of all meetings was "Proclaiming the Gospel to the Whole World," and the featured speakers described the Church's missionary outreach in many lands.

The convocations are the seven geographical subdivisions of the Diocese. They are made up of clergymen and laymen from each parish and mission. Duty of the dean is to assist the Bishop in the promotion of the common tasks of the Diocese within the convocation, and to stimulate the work of all departments of the Diocesan Council. The dean, who must be rector of a parish, becomes a member of the Board of Managers of the Diocese's Department of Missions upon his election. The term of office for a dean is two years; and he may be re-elected for an additional term.

Approximately 1,000 clergymen and laymen attended this year's spring meetings. The new convocation officers are as follows:

Richmond: The Rev. Andrew C. Long, of Christ Church, elected dean; the Rev. Paul E. Parker and William Sorensen, executive committee members, for two years. An estimated 50 persons attended the meeting at the Church of St. Andrew, where the Rev. Charles H. Clark, sub-warden of St. Peter's Hall, Singapore, was speaker.

Bronx: The Rev. Robert W. Cromey, of Holy Nativity, elected dean; the Rev. E. Perren Hayes, secretary, for one year; Rennie George, treasurer, for one year; the Rev. Basil Law and Leonard Holmstrom, executive committee members, for two years, and John Macauley, for one year. The meeting, at St. Simeon's Church, was attended by about 150 persons and the speaker was the Rev. Samuel Van Culin, former missionary in Hawaii, now general secretary of Laymen International.

Westchester: The Rev. Kenneth E. Mackenzie, of Ascension, Mount Vernon, elected dean; Richards J. Bards, treasurer, for one year; Raymond A. Youmans, secretary, for one year; the Rev. G. Clayton Melling and Peter Peyser, executive committee members, for two years. An estimated 250 clergymen and laymen attended the meeting, held at Good Shepherd, Granite Springs. The speaker was the Rev. Rowland J. Cox, assistant secretary of the Overseas Department, National Council of the Episcopal Church. He is a former missionary in Alaska.

Ramapo: The Rev. Douglas M. Glasspool, of St. James, Goshen, elected dean; the Rev. George F. Regas, secretary, for one year; Frederick I. Emery, Jr. elected treasurer for one year; the Rev. Benson B. Fisher and Maxwell Moore, executive committee members, for two years and the Rev. Leonel L. Mitchell to fill one year of an unexpired term. The meeting, at All Saints, Valley Cottage, was attended by about 125 persons, and the speaker was the Rev. David B. Reed, a former missionary in Colombia who is now assistant to the director, Overseas Department, National Council.

Dutchess: The Rev. Alfred H. Whisler, Jr., of Zion, Wappingers Falls and Zion, New Hamburgh, elected dean; the Rev. Leonard F. Neils, secretary, one year; Clifford Nuhn, treasurer, one year; the Rev. Charles L. Pedersen and George Darrington, executive committee members, two years. The meeting was held at St. James Church, Hyde Park, where 185 persons heard the Rev. Armando Cuellar, who on July 1 will become Archdeacon of Costa Rica and director of the Spanish Language Publications Center in San José.

Manhattan: The Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, of St. James, re-elected dean; John E. Booth, treasurer, two years; the Rev. Clifford S. Lauder and the Rev. Richard E. Gary, executive committee members, two years. Following a dinner, attended by about 150 at the Seamen's Church Institute, the speaker was the Rev. Theodore Eastman, executive secretary, The Overseas Mission Society, Mount St. Alban, Washington, D. C.

Hudson: The Rev. Colley W. Bell, Jr., of St. John's, Cornwall, re-elected dean; the Rev. David Arnold, secretary, one year; Earle Houghtaling, Jr., treasurer, one year; the Rev. Wendell Tamburro and Albert S. MacDowell, executive committee members, two years. The meeting was held at the Church of the Holy Innocents, Highland Falls, where an estimated 80 persons attended a dinner and heard Bishop Donegan speak. The missionary speaker was the Rev. Charles H. Long, Jr., former missionary in China and secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation in Geneva. ■

ECW Handbook Completed, Ready For Distribution

The 1961-62 edition of the Handbook for Episcopal Churchwomen is now available. This is the third consecutive year that the Handbook has been published.

Included in the booklet are suggestions for integrating the program of local ECW branches with that of the parish as a whole.

The Diocesan ECW theme for the coming year, as explained in the Handbook, is "The Ministry of the Laity." The theme offers a focus for the laity to share with the clergy in the broader privileges and duties of worship, and in work and witness. It is recognized, of course, that there are specific offices which the laity cannot perform, as outlined in the Book of Common Prayer.

It continues to be the recommendation of the Diocesan Board of Episcopal Churchwomen, who are responsible for the preparation and presentation of the Handbook, that the rector is the authority and leader in establishing the parish program. The Handbook is simply another tool for uniting and strengthening the whole parish effort. Officially, it is the voice of the women of the Church.

It has been the experience of those who prepared the Handbook that program planning under the leadership of the clergy, with representatives of all groups in the parish participating, is usually positive assurance that a successful parish program will evolve.

Since it is the express purpose of Episcopal Churchwomen, as stated in their Constitution, to: "unite the women of the Diocese of New York in a program of worship, study, service, gifts and fellowship which will deepen and strengthen their own spiritual lives, and lead them into service for the Church in the Parish, the Community, the Diocese, the Nation, and the World," it is obvious that much pertinent material, applicable to a variety of ages and interests, is available.

It may be that a committee headed "Parish Service Committee" will include some of the duties suggested in the Handbook for parish Christian social relations chairmen, supply chairmen, etc. These Diocesan commitments should be coordinated within the framework of the total parish program.

In addition to supplying program suggestions, and outlining the duties of department chairmen in the branches, the close cooperation existing between department chairmen and the Diocesan departments which their work parallels, is defined. There is also considerable information of general interest to all women in the Diocese. The Handbook has been useful from year to year in carrying out the basic ECW responsibility: furthering the Church's mission.

All convocation chairmen have a supply of Handbooks for sale, or they may be obtained from the treasurer: Mrs. Harold M. Lindstedt, 242 East 19th Street, New York 3, N. Y.

The cost is 25 cents per copy. ■

Boys follow a standard curriculum, with a foreign language program beginning in the fifth grade. The School conducts the fall and spring testing programs of the Educational Records Bureau and the Independent Schools Education Board.

Throughout the life of the School, emphasis is placed upon the Christian perspective, instilling in boys attitudes and beliefs which will help them, as they mature, to realize more fully Christian ideals.

President Williams Calls Upon Women To Step Up Volunteer Work Program

By Mrs. Gurney Williams
Diocesan President

Demands for the time and talents of the women of our Church are many, and pressing; but our first interest has always been in the mission work of the Church. It is, therefore, fitting that we accept the challenge offered by the ever-increasing need for volunteer workers in all phases of our Church's work: with men, women and children who need to know the personal concern of Christian men and women.

All departments through which the Episcopal Churchwomen's program is channeled are concerned with some phases of volunteer activity. But we are also grateful for the opportunity for personal service and witness provided in the program of the Episcopal City Mission Society through its Woman's Council. In each convocation of our Diocese we are building up an auxiliary force that promises to be a truly vital factor in future plans that involve volunteer efforts.

The total volunteer program in all its manifold phases can use the dedicated services and talents of every woman in the Diocese. All are eagerly enlisted. Due to the stimulus of our Woman's Council, our concern in the Society's program has been extended beyond our long-standing interest in the boys and girls at St. Barnabas House, and the Port and Immigration Service, to include the camp programs; and most especially, the ministry of the Society's 32 chaplains in the public institutions in our Diocese. Aid to these chaplains includes visiting with the sick, the aged, prisoners, helping with clerical work, and teaching.

Bishop Donegan, president of our Episcopal City Mission Society, in his address to the Woman's Council last fall, summed up the basic challenge of volunteer work. He said, "Remember that in every call you make, and with every person you see, you are representatives of our Lord and of our Church." Isn't that what it is all about? ■

. . . in brief

■ ONE OF THE BY-PRODUCTS of this year's exceptionally rough winter has been a project by parishioners at St. Andrew's Church, Poughkeepsie, to transport Episcopal students at Vassar College to church. There is no bus service in Poughkeepsie on Sundays.

Using their own cars, members of St. Andrew's have worked out a schedule to pick up Vassar students in time for both the 8:00 and 10:00 a.m. services.

The idea has captured the interest of two other Poughkeepsie Episcopal churches, Christ Church, and St. Paul's, and next fall all three parishes expect to set up a regular bus service for the students.

■ THE REV. JOHN A. BELL, rector of Incarnation, Manhattan, has been re-elected president of Youth Consultation Service of the Diocese of New York. He will serve a one-year term.

■ TRIBUTE for his many services to the community was paid the Rev. John M. Mulligan, formerly rector of All Angels Church, Manhattan, at a reception and buffet supper given by the League of West Side Organizations on May 3.

Mr. Mulligan was honored in recognition of his appointment as director of the Seamen's Church Institute. Bishop Donegan and James Felt, chairman of the New York City Planning Commission, were speakers at the event, which took place at the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue, 30 West 68th Street.

The former rector had been co-chairman of the League, a coordinating body of more than 40 organizations and institutions devoted to the cause of community betterment. He resigned when his new position took him out of the neighborhood.

■ TWO COMMUNICANTS of Holy Nativity, Bronx, have been accepted as postulants for Holy Orders. They are Fred G. Coleman, Jr., and H. William Benson. ■

Ruth Weber Named Managing Editor Of This Magazine

Miss Ruth E. Weber, a newspaper reporter and editor for 15 years, has been appointed managing editor of The Bulletin of the Diocese of New York. She will report to Joseph B. Martin, who will continue as editor.

Ruth Weber

Miss Weber became managing editor April 17 and did much of the writing in this issue of the magazine.

The new managing editor has been with The Daily Argus, Mount Vernon, N. Y., for ten years. For the past four years she has been school and religion editor and prior to this was Pelham reporter. She has also been a reporter for The Bronxville Reporter and assistant woman's page editor for The Binghamton Press.

A resident of Mount Vernon, Miss Weber belongs to the Church of the Ascension, where she is soprano soloist.

In addition to her editorial work, she attends Columbia University, where she is a candidate for a bachelor's degree in English literature.

After the announcement of her leaving The Daily Argus, the Mount Vernon Board of Education adopted a resolution citing Miss Weber for "standards and codes of ethics of the highest type, making her an invaluable reporter, accurate in her statements and painstaking in her assignments."

The Bulletin, which has a circulation of 43,000, is sent free to all Episcopalians in the Diocese who contribute to their church.

Employment of a managing editor will make it possible for the magazine to give more extended coverage in the Diocese. In addition, it will permit the editor, who is also the Diocese's director of promotion, to devote more time to public relations for the Diocese and the individual parishes. ■

the Question is . . .

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedral Church

In this monthly column, Canon West answers some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

Can a church form a committee to chose a rector, and do so without consulting with the Bishop?

If I understand the question correctly, the answer is, "No." A vestry has a perfect right to appoint a committee to consider appropriate candidates and bring their names before the wardens and vestry, but it is the whole official body itself which must "choose" a priest to be elected. The election itself, according to Diocesan Canon (22), cannot take place "until the name of the Clergyman whom it is proposed to elect has been made known to the Bishop, and sufficient time, not exceeding thirty days, has been given him to communicate with the Vestry or the Board of Trustees; and such other action shall be taken as may be required by the Canon of the General Convention in that behalf."

The Canon (47) of General Convention is even more specific: if the Bishop sends such a communication, within the time specified, it must be "considered by the Parish or Vestry at a meeting duly called and held for that purpose."

Even after election, written notice, signed by the churchwardens, must be sent to the Ecclesiastical Authority of the Diocese, and if he is satisfied that the man elected is a duly qualified minister, and has accepted the office, then the written notice is sent to the Secretary of Convention for recording. Such record is the determining evidence of the relation between the minister and the parish.

One is reminded of the jaundiced advice of an aged churchwarden, "Be kind to your rector. It may be hard, but it's easier than getting a new one!" ■

Put a Boy in the Right Uniform And His Whole Viewpoint Changes

Tennis star Althea Gibson chats with Archdeacon and Mrs. McEvoy. Miss Gibson was chosen as queen of the annual review of the New York City Mission Society Cadet Corps. Two churches of the Diocese have units in the corps, St. Ann's, Bronx, and St. Andrew's, Manhattan.

Let's admit it, a khaki uniform is drab, but it has a lot of glamor.

In fact, it has so much glamor that growing numbers of youngsters in New York City's changing neighborhoods are turning away from the flamboyant scarlet and magenta of gangland jackets to the Army-like gear of the Cadet Corps sponsored by the New York City Mission Society.

At the annual Cadet Corps review this spring, the precision, timing and discipline of the Senior Air Cadets of St. Ann's Episcopal Church, the Bronx, won for the unit of boys a big shiny trophy which is one of their prized possessions.

St. Ann's, and St. Andrew's, Manhattan, were the two Episcopal churches competing in the review, along with other churches representing almost every denomination. Queen for the day was tennis star Althea Gibson, who had been selected by the entire corps of 1300 cadets.

Miss Gibson, community relations representative of the Ward Baking Company, is also an Episcopalian. When in the city, she attends St. Philip's Church, Manhattan. Among clergy who attended the review as guests of honor was the Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, Archdeacon of the Diocese of New York, and Mrs. McEvoy.

Archdeacon McEvoy, since his primary responsibility is among the urban churches, has been an enthusiastic supporter of the Mission Society's Cadet Corps.

"We think that the Corps Band will be in the annual Day of Witness parade on June 17," he said hopefully. This drum and bugle corps is a real spit and polish outfit.

At the two Episcopal Churches, St. Ann's and St. Andrew's, as in other churches where the Cadet Corps units are flourishing, boys from ten years upwards hold drills, take hiking trips. But before they are ready for any of these things, they take a pledge which reads, "I pledge myself to make an honest effort to build a better life, a life patterned after the Master, and to help others to do the same; always to do my duty, to be ready for service, loyal to my friends and reverent to God."

This is a far cry from the spirit which leads to neighborhood "rumbles" with switchblades, and although certainly not all boys in densely populated New York are gang members, it is felt that the Cadet Corps represents a powerful pull in the opposite direction.

The Rev. David Kern, priest-in-charge of St. Ann's, reports that some of his cadets were involved in dope "and other things" before they joined the unit. Thirty youngsters from eight to twelve comprise St. Ann's Junior Cadets, and another 45 are in the snappy Senior Air Cadets, who wear beige uniforms, trimmed with blue, like those of the Air Force, rather than the regulation khaki.

St. Ann's is the only Air Cadet unit in the city, and, in fact, is the only church which divides its membership into "junior" and "senior." The trophy these boys won was for "general all-round proficiency in marching," and to win it, they spent many weeks planning intricate steps, patterns and formations. Then they hit upon the idea of a "silent drill" — no verbal commands, simply hand signals from the leader.

As their name suggests, the Air

Cadets are crazy about airplanes. They build model planes; they learn to identify various kinds of aircraft and they visit airports to find out how the big flight cruisers are put together, flown and maintained.

Commandant of the city-wide Cadet Corps is Wilbert Burgie, an Episcopal layman who attends St. Gabriel's Church, Hollis, L. I. He is a young, rather well-built man with unbounded enthusiasm and a manner that immediately inspires confidence — especially among boys.

Some 12 years ago, while serving as a group worker for the City Mission Society, he conceived the idea of starting a group that would fill, as the gangs were doing, boys' evident need for a corporate body providing leadership, security, activity and status. But, Mr. Burgie reasoned, the principle of the gang was all wrong. He would set up a corps whose principle was all right.

His idea immediately caught on, and the movement is steadily growing. Four new units have been created since only last October. The Spanish-speaking neighborhoods, in particular, appear to welcome the Corps. Activities are geared to facilities at each church and the interests of each neighborhood, although Mr. Burgie sets up an overall plan of action.

One of the things he insists upon is that the corps perform some kind of service to the church which sponsors it. In giving service, the boys develop a sense of belonging to the church and a feeling or responsibility for its care. This apparently has worked, because in many parishes today former teenage gang members can be found polishing brass, sweeping floors, and mopping up the Sunday School room.

Father Kern says that the entire corps at St. Ann's Church turned out on Palm Sunday to receive a blessing, and that — and this is what makes his heart glad — more and more members are joining the parish as active, working communicants.

12 Foreign Students Visit Homes, Attend Services at Nativity

Parishioners at Holy Nativity, the Bronx, were hosts to 12 foreign students from India, England, Spain, Algeria, South Africa and Turkey on Sunday, April 23.

The visitors attended the 10:00 a.m. service, at which the Rev. G. Duncan Buchanan, of Natal, South Africa, preached. Father Buchanan, a part-time assistant at Holy Nativity, is studying at General Theological Seminary.

The guests, all of whom are attending schools in New York City, met their hosts at a coffee hour following the service and went to their homes for Sunday dinner. After brief sightseeing, they returned to the church for discussion and entertainment.

The Rev. Robert W. Cromey, rector, said the visit was planned to stimulate understanding between New Yorkers and foreign students and to give the students a chance to see American churches and homes on the "grass roots" level. ■

Bring the Family To Elko June 25

Details are now available on the family picnic at Elko Lake Camps on Sunday, June 25. The picnic, mentioned in the April Bulletin, will be sponsored by the Hudson and Dutchess Convocations of the Episcopal City Mission Society. The Society operates the camps.

From 1:00 to 5:00 p.m., the Camps' beautiful 1,000-acre wooded tract will be open to families in the Diocese just prior to the Camps' official opening. Families are asked to bring their own picnic baskets, though coffee and punch will be provided. The Camps' 54-acre private lake will be open for swimming and boating. Dressing rooms will be available.

The Elko Lake Camps, one for boys and one for girls, are at Parksville, near Liberty. Parksville is on Route 17, which can be reached from the New York State Thruway via Exit 16 (Harriman). ■

Now . . . Father Knows Best

by Robert Young

When our first daughter was born, my wife, Betty, and I prided ourselves on being enlightened parents. Our children were to have something we called "Christian Standards," by which I supposed we meant ethics, and we decided each would be christened in a non-sectarian church. But no church ties would be forced upon them: they were to be allowed to choose for themselves.

A Baptist in His Youth

I realize now that it would have been difficult to offer them any other course, since we had never made a choice ourselves. I had been accepted into the Baptist Church at the age of ten, but the only impressions my memory retained were the rite of immersion, the ability to recite the Books of the Old Testament, and a good attendance record at Sunday School for about two years. A flood in Kentucky had destroyed the church records in the town where my wife was born and her mother could never rightly remember whether Betty was baptized a Congregationalist or a Methodist.

As a young married couple we didn't worry about this, for we attended church only at the fashionable times of the year, Christmas and Easter. But we did want our children to have those Christian standards!

Four Daughters Christened

Thus, each of our four daughters in order of their appearance — Carol Ann, Barbara, Betty Lou, Kathy — were christened in a lovely ceremony right in our living room by the minister of the Beverly Hills Community Church.

Once the girls were christened, we followed point two of our plan. Their mother and I tried to surround them with a closely knit, loving family atmosphere; we heard their prayers regularly, for we were praying people ourselves.

"Choose Your Own Religion"

"You are," I told my daughters proudly, "free to choose your own religion." But I was as foolish as I was wrong. No real choice was being offered them, no habit of church going was being developed.

Fourteen years — fourteen long years — elapsed before any one of the children decided upon anything or even mentioned a specific church.

Then, from boarding school, Carol Ann wrote us a letter. Would we mind, she inquired, if she joined the Episcopal Church? "It isn't sudden," wrote Carol Ann. "I've always had a tremendous respect for our chaplain, and I must admit it was his faith that made him what he is. So I began studying the service, and it gives me something I need." A few weeks later we attended her confirmation.

Whole Family Goes To Church

During that summer vacation, each Sunday while mother and father and all her younger sisters slept, our fifteen-year-old daughter rose quietly and went to All Saints Church in Beverly Hills. Then, out of deference to Carol Ann, Betty and I began attending with her. The younger girls, still free to make their choice, now chose to get up and go to church school. In one short summer we became a church-going family!

At first I, personally, felt strange. I had not been to church in a long time. Carol Ann's return to school left us on our own, yet still we went. Why? Because it began to seem important, that's why.

Then, one Sunday morning an adult confirmation class was announced. Here again my ignorance was evident. Somehow, I had thought that after one had reached a certain age one was too old to be confirmed . . . nor was I sure I wanted permanent membership.

Parents Become Members

As Betty and I attended the class we began to learn things, to feel a part of the group, and when the instruction period ended we went right on into full membership. We had made our decision.

Our three remaining daughters were still offered their freedom of choice, but with this difference — our own choice had given them a real choice, church-going had become a reality.

How can you teach a child the necessity to make a choice if you haven't found it necessary to make one yourself? Talk does not place values anywhere. If we wanted our children to place God in the center of their lives, to have lasting Christian standards, then worship was not a question of offering them an opportunity.

No Dramatic Conversion

Has being a church going family made a difference in our lives? We definitely feel it has.

There has been no dramatic sinner-to-saint conversion. Fortunately we

letters to the editor

From G. F. Zabriskie, Manhattan

The February Bulletin contained an article by Mr. Alec Wyton, choirmaster of the Cathedral, on "Why Do We Sing Hymns?" Many of us laymen, while musically illiterate, might agree with him on the corny quality of some of the alleged eight favorite hymns, most of which have never been in our hymnals, but would disagree with some of his other premises.

It is true that the singing of a hymn is a congregational act but, like others, it is an act not only of praise but of prayer. And while hymns should of course be works of high quality, they should also be compositions that the people can and will sing. This includes not only hymns of purely corporate praise but those that mean something to and satisfy a want of the individual member of the congregation who is supposed to sing them, which he can only do in church. It also includes hymn tunes of some familiarity, melody and harmony, though to modern musicians such things may be distasteful. Many of them might condemn "Now the Day Is Over" . . . "Lead Kindly Light" . . . or "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go" as mere schmaltz, especially if the parts were sung as written. Yet those hymns express the feelings — emotions if you will — of the people who sing them and have melodies and harmonies they can and will sing if permitted to. Many of our people still prefer Barnby, Dykes and Sullivan to the modernists and also want the hymns, except for the great Gregorian ones, sung in harmony, which seems to be anathema today. To many of us, too, some of the modern pointing of the chants is preposterous, such as the current versions of "speak good of his name" and "in the house of his servant David."

Let our choirs make concert numbers of their anthems and even of their Te Deums, but with due respect to Mr. Wyton, it is submitted that part of the purpose of a hymn is to "get the congregation into the act" and into taking a small but to them meaningful part in the service, and if they are confronted with some tuneless unfamiliar tune, that part of the service falls flat.

Tastes in music change, as in everything else, and some day the theories and practices of our Church's musical authorities will change again. ■

Viewpoint

"There is growing evidence . . . that films, radio and television are increasingly replacing older standard-setters and opinion-makers. The school, the home, the church share the danger of waning influence, especially upon the young.

"Far too often, if this question is brought up in a group of church leaders, it is brushed aside with comments such as, "I never watch television," or "I haven't been to a movie in two years." If, as sometimes seems true, the majority of church leadership comes from the very small percentage of people who are not influenced by the mass media, this may be further evidence of our loss of touch with the world where most people live."

by
D. R. DAVIES

"Wherefore good people, let us beware of such hypocrisy, vain-glory, and justifying of ourselves. Let us look upon our feet; and then, down peacock's feathers . . ."

—"The Misery of Man" Book of Homilies

Originally published in 1944, this DOWN, PEACOCK'S FEATHERS has received much recognition both here and abroad. It remains virtually the only book on the General Confession. # Trinity Parish to Open New 70-Acre Girls Camp On Connecticut Mountain

What used to be living quarters for fancy poultry will serve as one of the main buildings in the newly developed Trinity Mountain Camp for girls to be opened by Trinity Parish, Manhattan, this summer.

The camp consists of 70 acres of rolling countryside, including a two-acre fresh-water pond, on the top of a mountain near Sharon, Conn. It will greatly expand the parish's girls' camping facilities, which for the past 81 years have been at Great River, near Islip, L. I.

The new camp is two and a half miles from West Cornwall, where Trinity already operates a conference center and Camp Schleuter, a summer camp for boys. Dr. Melvin N. Newquist, a physician who specialized in breeding and raising fancy poultry, formerly owned the property.

Dr. Newquist's two-story, many-windowed chicken house has been converted into a modern dining room, kitchen, recreation hall and staff living quarters. A main house of about six rooms has become the administration building, and a large barn will be used to store machinery and other essentials. A five-room lodge will be used as headquarters for the Sisters of St. Margaret, who will operate the camp.

New construction includes three large cabins to house 80 campers and 20 counselors, and a chapel seating 125 persons. An old but highly prized marble altar which formerly stood in the Old Mission House on Fulton Street is being used in the new chapel.

Children from Trinity Church and its six chapels, located in some of the city's most densely settled neighborhoods, have been going to Great River since 1880. The 14-acre tract there accommodated some 30 girls. For many years the camp was surrounded by open countryside, but in the past ten years it has become increasingly hemmed in by suburban home developments. Five years ago, Trinity Parish began to seek a new location.

Funds to buy Trinity Mountain Camp were obtained through a special drive, together with proceeds from the sale of Great River. The Sisters of St. Margaret, who work most of the year in the Chapels of St. Augustine and St. Christopher, will serve at the camp from June 1 to September 1. Sister Constance will supervise the camping program. Dexter Stephens, director of the nearby conference center and boys' camp, will be in charge of buildings and grounds. ■

St. Augustine's Is Winner Of EAL Trophy Second Time

Hand-picked cagers from the Episcopal Athletic League basketball teams challenged a quintet of clergy and coaches at an all-star contest April 15 at Trinity School, Manhattan. The EAL boys netted 62 points to the opposition's 54.

The game marked the finale for the League season, and was followed by presentation of the team trophies by Bishop Wetmore.

St. Augustine's Chapel of Trinity Parish, for the second year in succession, won the trophy for class "A", (players 16 years or younger). The class "B" trophy (players 18 years or younger) went to St. Peter's, Chelsea, Manhattan.

About 150 persons attended the game and ceremonies, for which Archdeacon and Mrs. Richard E. McEvoy provided the refreshments. The Episcopal Athletic League is sponsored by the Diocese. Eighteen teams from 13 churches played in this winter's games, and members of the all-star team were nominated by each individual team coach. Last year there were 10 churches in the League.

Participating churches, all from Manhattan, and the team classes of each are as follows:

St. Luke's (A); St. Peter's, Chelsea (A, B); St. Philip's (A, B); St. Edward the Martyr (A, B); Holy Trinity, East 88th Street (A); All Angels (A); St. George's (A); St. Mark's - in - the - Bouwerie (A); All Souls (B); St. Mary's, Manhattanville (B); and these Chapels of Trinity Parish: St. Augustine's (A, B); Intercession (A, B) and St. Christopher's (B). ■ did not insist on miracles. But we have grown into a greater unity with one another and our fellow man, and there is a new steadiness and stability in our family life.

The first thing it did for me personally was to rid me of a vast store of ignorance — the sly rumors I'd accepted almost unconsciously that church people are stuffy, no fun at a party, that Sunday School teachers and clergymen are pompous, dull. I found our church filled with people much like ourselves, a mixture of problems, good will, humor, shortcomings but banded together to help one another, and to be helped to do something about our difficulties.

Church membership has meant to me instruction and activity, theory and practice. I found I had a lot to learn. I think what amazes me most was that I could live all those years with a real need for church and not know it. I have been a church member six years now and am still asking "Why did I wait so long?" I guess perhaps Father didn't know best. ■

Bishop Asks Nationwide Inter-Faith School Talks

To deal with the controversy over government aid to education, Bishop Donegan has proposed a series of grass-roots meetings by educators of all faiths "in every community across the nation."

The Bishop made the proposal in his annual Diocesan Convention address May 9 at Synod House. He said the talks should be designed "to establish a program to bring about an orderly development of the dual purposes of excellence in educational attainment and growth in faith and moral character, under the Constitution."

The proposal so impressed the nearly 700 Convention delegates that they unanimously adopted a formal resolution "wholeheartedly supporting" the recommendation. It was presented by the Rev. Robert Hunsicker, vicar of St. Paul's Chapel, Trinity Parish.

Turning to another of today's controversial issues, Bishop Donegan warned church people to avoid becoming involved with the John Birch Society and other groups with "equally dangerous" activities.

He said programs such as these "are dangerously subversive in the true meaning of that word."

The Bishop continued, "The recent success of the John Birch Society in achieving nation-wide publicity for its program should not be exaggerated, but neither should it be minimized . . . Loud, noisy, vocal minorities can turn away our thoughts and our energies from a serious recognition of our responsibilities and a calm evaluation of possible future action.

"To call such programs which sow the seeds of ill will and suspicion 'conservative,' is a misnomer. They endeavor to reverse our American tradition of democratic opportunities and civil rights, to paralyze our Federal government from taking action to promote the general welfare and in other ways to turn back the clock in defiance of our national history and experience."

The Church "does not have a simple solution to the problem," Bishop Donegan warned.

But he said that "the responsibilities that face all Americans cannot be met without a thorough and drastic reevaluation of our emphasis on comfort, and ease, and pleasure, and luxury, an emphasis that gives to the under-privileged and under-developed nations of the world an impression that we are a complacent, self-seeking, self-centered, and completely materialistic lot of people."

He continued, "If our President calls upon us for a genuine self-denial, even to the point of real sacrifice, we must all be prepared to give him our unqualified support. Christians ought not to be amazed when the suppressed and under-privileged races and new nations of the earth demand freedom and opportunity and equality, for it is a fundamental part of our faith that all men were created to be free."

Bishop Donegan and E. Allen Dennison, Jr., during a Convention recess. Mr. Dennison is senior warden of Christ Church, Riverdale. At left are the Rev. Bradford W. Ketchum, secretary and registrar, and Mrs. William L. Brown, his secretary.

Elsewhere in his address, Bishop Donegan announced a $500,000 grant from the Myron and Anabel Taylor Foundation. Income from this grant will help maintain and operate the Bishop Donegan Conference Center at Tuxedo Park. The Conference Center has been completely paid for, the Bishop added. Since last May 1,709 persons have attended conferences there.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor several years ago offered to give their home at Lattingtown, L. I., to the Diocese, but during protracted negotiations the Tuxedo property was purchased. The grant is in place of the Lattingtown residence.

Since the 175th anniversary of the Diocese was celebrated a year ago, pledges and gifts for the special Anniversary Fund have reached $2,500,000, the Bishop reported. He said the campaign was the "most comprehensive, the largest in goals and accomplishments ever undertaken in the entire history of the Diocese." He added that new gifts are still coming in and said, "I trust this will continue."

Among the accomplishments made possible by the Anniversary Fund are these:

- A $420,000 revolving fund, used for loans to build three churches, two rectories and four parish houses. Facilities at Stone Ridge, Valley Cottage and Lake Mahopac are already in use.
- A house purchased for a clergyman studying the need for a new church in Dutchess Convocation.
- At St. Paul's, Bronx, new build-

Resolutions Spark Lively Discussion at Convention

Bishop Deplores Poor Attendance At Key Session

Delegates at the annual Convention tackled what proved to be two red hot issues at their session on May 9. These were a proposal to accept full membership in the New York State Council of Churches and a resolution advocating Federal Aid to Education where local or state financing "is demonstrably inadequate . . . "

Both resolutions were tabled, but only after spirited discussion.

Resolutions passed included these:

- Elimination of the Hare System of balloting and readoption of simple majority voting at Diocesan Conventions.
- Recommendation that the National Council augment its staff for a more efficient administration of its alcoholism program.
- Adoption of a 1962 Council budget of $540,066, and an assessment budget of $308,383.
- Amendment to the Constitution giving individuals who are not delegates but are Convention officers and chairmen of committees, boards and commissions, and as such required to report to the Convention, a voice at the Convention. They will not, however, have a vote.
- Constitutional revision having the effect of increasing the number of clergymen entitled to vote.
- Revision of other Canons to conform to the above changes in the Constitution.

The resolution on aid to education and one on the support of Church Councils were referred to committee during the morning session, and presented by the Committee on Miscellaneous Business during the afternoon. Some delegates stated that they supported motions to table these proposals because attendance at the Convention had dwindled by the time the votes were taken. They said they did not believe that a vote taken at that time would be representative of the wishes of the Diocesan Convention.

Bishop Donegan, deploring the fact that so many delegates had left the Convention, asked the Committee on Canons to study the Order of Business to suggest amendments which would assure full attendance at times when the most important matters were presented for action.

Offered in the Convention's printed calendar of business was the resolution calling for full membership in the New York State Council of Churches.

Speaking from the floor, Dr. James W. Kennedy, rector of Ascension, Manhattan, proposed another which, in effect, commended the World Council, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., the New York State Council and Protestant Council of the City of New York, for "a most valuable and creative service in deepening understanding among and between Protestant, Anglican and Orthodox Churches."

It also said these Councils have given "valuable guidance to their member churches on serious contemporary, national and international issues . . . " and provided a means "whereby the Protestant, Anglican and Orthodox Churches can speak with a more united voice . . . " The resolution proposed urging the General Convention to "continue to give its wholehearted support, both moral and economic" to the work of these organizations.

The Very Rev. John V. Butler, dean of the Cathedral, who has been a representative to National Council sessions, pointed out that the Council has recently been under attack, but "by men who should know better," and "we would make a great mistake in failing to give it our confidence."

Finally, the Kennedy resolution was restated, eliminating the "whereases." The Convention voted to urge the General Convention to continue its moral and economic support to the work of the World and National Councils.

First to speak against the proposed full membership in the State Council was the Rev. Charles Graf, rector of St. John's, Manhattan. He argued on the basis of possible high membership cost, and said he believes the relationship that the Episcopal Church now holds with the State Council of Churches is sufficient. Father Graf added that the Episcopal Church has its Bishop to speak for it on matters of public concern, and that "we need no other agency." He declared that Episcopalians are not interested in the State Council; "they have already shown this in their giving . . . "

His motion to table the resolution was carried.

The Rev. John M. Krumm, chaplain of Columbia University, voiced objection to tabling the resolution without both sides being heard.

The motion to table the aid to education resolution was offered by Godfrey de Castro, lay delegate from the Church of the Crucifixion, Manhattan. He argued that there might well be places where the funds could be used to subsidize segregation.

This resolution was offered by the Diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations in the printed calendar. The Committee on Miscellaneous Business reported its "general approval," but with two amendments: Endorsement of Bishop Donegan's position that maintenance of free, highest quality schools must continue to be primarily local and state governments' responsibility, and approval of Federal Government aid under certain conditions, "but only with wise caution and under proper restrictions."

Although the main resolution was tabled, the Rev. M. Moran Weston, rector of St. Philip's Church, Manhattan, proposed a motion endorsing the position on aid to education taken by the Bishop in his message. It passed unanimously. ■

letters to the editor

From the Rev. John M. Krumm, Chaplain of Columbia University

The action of the May 9th Diocesan Convention in laying on the table the proposal of the Department of Christian Social Relations and of the Council of the Diocese that the Diocese of New York accept full membership in the State Council of Churches has been widely resented. The Department and the Council both had given the proposal careful thought and extended debate. In both cases the recommendation was carried overwhelmingly. It did not seem fair that a member of the Department who had opposed the action should deliver a long speech against the proposal and then forbid the Department or the Council from answering his arguments — which he knew from past experience they were prepared to do — by a motion to lay on the table.

In order that in the future the Convention may guarantee its Council and Departments and the Standing Committee the right at least to present their views and the reasons which have led to their recommendations, I propose the following amendment to the Rules of Order:

"To amend the Rules of Order No. XXIII.

Following section (6) in the third paragraph, add the following: A motion to lay on the table with respect to any resolution proposed by the Council of the Diocese, by any Department or Division thereof, or by the Standing Committee of the Diocese shall not, except by unanimous consent, be in order until the proposing body shall have been given the floor for a period not to exceed ten minutes for the purpose of explaining the purposes of the resolution in question."

The adoption of this change would assure the elected representatives of the Diocese the opportunity to bring before Convention their considered judgment of issues which they feel to be important. After such a presentation it would, of course, be entirely proper for the Convention to dispose of the matter in any way it saw fit.

From the Rev. Roger Geffen, Assistant Minister, Resurrection, Manhattan

I am grateful to Chaplain Krumm for showing me his letter so that I could have a chance to reply to it.

Any attack on the parliamentary right to bring a motion to table is an attack on the principle of majority rule. To label such a motion "unfair" is to adopt a line of thought which leads ultimately to rule by filibuster. The resentful expressions at the Convention were a violent attack on the principle of majority rule. The relatively moderate suggestions of Chaplain Krumm are a gentle attack. Furthermore, the facts are not as represented. It is simply not true that the advocates of the proposal lacked the opportunity to present their case. There were several speakers. Father Graf was recognized only after it was clear that no one else wished to be recognized. It may be true that the proponents of the proposal prepared their case badly. It is quite false to say that the motion to table deprived them of a chance to present it. The motion to table did deprive them of a chance to reply to Father Graf. It did so because the majority rules, and the majority did not want to be forced to hear the reply. In a democratic assembly, the majority has, and should have, that right. Chaplain Krumm wanted to take this right away for reasons which do not reflect the facts of this case. The result would be to take a small but significant step away from majority rule, and towards rule by filibuster.

From the Rev. Cornelius P. Trowbridge, Chaplain, St. Luke's Hospital, Manhattan.

The Reverend Arthur Litchfield, retired Rector of St. James' Church, Fordham, entered St. Luke's Hospital as a patient on December 22, 1960. Four months and four days later he entered into eternal life. During those long, weary, pain-filled months he bore as brave a witness to the Christian faith as any of "the saints of old." Both the physician in charge and the surgeon who performed a series of operations, men of mature experience, said that they had never seen such heroic courage and such extreme suffering so patiently endured. No word of complaint or expression of self-pity ever escaped him. His nurses became so attached to him that they frequently worked over-

St. Thomas Chapel Plans To Cut Century-Old Ties

By the Rev. R. DeW. Mallary, Jr.
Vicar, St. Thomas Chapel

St. Thomas Chapel, which for over 100 years has relied on the support and leadership of St. Thomas Church, is planning its independence as a parish. The Chapel, on Manhattan's East 60th St., now functions as a separate congregation within St. Thomas Parish.

The Chapel has a long record of spiritual and social service to the community around it. Over the years, it developed a full schedule of youth and adult activities. This was when the area was relatively poor and teemed with children.

Today, the Chapel finds itself in a new situation. There is a new East Side New Yorker — the young business and professional person, and the tenant in the "luxury" apartments springing up from Lexington to York Avenues. Now the Chapel must serve these people, as well as established parishioners.

The rector and vestry of St. Thomas Church, the "mother church," at Fifth Avenue and 53rd St., have agreed in principle that the Episcopal Church's work on Manhattan's East Side would be strengthened by the Chapel's becoming a full-fledged parish. All the parties are also anxious that St. Thomas Church be free to strike out in other areas of the city, where new missionary work is needed.

We are persuaded that when a congregation can support its own life and ministry, it should do so — and not rely on outside help. How can this goal be reached? Above all, by increased numbers, leadership and giving. To spearhead this growth is the concern of a unique Chapel Council Committee on public relations and evangelism. This group includes a lawyer, an educator, a United Nations information officer, and three men in public relations and advertising.

From this committee has come, among other things, a radically new Chapel Bulletin designed to teach and inform, a bus advertising campaign, and a direct mail neighborhood program. As this is written, a program of neighborhood meetings in parishioners' homes is getting under way. All members, as well as newcomers and visitors, will be invited to a home in their area to meet the vicar and fellow churchmen and to hear and discuss Chapel plans.

But, as a recent survey by the Church of the Epiphany showed, personal invitation is the most effective means of evangelism. Nothing takes the place of bringing someone to church with you. Here, too, the response of parishioners has been rewarding and highly effective.

To reach self-support, a growing church must be a giving church. The Chapel is fortunate to have been promised the services of Diocesan Director of Stewardship Eric Ley to direct the Every Member Canvass this fall. Under him, the philosophy of meaningful giving, and giving for the right reasons, will be reinforced. And a major step will have been taken toward independence.

Other steps are being taken on the road to the Chapel's "coming of age." Chapel by-laws and a Chapel council closely approximating parish and vestry structure have been adopted to ease the ultimate transition. The legal and canonical steps that must be taken to secure incorporation and diocesan recognition are being investigated.

An architect has been retained to plan for improvements and renovations. He is Edgar Tafel, who designed the Protestant Chapel at Idlewild Airport and a prize-winning church house in Manhattan. He was recently written up in "The New Yorker."

This is a viable church very much on the move, a move in the direction of a strong, self-supporting parish. The motive is not just local pride or autonomy, nor does it indicate any lack of affection for our long-time parent and benefactor, St. Thomas Church.

But the time has come for this congregation to become a full-grown man, to stand on its own. ■

Cathedral Guild Holds Reception

Members of the Cathedral Guild of St. John the Divine and the Gardeners of St. John's attended the annual Guild reception and tea on May 25 at the Cathedral. The meeting was preceded by a tour of the close to inspect the gardens and new planting. Improvement of the Cathedral grounds is a special Guild project, working through the Gardeners of St. John's, one of its committees.

Annual reports were given by Mrs. Clarence G. Michalis, Guild president, and by Mrs. Albert P. Loening, chairman of the Gardeners. The Gardeners now have 285 members.

Bishop Donegan addressed the Guild on the place of the Cathedral in the Diocese and the community. Dean Butler also spoke briefly. ■

St. Gregory's Starts on New Parish House

Fast-growing St. Gregory's Church, Woodstock, is building a new parish house. Archdeacon George F. Brätt, assisted by the Rev. Lloyd H. Uyeki, vicar, turned over the first shovels of earth at groundbreaking ceremonies on May 13. The building is expected to be ready by the end of the summer.

The new structure, of contemporary design similar to that of the church, will have a steep, pitched roof of hand-split cedar shingles, with the eaves carried down to floor level. Redwood, bleached to driftwood gray, will be used for the exterior walls.

WANTED

Able-bodied volunteers to meet and assist incoming foreign students. One or more full day's service between August 25 to September 20. Episcopal Council for Foreign Students, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., N. Y. 25, N. Y. UNiversity 6-1430. Ask for Mrs. Hess.

The hall will seat 140 persons at table. Disappearing partitions will enable its division into eight Sunday School classrooms. A connecting wing from the parish hall to the church will house an entry and coat-hanging space, a nursery room, kitchen and lavatories.

Architect for the project is William H. van Benschoten, who also designed the church. This structure, built in 1956, has received nationwide praise in a number of publications. St. Gregory's is included in a slide film review of advanced contemporary church buildings being prepared by the General Convention Joint Commission on Architecture and the Allied Arts. Woodstock, in the Catskill foothills, is a popular summer resort and favorite residence for artists and writers.

Father Uyeki has expressed the hope that the new parish house will serve not only direct church interests, but also those of the entire village by providing a suitable meeting place for many organized efforts by youth and adults. ■

St. Paul's Completes New Church

"There were cows in the sacristy, horses in the nave, carriages in the crossing, hay in the parish hall, automobiles in the Lantern Shop and sheep, pigs and chickens in the classrooms," says the Rev. J. J. Sharkey, rector of St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining. He's quite proud of it, too. How many other parishes can lay claim to such a conversion?

Over a period of five years, what was once a dairy farm has become a whole set of parish buildings. The last to be completed, the church itself, was dedicated by Bishop Donegan on Whitsunday at 4 p.m. services. In due time, and as funds become available, a tower and spire will add the finishing touch to the brick building.

The unusual remodeling program at St. Paul's-on-the-Hill began in 1956 when the parish decided to leave its small, badly outmoded structure in downtown Ossining and move to what had been part of a large farm. The property had been acquired by the Department of Missions from a developer who was planning to build small homes. St. Paul's, an independent parish founded in 1833, has financed the renovations.

The church itself, formerly a barn, is most impressive. In the sanctuary a hand-woven Persian rug leads up to a free-standing liturgical altar. A dossal curtain hangs behind the altar, and suspended upon the curtain is a Christus Rex. Organ and choir facilities are in a balcony on the north wall at the crossing. The original eight nine-paned windows have been left intact, except that the center panes have been replaced with stained glass. Father Sharkey designed and executed the stained glass panes himself. They are symbolic of the eight liturgical seasons.

The remodeling cost $60,000 and has been under way since November. The church seats about 200 persons.

2,500 Children Attend Service Of Presentation

Well over 2,500 children from 75 parishes, together with hundreds of adults, thronged the Cathedral on Saturday, May 20, for the annual presentation service.

This is the occasion at which missionary offerings, saved in mite boxes and given in special contributions by children all over the Diocese, are offered at the Cathedral altar. This year the total was $24,922.94.

The address was given by Bishop Donegan. At the conclusion of the service, the Bishop led the congregation in viewing tableaux created by children from five parishes to depict aspects of life in Mexico — the country chosen as the children's missionary study for 1960-61.

The tableaux were Una Casa (a house) created by Christ Church, Suffern; Un Mercado (a market), All Saints, S. I.; Un Internado, (a school dormitory), Intercession Chapel, Manhattan; La Posada, (Christmas procession), Grace, White Plains; and La Piñata (the festival jug), St. Barnabas, Irvington. The Rev. Samuel Ishibashi of St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, was in charge of the tableaux. ■

The Bishop's activities last month included the institution of a new rector, and the dedication of several church facilities.

The Rev. Ernest Johns was instituted as rector of St. Andrew's Church, Brewster, succeeding the Rev. Howard O. Bingley. On May 14, the Bishop blessed a new choir room and new Church School room at Grace Church, Middletown. On May 22, he dedicated a new Chapel of St. Helena at the Convent of St. Helena, Newburgh. Members of the Order, plus many from other religious orders, attended the service. ■

Chapel at St. Luke's Restored After Fire

Bishop Donegan conducted a service of thanksgiving on May 10 in the restored Chapel of St. Luke's Hospital. The chapel, praised by many for its architectural beauty, had been renovated after a destructive fire in 1959. Alec Wyton, organist and choirmaster for the Cathedral, gave a recital on the chapel's new pipe organ.

The entire interior of the chapel was redecorated, and its Italian Renaissance ornamentation was refinished in gold leaf. Several Flemish and Gothic tapestries adorn the walls.

The chapel is regarded as "the heart" of St. Luke's. A closed-circuit radio system permits every patient to hear services, and there is a special balcony for patients in wheel chairs or on stretchers. ■

Is there a God in hell?

The Church has always taken the Psalm absolutely seriously, "If I go down to hell, thou art there also." In New Testament terms, this was expressed by the mention of Christ immediately after his death going to preach to the spirits in prison. We believe that God permeates his entire creation both physical and spiritual so that and that all creation both physical and spiritual exists in him. Nothing exists without his consent, and even though one must face the fact that hell exists, one must also recognize that whatever state it may be, we know very little about it, that since it involves heartache and suffering for God's creatures, it also involves heartache and suffering for God.

Garbisch Is N.Y. Head of Drive For New National HQ

By raising rather than borrowing most of the funds needed for the new 12-story Episcopal Church headquarters, the Church could save $2,604,800, the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, has proposed.

The saving would be that of loan interest. To borrow $4 million toward the $5.5 million project would mean paying $2,604,800 at 5% interest over the next 20 years, in addition to repaying the principal sum. Bishop Lichtenberger told the National Council at its spring meeting that he hopes to have most of the total cost raised before General Convention meets September 17 in Detroit.

As active chairman, he will head the national committee receiving gifts and memorials. To head the New York committee Bishop Lichtenberger has appointed Col. Edgar W. Garbisch, Army engineer, art collector, corporation official and former All-American football star.

Bishop Lichtenberger has pointed out that: "There will be no general campaign in every parish and mission to raise funds for our new Center. Consequently, it will be necessary for our committee to receive a great many larger gifts from those individuals who are able to give more than their normal parish and diocesan contributions." ■

Two Organs Dedicated At Trinity, Manhattan

Two new organs were dedicated at Trinity Church, Manhattan, at a festival service on Ascension Day. The occasion also marked the 115th anniversary of Trinity's present church building, its third.

The new organs, designed to combine the best features of modern organ building with the Bach-Buxtehude tradition, are situated in the chancel and nave. They may be used separately or combined, and they are played from one four-manual console in the chancel.

In honor of the event, Dr. George Mead, organist and choirmaster, wrote a composition entitled "With Instruments of Music, Introduction, Allegro and Chorale." It was performed by organ, choir and full orchestra. ■

4 Clergy Sons Made Deacons

Four clergymen's sons are included in the list of men ordained to the Diaconate this month by Bishop Donegan.

One of them is Charles F. Boynton, son of the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York. The others are Henry D. Coleman, son of the Rev. Henry R. Coleman, rector of Grace Church, City Island; Lawrence B. Larsen, Jr., son of the Rev. Lawrence B. Larsen, rector of Christ Church, Pelham Manor, and Richard H. Rogers, son of the Rev. Raymond G. Rogers, rector of Ascension, S. I.

Also ordained by the Bishop on June 10 at services in the Cathedral were the following:

To the Diaconate — Geoffrey M. Armstrong of St. James' Church, North Salem; Alan L. Chisholm and Frederick C. Fox, III, both of Christ Church, Poughkeepsie; Dennis L. Day of Grace Church, White Plains; Joel E. Novey of Ascension, S. I.; Joe Arnold O'Steen of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan; Dale G. Sarles of St. Mark's, Mount Kisco; John H. Van Brederode of St. John's, New Rochelle; and David B. Wayne of All Angels, Manhattan. To the Perpetual Diaconate — Hartley W. Barclay and John R. Buxton, both of St. Peter's, Port Chester.

Ordained to the Priesthood on May 25 were John P. Meyer of St. Mary's, Manhattan; Carlton L. Udell of Resurrection, Manhattan, and Frederic C. Wood, Jr., for the Bishop of Connecticut. ■

Episcopal Priest Is Author of New Book on Judaism

An Episcopal clergyman has written a book on Judaism. He is the Rev. Lee A. Belford, associate minister at Epiphany, Manhattan, and head of the Department of Religious Education, School of Education, New York University.

The book is called "Introduction to Judaism," a primer of Jewish history, beliefs, ceremonies and life today. It is published by the YMCA publishing firm, Association Press, as a pocket-sized paper back. The volume is designed especially for use by young adult discussion groups.

Dr. Belford, who frequently serves as moderator for discussions involving both Christians and Jews, said he became convinced of the need for a book of this type when participants of both faiths consistently revealed an ignorance of Jewish history and beliefs.

Some of the questions the book answers are those which Dr. Belford said he has heard frequently asked — "What do Jews think of Jesus?" — "Do Jews accept the blame for the Crucifixion?" — "Do they accept Biblical prophecy about the Messiah?" and "What is the Jewish conception of Man?"

The contents also include sections on observances and ceremonies, the religious philosophy of Judaism, its early character and "The Making of Modern Judaism."

Dr. Belford said the material for his book was checked by representatives of Reformed, Conservative and Orthodox Judaism, as well as by a rabbi associated with the Reconstructionist movement.

He added that his deep interest and extensive research in the field of Judaism started with a series of sermons given at the Church of the Epiphany several years ago. He is the author of a booklet entitled "The Christian and His Jewish Neighbors," written for the National Council of the Episcopal Church. ■

St. Andrew's Is Dedicated; Major 175th Fund Project

A major step in the construction program made possible by contributions to the 175th Anniversary Fund was taken June 11 when the new St. Andrew's Church was dedicated by Bishop Donegan.

St. Andrew's, a mission of the Diocese, is in the Clason Point section of the Bronx, in the center of one of the greatest housing developments in the country. The towering buildings of four major developments house some 5,000 families.

The new church plant was built by the Diocese's Department of Missions with money contributed to the 175th Anniversary Fund. Cost of the project is over $450,000.

Of contemporary architecture, the new St. Andrew's is a single structure containing church, parish house and rectory. Normal seating in the church itself is 210, with room for 40 more seats in angular areas along the side aisles.

The old St. Andrew's, located about a mile from the new one, will be retained for occasional parish use other than religious services.

Dedication of the new church is the culmination of a long-range plan by the Diocese's Department of Missions. The first parcel of land for the new church was purchased four years ago, soon after construction was begun on the tremendous housing units that changed Clason Point from open country to a small, compact city within a city.

Ed. Note — The new church will not be completely equipped until sometime this summer. We will carry pictures of it in our next issue, October.

Missionary giving in the Diocese has increased, but it still falls short of its goal, the Bishop said. Contributions during 1960 were $909,178, the largest total ever reached, and $95,000 more than the figure for 1959. But the goal was $1,135,590.

Diocesan statistics for the past year show that 3,907 were added to the communicant strength, Bishop Donegan reported. Of these, 240 were Roman Catholics, and six came from the Orthodox Church. Fifteen men were ordained as deacons and 13 as priests.

Speaking of the newly formed Episcopal Laymen, Bishop Donegan emphasized that it is not an attempt to start a laymen's work or begin something new. The group "intends to recognize the large work the men of the Church are already undertaking and to provide a means whereby more men will be encouraged to participate . . . "

While Bishop Wetmore is providing executive leadership for the Episcopal Laymen at present, the Bishop said, it is his desire that "responsible laymen . . . take complete charge . . . as soon as possible."

At the same time, Bishop Donegan commended the Episcopal Churchwomen for "a rich and fruitful ministry." ■

Hand-Made Clothing, Crafts from Okinawa Available This Fall

Beautiful and inexpensive crafts and clothing from Okinawa will be available next fall for churches which are planning bazaars or other fund-raising ventures.

The items, made by women at St. John's Episcopal Craft Center on Okinawa, will be shown in a booth at General Convention by Mrs. George W. Barrett, Diocesan representative for the center.

The Craft Center has developed during the past six years through the efforts of the Rev. William Hio, who, upon his arrival in Okinawa, decided that something should be done about the poverty and scarcity of jobs in that area. A handicraft center was started. With Americans doing the designing and styling, Okinawan women turned out items such as pinafores, aprons, dolls and guest towels.

Today the Craft Center is a constantly growing industry employing over 100 Okinawans. Sales last year were over $31,000. ■

■ A 20-PAGE BOOKLET entitled "In Preparation for the Ordained Ministry of the Episcopal Church" has been issued by Hobart and William Smith Colleges, Geneva, N. Y. It is aimed at potential pre-theology students.

The booklet is the third in a series of Hobart Papers, publications issued by the colleges in the interest of the Episcopal Church and Christian higher education. It contains five articles by members of the college faculty and administration, and may be obtained free by writing to the colleges.

Hobart College, founded in 1822, is the oldest college in America affiliated with the Episcopal Church.

■ BISHOP DONEGAN has appointed the Rev. W. Scott Root, rector of Trinity Church, Garnerville, as diocesan representative to the National Wood Badge Training Course being conducted by the Boy Scouts of America. The course, for adult Scout leaders, will be held August 12-20 in Philmont, N. M. Fr. Root is the director of the Wilderness Conferences.

■ THE GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY of the Diocese of New York will hold a joint service with GFS groups from the Dioceses of Long Island, Newark and New Jersey on October 1 in observance of the GFS 85th anniversary. The service will be at the Cathedral.

All persons who have ever been GFS members are asked to send their names and addresses to Mrs. George Diering, Diocesan House, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., N. Y. 25, so that an invitation to this service may be sent.

■ HOLY TRINITY, East 88th Street, Manhattan, has been holding a prolonged "Independence Day" celebration. This year marks its tenth anniversary as an independently incorporated church. It was the first to obtain that status on Manhattan Island in 100 years, after having been a Chapel of St. James' Church since 1899.

A special anniversary hymn entitled "Holy Trinity," was written by the Rev. Cuthbert Pratt, rector, and set to music by Bronson Ragan, organist.

■ THE BISHOP OF CUBA, the Rt. Rev. Alexander Hugo Blankingship, has resigned after 34 years in that country. Bishop Blankingship left Cuba at the end of April to return to the United States. He had planned to retire next December. Bishop Blankingship has long favored a Cuban as his successor.

Affairs of the Episcopal Church in Cuba are being administered by Dean Romualdo Gonzales-Agueros, senior priest of the Church in Havana, who has moved into the bishop's home. ■

Port Chester Church Makes $10,000 Pledge

St. Peter's Church, Port Chester, has sent a check for $1,500 to the Treasurer of the Diocese, and has pledged a total of $10,000 toward the 175th Anniversary Fund. The pledge will be paid over a period of three years.

St. Peter's was one of only six Westchester churches which had made no contribution at the time the final report of pledges was printed in the March issue of the Bulletin.

During the active campaign years of 1957 and 1958, St. Peter's was engaged in raising a large capital fund for improvement of its parish facilities, including a parking lot. This activity necessitated deferment of meeting its obligations to the 175th Anniversary Fund.

The 1960 Diocesan Convention authorized keeping the Fund open for additional contributions. ■

You See, There Was This Steeple . . .

It was a little like yanking off the tablecloth with the table still full of dishes — a magician's trick.

In this case, the magician was a contractor, and he successfully knocked a tower out from under a century-old steeple at St. John's, Wilmot. The church, in New Rochelle, is a white clapboard structure, 102 years old.

It's a quaint, New England-type church on a hilltop, but the wood shoring and beams, especially in the tower, had decayed so badly that all during last winter's heavy storms the Rev. A. Shrady Hill, rector, asked his whole congregation to pray that the tower wouldn't blow down. A brand new church was considered. But the parish liked its old one.

With Howard Battin, architect, as consultant, renovations were planned. A local contractor, William E. Baltz, took the job, saying that he would remove all of the clapboard siding, install steel beams inside of the structure and reconstruct the tower, starting at the bottom!

Furthermore, St. John's had always wanted a pipe organ, but there had never been room. Now it would be possible to enlarge the base of the tower to provide an organ chamber.

The entire face-lifting job is costing approximately $20,000. ■

Episcopal Churchwomen

Election of officers was among the important items of business at the annual meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen, May 13 at Synod House. Among those elected were, left to right, Mrs. Jamie H. Kerr, assistant to the president; Mrs. Robert DeF. Boomer, chairman of diocesan meetings; Mrs. Norman L. Case, assistant treasurer, and Mrs. Fenton B. Neal, chairman of the Westchester Convocation. Bishop Donegan addressed the group briefly. Standing at his right is Mrs. Gurney Williams, ECW president.

400 Episcopal Churchwomen Attend Ingathering and Annual Meeting

An estimated 400 members of the Episcopal Churchwomen attended the Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering at the Cathedral on May 13. The service was followed by a box luncheon in the undercroft of Synod Hall and the annual ECW meeting.

Bishop Donegan addressed the annual meeting, presenting highlights from his report to the Diocesan Convention. He also officiated at the induction of executive officers. Eleven were elected during the business session, at which Mrs. Gurney Williams, Diocesan president, gave her annual report.

The new officers are those listed by the Diocesan nominating committee in the April Bulletin.

Dean Butler preached at the Ingathering, which was the last one before the Triennial in Detroit next September. At that time UTO offerings received during the entire three-year period from all dioceses will be presented at a special service. This service is scheduled for September 22. Simultaneous Corporate Communions will be held in many parishes so that Churchwomen will feel truly united in this expression of thanksgiving.

Women of this Diocese have given $192,309.60 thus far as their Triennial offering, with 10,266 contributors taking part.

The 1961 UTO total will include $31,744.60 received in the Advent Ingathering, $33,408.32 recorded to date in the Spring Ingathering, together with any contributions received during the summer. Remittances should be sent to Mrs. William E. Leidt, 245 Nelson Road, Scarsdale. ■

To Continue Aging Study

Though the 1961-62 Diocesan program theme is "The Ministry of the Laity," the 1960-61 theme of "Aging — A Challenge" will be carried on as a continuing responsibility. The ECW will be cooperating with such experienced workers in this field as Dr. Herbert C. Lazenby of the National Council, Miss Marie Eichelberger of the N. Y. State Welfare Department, Dr. Carol Lucas of the Geriatric Department of Columbia University, Miss Jean Hall of the Family Service Department of the Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society and in conjunction with the Diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations. ■

Council Departments Report On Year's Activities at Convention

Among the important items of business at the Diocesan Convention were reports of the Council's five departments and the Commission on Confirmation Preparation.

Because of the great amount of information contained in the reports, space limitations permit covering only the main, factual points here.

Finance — Presented by Leland S. Brown, chairman. Chief functions of the department are the general supervision of the Council's financial affairs, preparation of a budget, its presentation to the Council and then to the Convention, and, "perhaps the most difficult, the presentation of a proposal whereby the work of the Council can be carried on currently on a level balanced to its anticipated income."

It became apparent in January that cash on hand and income from all sources would fail by $95,160 to meet requirements. "Again this year the largest share of the reduction in planned work was requested of and accepted by the Department of Missions. The Department of Finance deplores the fact that most of this saving will be effected at the expense of proper maintenance of church properties.

"The Committee on Diocesan Finances has stressed this in its report, and we agree completely with that Committee . . . that every effort must be made to avoid reduction in this item in the future. This will be possible only if parishes and missions pay at least their full missionary quota, and if economically favored parishes exceed their quotas."

Missions — Presented by Archdeacon McEvoy for urban work and Archdeacon Brätt for rural churches. The "urban sprawl" is beginning to affect churches outside of Manhattan and the Bronx to the point where the metropolis "is no longer Bronx and Manhattan; it is Richmond, Westchester, Rockland, Ramapo and all that area called by the Regional Planning Association 'a 1/10 of a nation,' " said Archdeacon McEvoy. Business and industry could not keep pace with this growth unless it planned, "yet, often the churches seem to think in terms of 'business as usual,' and fail to understand the challenge of change or else find themselves bewildered by what is taking place."

The Archdeacon said the Bishop and the Board of Managers have been facing this challenge "for a decade at least" and have achieved results through planning and action at the diocesan level, and through the concern of clergy and laity at the parish or mission level.

The year brought many achievements, but Archdeacon McEvoy added that there are still neighborhoods where "we would like to act and cannot now because of inadequate resources or lack of firm knowledge as to what will happen . . . " He said that, "in almost every instance when your Diocese has been enabled to help the church stay where it ought to be, there has been an encouraging response . . ."

Lunch time during the Convention for the Rev. Messrs. Robert J. Creech, Church of the Messiah, Rhineback; J. J. Sharkey, St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining; and Benson B. Fisher, St. Stephen's, Pearl River.

Archdeacon Brätt reported that Dutchess Convocation is organizing a board to operate an area ministry to Eastern Dutchess. Westchester clergy and laity plan to explore the problem of heavy population growth. Highland Mills and Arden congregations, after receiving diocesan aid for two years, are now self-supporting and have called a rector. This release of aid has made possible, in part, services of an experienced priest at St. Anne's, Washingtonville, and temporary assistance to Good Shepherd, Greenwood Lake.

Archdeacon Brätt said also: "When again last year we learned that our Department would have to absorb a substantial cut ... due to unpaid Quotas, any realistic approach to strengthening the forward thrust of our work had to be curtailed. Many of our parish houses, vicarages and churches are in need of extensive repair. Even worse, several of our vicars are still required to take charge of two and three congregations . . . this, in a time of unparalled growth, is exceedingly frustrating.

"It is no secret that if every Quota were paid in full and we had the money we sorely need, the results would be so electrifying as to bring new zeal to every congregation in the Diocese."

Christian Education — Presented by the Rev. Lemuel Winterbottom, chairman. The Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Jr., appointed new director of the Department. Summer program includes the New York Youth Conferences at Bard College, the Episcopal Holiday Homes project, in which children from city churches can vacation in rural areas, and the Wilderness Conferences. The latter will be held at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness, Bear Mountain Park region, from July 9 to August 4.

Division of Boarding and Day Schools has been working both for this Diocese and the National Council. Conducted an evaluation of four secondary and elementary schools in the Diocese. Awarded each of them a Bishop's Certification, indicating the school has fulfilled all the approved standards to be called a School of the Diocese of New York. New development is a plan to establish a council or committee concerned with the church's ministry time of their own accord to meet some special crisis.

The writer, who visited him frequently, was always met with a smile and a word of appreciation.

Every Sunday, with unfailing regularity, he received the Holy Communion and even in times of great weakness he made the responses. Every Sunday, also, an envelope containing his offering was waiting on the bedside table.

The problem of suffering may never be solved completely on the intellectual level or as an academic problem, but here was one who, like his Lord, endured it with such steadfast faith and courage that he set an example which will never be forgotten by those who witnessed it. ■

Christian Social Relations — Presented by the Rev. Robert C. Hunsicker, chairman. During the past year Department has been concerned with migrant labor, care of the aged and state and national legislation affecting Churchmen. Has also continued to provide information about resources available for dealing with questions and problems of the clergy and their people.

In 1961-62, the Department "hopes to provide more intensive service to the aged in cooperation with church-related institutions and agencies. It hopes, also, to continue providing accurate information relative to proposed legislation of concern to the Church, and what in the long run may be most important, the Department hopes to promote a more direct involvement of the parish priest and his people in the life and problems of the community..."

Promotion — Presented by Joseph Martin, director. Services of the Department to be expanded because of addition of a managing editor for The Bulletin, Miss Ruth Weber. Mr. Martin will continue to serve as editor, but will devote more time to internal and external communications and other forms of public relations.

Steps already taken to get more Episcopal clergymen and laymen on radio and television programs. Department services offered to parishes needing assistance in press relations, parish newsletters, leaflets and other forms of communication.

Stewardship — Presented by Eric Ley, director. Program has been in effect not quite a year. Mr. Ley said it "...is not a newly-discovered panacea for the financial ills of a congregation. It is a philosophy and procedure which has its roots in the early Church. In a sense, it is a teaching mission carried on, after proper instruction, by laymen. Properly approached and accepted, it can revolutionize the attitude of the individual toward the Church. It can bring him to the point, long hoped for, of realizing that he doesn't just go to Church, he is the Church."

Mr. Ley added that "while financial increase must not be the criteria for judging the effectiveness of the program," canvasses made thus far have resulted in a 65 per cent increase in pledged income, or about $150,000. Twelve parishes and missions are scheduled for full-scale canvasses during the balance of the year.

During the year, seminars were conducted for interested clergy, and for parish Every Member Canvass chairmen and selected members of vestries.

Confirmation Preparation — Presented by Bishop Boynton. This Diocesan Commission met six times during the year, has agreed on the format of its final report and hopes to present it to the Bishop early next spring. The report is the third in a series, each of which has expressed the most important factor of that year's thinking. The 1959 report, on "What is Confirmation?" said "allegiance is the ultimate goal of preparation for Confirmation..." The 1961 report continues, "The Commission not only indicates that the three factors of desire, understanding and allegiance are necessary; but goes further and indicates that it believes allegiance to be the ultimate goal of Confirmation preparation."

Bishop Boynton noted "with regret" the practice ... of preparing for Confirmation in terms of a curriculum which looks chiefly to the mastery of factual data. He said, "Allegiance means not only a complete commitment to Christ, but also a passionate concern for the Christian community wherein the Holy Spirit brings the living presence of Christ himself — that love of God which issues in love of the brethren ... Adequate preparation ought to bring about growth in religion, for the goal is not only persuasion but conversion." ■

Camp Benefits Termed 'Highly Successful'

Three benefits sponsored by the Woman's Council of the Episcopal City Mission Society have been termed "highly successful" by a Mission Society spokesman. The proceeds will be used to send children to the Society's summer camps and to train apprentice leaders.

Staten Island's dessert bridge and canasta was attended by 400. A dinner-dance in the Bronx attracted 210. A dance in Westchester drew 550, despite a severe storm.

Two more benefits are scheduled, one by the Ramapo Convocation and a joint affair by Hudson and Dutchess. ■

Resurrection Is Converting Hospital into Parish House

One day last April the phone rang in the study of the Rev. Albert A. Chambers, rector of the Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan. It was a real estate man who wanted to know if the church was interested in buying the six-story brick building next door. For years it had been an ear hospital, the Lempert Institute of Otology; but

Church of the Resurrection, adjoining the former hospital which it bought for use as a parish house. Episcopal Academy of New York will occupy the entire second floor.

Dr. Julius Lempert was closing the hospital and retiring to private practice.

Father Chambers thought of the many ways in which parish services and the church's ministry to the community could be improved and expanded if this building were acquired. Actually, Resurrection had had its eye on the Lempert Institute for a long time. But the money! "I'll let you know," the priest told the real estate man.

The following week, Resurrection held a parish meeting. Father Chambers was frank. Acquisition and renovation would probably cost a cool half a million dollars. "Our need must be measured against our potential to meet the need," he warned. But the congregation was enthusiastic. Pledges began to come in. One man, who insisted upon remaining anonymous, promised to give $200,000. Two others offered $5,000 apiece.

By June, $374,000 had been pledged in the fund drive. The church took title to the new property on June 29, and renovations began shortly after August 1.

Clergy offices and the Church School will occupy the lower floors. Upstairs will be apartments for the clergy. The new Episcopal Academy has taken the entire second floor. Another floor is available for a church-related agency. ■

Viewpoint

"Offer to become a Communist with the reservation that you will give 1% of your income and none of your time for the spread of Communistic tenets. Offer to become a member of Islam with the reservation that you will pray only once a week.

"Is there any immediacy in the fact that both Communism and Islam this year will win more converts than Christianity? This is being done, my brethren, by methods we have despised — by working, praying and giving."

— From an address by Bishop Wright of Nevada, as reported in The Living Church.

Six East Side Parishes Organize Episcopal Academy of New York

Six parishes on Manhattan's East Side have founded a new school — the Episcopal Academy of New York.

The new day school is scheduled to open this month for nursery and kindergarten pupils. Eventually, classes will run through grades six or eight.

The academy will occupy the second floor of a former ear hospital at 119 East 74th Street, between Park and Lexington Avenues. The building, next to the Church of the Resurrection, was recently bought by that parish.

For the first year's session, the school will accommodate approximately 40 four and five-year-old pupils. Most of them will be from the six parishes — Epiphany, Resurrection, Holy Trinity (88th Street), St. James', St. Bartholomew and St. Thomas. Children of all faiths may register. Tuition will be $500 a year.

The director will be Miss Priscilla Houghton of Fitchburg, Mass., who for six years has been an assistant professor in the Department of Psychology and Education at Mount Holyoke College. Also on the staff will be a head teacher and two assistants. A chaplain will make regular visits.

Plans for the academy have been evolving for two years. During the winter of 1959, Dr. Frederick H. Wilke, a co-founder of St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School, paid a house call to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Dudley Johnson of 38 East 70th Street. He discovered that they were having trouble finding an Episcopal nursery school for their son. All of the schools were filled, they had been told.

After hearing Dr. Wilke's story of how St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's was begun on the West Side, Mr. Johnson suggested starting a school on the East Side. The idea was taken to Bishop Donegan, Bishop Wetmore and the rectors of the six churches. Mr. Johnson became president of the board of trustees, which now consists of 15 laymen, all members of these churches.

The academy is a non-profit organization to be incorporated in the State of New York. The governing board eventually will consist of 18 members, three from each founding parish. These parishes have no formal obligations to the academy, but it is anticipated that they will provide some financial support. ■

6 Clergymen Get Doctors' Degrees

Six clergymen in the Diocese of New York received doctorates last spring. They are:

The Rev. Hugh D. McCandless, rector of Epiphany, Manhattan, and the Rev. Cornelius P. Trowbridge, director of religious services and head chaplain, St. Luke's Hospital, doctor of divinity degrees at Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.

The Rev. Eversley S. Ferris, Bellevue Hospital chaplain, and the Rev. Albert A. Chambers, rector, Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan, doctor of sacred theology at General Theological Seminary. Father Chambers received an S.T.D. from Hobart College in 1958.

The Rev. Frederick M. Morris, rector, St. Thomas, Manhattan, doctor of divinity, Episcopal Theological Seminary, Lexington, Ky. In 1954 he received a D.D. from Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, and in 1958 an S.T.D. from Hobart.

The Rev. Powel M. Dawley, professor of ecclesiastical history and subdean of General Theological Seminary, a D.D. at Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. In 1938 he received a Ph.D. at the University of Cambridge, England, and in 1955 an S.T.D. from General Theological Seminary.

An S.T.D. degree from General Seminary also was awarded to the Rev. Lincoln A. Taylor, father superior of the Order of the Holy Cross. ■

Bibliography Of Bible Published

The first bibliography of all the editions of the Bible ever published in America is now available in a book called "The English Bible in America." It was in preparation for five years as a joint venture of the American Bible Society and the New York Public Library.

The 520-page volume was edited by Margaret T. Hills, Bible Society librarian, and can be obtained from the Society, 450 Park Avenue, New York 22, N. Y. The price is $13.50. The more than 2,500 entries list Old and New Testament Scriptures in English only. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish editions are included. ■

The Bishop's Message

As you read this issue of the diocesan Bulletin, the activities of the Church throughout the Diocese will be under way. I trust that our clergy and people have had a beneficial summer. A change in pace and environment, if used rightly, can provide us with physical refreshment and spiritual renewal. May we all fulfill our several responsibilities that the church year may be one of advancement.

The religious and secular press have carried the news of General Convention, and at the Convocation meetings this month the clerical and lay delegates will report on the legislation of this triennial meeting of the Church.

During this time of critical international relations it is essential that each member of the Church supports the decisions of General Convention so that our Church's voice may be strong, not only within the nation but also overseas.

We must not cease to pray for the peace of the world, and especially for the leaders of the nations that, under God, they may make wise decisions.

We live in a harsh century and it is well to remember that Our Lord never promised that life would be without trouble. A Christian nation cannot expect to be free from crisis. Our duty is plain, to keep calm, firm, and absolutely united.

Peace and liberty are granted to those resolved "to strive, to seek, to find and not to yield."

I am sorry to report the retirement of Mrs. D. George Adams as manager of the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center. Her efficient direction of the Center in these first years of its existence is greatly appreciated and recognized by all who have been at Tuxedo. Mrs. Carolyn Beattie of Watkins Glen, who for the past several years has been assistant manager of the Baptist Home for the Aged, Riverdale, the Bronx, is new manager of the Center.

Convocations to Get News Of Convention Highlights

Some of the most vital and controversial issues ever to face the Episcopal Church were thrashed out at the 60th General Convention which closed September 29 in Detroit.

For most parishioners back home, the events in the convention hall emerged as a series of general newspaper headlines. But, on October 29, churchgoers in this diocese will have a chance to hear on-the-spot reports from their own delegates.

With Bishop Donegan leading the delegation, convention representation from the Diocese of New York included Bishop Boynton and Bishop Wetmore, the Rev. John A. Bell, the Rev. George W. Barrett, the Rev. John Heuss and the Rev. John E. Large. The four laymen were Andrew Oliver, Paul B. Anderson, Theodor Oxholm and Clifford P. Morehouse.

One of these men, including the three bishops, will report at each convocation meeting. The schedule is as follows:

Manhattan: Church of the Heavenly Rest, 4 p.m.

Bronx: St. David's, 4 p.m.

Richmond: Christ Church, New Brighton, 4 p.m.

Bishop Donegan

Led New York Delegation

Westchester: St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, 4 p.m.

Ramapo: St. Francis, Sloatsburg, 7:30 p.m.

Dutchess: Zion, Wappingers Falls, 4 p.m.

Hudson: St. John's, Cornwall, 4 p.m.

Further details about the convocation meetings will be available on posters displayed in churches. ■

EPISCOPAL LAYMEN

Who They Are
What They're Doing
Where They're Going

MEN IN THE DIOCESE OF NEW YORK have been handed a formidable challenge — to get God out of a "box"! No, this is not blasphemy. It is good modern thinking.

Last winter, in all seven convocations, laymen gathered in councils to plan the initial events for a new organization, the Episcopal Laymen of New York.

ELNY, as it is called, was established by Bishop Donegan in January. He said it should "recognize the already extensive participation by men in the total life of the Church . . . and be of assistance to parishes and missions as they attempt to challenge laymen to greater response to Our Lord's direction and to the Church's need for an intensified Ministry of the Laity . . . "

Bishop Wetmore was asked to provide initial leadership. But Bishop Donegan was emphatic that as soon as possible, " responsible laymen should take complete charge . . . "

As might have been expected, the laymen started to think first in terms of program, especially since they had been given efficient machinery for setting up an organization. But in every meeting they stubbed their toes on the question: "What is the ministry of the laity?"

There were many answers. Laymen are vestrymen; they are lay readers and stewardship chairmen; they know what to do about a blown fuse or a leak in the hot water tank; they are good treasurers. But was this the "response to Our Lord's direction" that Bishop Donegan had mentioned? Or was there something more? In the planning sessions, the men spent much time trying to clarify what they should do. But in the process they ran headlong into another question: "What are we trying to be?"

Their biggest problem, Bishop Wetmore has suggested, was "that laymen have no grass-roots experience in talking through their role." At the same time, "clergymen think the role of laymen is already clearly defined and does not need exploration."

In a way, the very fact that the laymen were puzzled about what they were supposed to do is a sign of the times. A generation or two ago, just the idea of setting up a unified program to do good would have brought many enthusiastic supporters. But today "program Christianity" is not enough. The whole concept of the layman's place in the Church is changing.

Bishop Wetmore is providing temporary leadership for the new men's organization.

"From medieval times, the layman has been little more than a spectator at the clergyman's show," suggests Dr. Howard Harper, director of the General Division of Laymen's Work for the National Council of the Episcopal Church.

He says the layman's job "was a very simple and uncreative one — to be in church, to pay his money and to be on call to run such errands as the church "gathered" ... becomes the church "scattered" ...

at home

the clergyman was too busy to take care of. This idea held on well into the time when most of us were adults."

When laymen stopped being spectators and started to work, "it was perfectly natural for them to focus attention on the mechanical area of the Church's life," Dr. Harper continues. But there are two main aspects to the life of the Church: "its ministry, which is, of course, its only reason for being," and "the very important but secondary matter of its own housekeeping."

Until now, laymen have been putting second things first.

However, the Church itself may have missed the boat, Bishop Wetmore believes.

Twentieth-century America has a compulsion to organize, he said. We have labor unions, service clubs, lodges, country clubs and veterans' organizations, to name only a few. Historical events — the social revolutions and the impact of industrialization — made men want to be challenged "by something bigger than themselves and to serve something beyond their own selfish interests."

But somehow or other, the Church failed to realize this. And the new community leaders failed to see the Church as a vehicle through which they could work.

"We can only imagine what the life of the Church would be like now if it had been alive enough and relevant enough to attract all this energy and zeal," declared Bishop Wetmore. The women of the church have developed a strong and challenging program. The men, as yet, have not.

Furthermore, there is a split between a man's work and his worship, Bishop Wetmore asserts. Facing this point frankly in a talk before the Church Club of New York, shortly before ELNY was founded last winter, he said:

"The worship of God which is acknowledged as the 'chief end of man' is pigeon-holed in our culture into certain times, certain days, certain clothes, a certain look on your face, a certain special way of speaking. With worship thus pigeon-holed, and God safely put in a box, the rest of life continues on quite a different plane . . . "

He declared, "When God is in a box, the life of the Church is in the doldrums."

The mission of ELNY is to get God out of that box!

Bishop Wetmore agrees with Canon Southcott* that the most solemn moment of the Church is . . . when the congregation rises from its knees and moves out the door of the church building into the world. He insists that the people of God are as much the "ecclesia" (those called out) when they are in their homes, their offices, in the subway or in their kitchens as they are when they are in a church building. After the service is over, the Church "gathered" becomes the Church "scattered."

But even the Church "scattered" needs a framework to keep it together. The structure of ELNY has been called an "umbrella," — something that stretches over but does not interfere with the various types of laymen's activity a parish may decide to develop. It consists of key representatives on the parish, convocation and diocesan level. Each level has its set of "purposes," and they contain words like "encourage," "assist," "represent," and "interpret."

Bishop Wetmore explains, "The program has been defined with purpose statements that point directions rather than describe what the program should be in every place, leaving it up to the parish and convocation leadership to put flesh on the bones of the skeleton."

He added, "The most desired result of ELNY is that at the parish level the men who are in responsible positions will come to a deeper reason for carrying out this responsibility,

Unusual Organ Is Custom Built To Fit into Small Chancel Area

Progress can mean going backward; it all depends upon what the objective is.

At St. Stephen's Church, Woodlawn, in the Bronx, the congregation needed a new organ. It didn't want a small, modern electronic instrument. It was trying to hold out for a pipe organ with its wide range of tonal effects and big-church quality. But St. Stephen's is small, and there really wasn't room for a console and the usual arrangement of pipes all over the place.

Furthermore, although an organ fund had been established and had grown gradually over a number of years, the cost of an adequate pipe organ built in the conventional organ chamber seemed to keep just out of reach.

Finally the vestry and the rector, the Rev. E. Perren Hayes, called in G. Edgar Gress of the Gress-Miles Organ Co., in Pennington, N. J. Mr. Gress considered the problem.

"Why don't we try the kind of organ Bach used?" he said finally.

The "back to Bach" organ at St. Stephen's, Woodlawn, in the Bronx. One of the few of its kind in the country, it is similar to organs built at the time of Bach. Lower set of pipes, behind doors, is often used for choir accompaniment. Upper pipes produce volume needed for congregational accompaniment. The instrument has almost a thousand pipes.

Seventeenth-century organs, which even today are famous for their beauty of tone, were constructed so that the player sat facing his instrument, with the pipes arranged in separate sections, one over the other.

While floor area at St. Stephen's was severely limited, there was a considerable amount of height available in the chancel, where the wheezy old reed organ had stood for so many years.

The result is probably the only American-built organ of its kind in the East, and it is described by the organ maker as "one of our most interesting and successful."

Construction and installation took almost eight months, during which difficult engineering problems arose in connection with fitting the pipes in the available space, yet still leaving sufficient access for tuning and maintenance.

There are almost a thousand pipes, ranging from nine feet tall to the size of a soda straw, compressed, as the acompanying picture shows, into a comparatively small case.

As the congregation discovered when it heard the inaugural recital by Robert Owen of Bronxville, the organ is effective out of all proportion to its size. Mr. Owen played several of the great contrapuntal works by Bach and Brahms, which are the foundation of a serious organist's repertoire, as well as a Suite by Clerambault and a modern work by Michael Webster.

Mr. Gress said that if his company were to build another organ like St. Stephen's, it would cost about $15,000.

"I really can't think of another quite like it," he said. There is a larger organ of the same design at Trinity Lutheran Church, Cleveland, Ohio, which was imported from Europe, and a small American-made organ in Albany, Texas. The new organ at the Busch-Reisinger Museum at Harvard, also imported from Europe, will be of the old seventeenth-century structure, Mr. Gress reported.

"The church in Cleveland and the Harvard museum decided upon the design for musical reasons," he pointed out. While there are some advantages to what has come to be an accepted way to build organs in America, he said, the upper-and-lower-case type actually gives the organist much better control of his instrument.

In Europe, many organs have been built in this fashion since the war. ■

Survey Promises To Double Number At Fall Services

The vicar of a Diocesan mission expects Sunday attendance this fall to be double the average of last fall.

Making the bright prediction is the Rev. Wray E. MacKay, of St. Andrew's, which is in the Clason Point section of the Bronx. His forecast is based on steadily increasing attendance since St. Andrew's new church building was dedicated last June. The $450,000 structure was built entirely with money contributed to the Diocese's 175th Anniversary Fund.

There are two main causes, Father MacKay says, for the spiraling attendance. One is the new building; the other a neighborhood survey conducted last spring, combined with a vigorous program of parish calling.

St. Andrew's knew Clason Point to be predominantly a Roman Catholic community, but the survey revealed more people interested in the Episcopal Church than had been anticipated.

Of those who stated a religious preference, 61.2 per cent were Roman Catholic, 15 per cent Jewish, and 23.8 per cent non-Roman, non-Jewish. Between 6.2 and 11 per cent of the total were considered responsive to the Episcopal Church. The percentage figures do not reflect the large number of people who are either inactive or uncommitted, Father MacKay pointed out. Members of St. Andrew's were not included in the survey.

Conducting the survey were 19 seminarians, who spent 584 man-hours on the job. The Diocese paid them $10 per day, plus an allowance for meals. The total was $778.75.

The Roman Catholic figures ranged from 45.1 to 75 per cent in Clason Point's three housing projects and nearby streets. The percentage of non-Roman, non-Jewish families ranged from 20.9 to 39.2 in the four areas.

St. Andrew's followed up its survey with a calling program by parishioners. Before making the calls, the parishioners attended a three-session course on the ministry of the laity conducted by Diocesan Director of Stewardship Eric Ley. Calls were made on inactive parishioners, as well as on new people.

A facts sheet containing concise information on the church and its program was given to each person called on.

The calling work is continuing. ■

Day of Witness

At St. Ann's, Bronx, Bishop Donegan gives the blessing at the conclusion of the eighth annual Day of Witness. The observance, sponsored by the Diocese, was held June 17. With a theme of "One Family in Christ," the Day of Witness consisted of a lengthy street procession and a service of Holy Communion on the grounds of St. Ann's. Churches from all over the Diocese took part in the procession. Bishop Boynton celebrated Holy Communion. A sermon in English was delivered by the Rev. William Wendt; and one in Spanish by the Rev. Rafael DeSota. Photo by John Arthur.

National Council Unit Names Father Rooney

The National Council has appointed the Rev. E. J. Rooney as an associate secretary of the Leadership Training Division, Department of Christian Education. Father Rooney formerly was acting director of the Department of Christian Education, Diocese of New York. He assumed his new post on September 1.

Another former member of the diocesan department, Mrs. Frederick S. Lightfoot, also began work on September 1 as director of Christian Education for St. Barnabas, Irvington. She had been assistant to the director of Christian Education for the Diocese. ■

A week-end retreat for all women of the Diocese will be held October 20 - 22 at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park.

The retreat will begin with dinner on Friday, October 20, and end with breakfast on Sunday. The cost, including room and meals, will be $14.50.

Top Theologians to Teach Annual School of Worship

"The Lord, the Life-Giver" is the theme of this year's Diocesan School of Worship. The annual series of lectures, open to everyone in the Diocese, will be held on the four Mondays in November. The Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and the Episcopal Churchwomen sponsor the series.

Identical lectures are presented morning and evening.

The morning sessions will be at the Cathedral, 110th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, from 10:30 to 1:00. Lunch will be available.

The first three evening sessions will be from 7:30 to 9:45 at the following Manhattan churches: St. Thomas, Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street, November 6; St. Mary the Virgin, 139 West 46th Street, November 13; and St. James', Madison Avenue at 71st Street, November 20.

The final evening lecture on November 27 will be at the Chapel of the Incarnation, 240 East 31st Street, and will start with a dinner at 6 p.m.

All lectures will be devoted to the doctrine of the Holy Spirit. The topic for November 6 is "The Holy Spirit in the Bible," with the Rev. Frederick G. Grant, retired professor of Biblical Theology at Union Theological Seminary as the speaker. During his career, Dr. Grant was president of Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, editor-in-chief of the Anglican Review and chairman of the editorial board of The Witness.

The Rev. John Knox, Baldwin Professor of Sacred Literature at Union Theological Seminary, will be the second speaker. He has lectured extensively and is both author and editor of religious books. His topic will be "The Holy Spirit in the Church."

The Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean of the Cathedral, will lecture at the third session. He will speak on "The Holy Spirit in Our Lives." The final speaker will be the Rev. Howard A. Johnson, Canon Theologian at the Cathedral. Canon Johnson has been on leave from the Cathedral for two years on assignment by the National Council to circle the globe and visit every country where the Anglican Communion is at work. He will discuss "The Holy Spirit in the World."

The School of Worship committee is headed by the Rev. Harold R. Landon, Canon Precentor at the Cathedral. Chairman of the day session is Mrs. Donald K. Stevenson, assisted by Mrs. Henri Barjou. Miss Valerie Franklin is evening session chairman, assisted by Miss Marie Doremus.

Information about registration and other aspects of the lecture series may be obtained from your rector, or any officer of your parish branch of Episcopal Churchwomen. ■

Healing Services To Be Conducted By Dorothy Kerin

Miss Dorothy Kerin, noted for her work in spiritual healing, will visit several churches in Manhattan during her first trip to the United States this month. She is the founder of "Burrswood," a nursing home and center of spiritual healing in Kent, England.

Her American itinerary has been arranged by Dr. Alfred W. Price of Philadelphia, warden of the International Order of St. Luke the Physician. It includes services in New York City, Philadelphia, Washington, Richmond, Norfolk, Baltimore, Boston, West Orange and Islip.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale will be host to Miss Kerin at Marble Collegiate Church on October 4 at 8 p.m. The following day she will visit the Church of the Heavenly Rest. She will be at St. Bartholomew's on October 30.

At Heavenly Rest, Holy Communion will be celebrated at noon, followed by a healing service at 12:30. An address and laying on of hands is scheduled for 8 p.m. At St. Bartholomew's Miss Kerin will speak briefly at 3 p.m., and there will be a healing service at 8 p.m.

Miss Kerin's healing ministry started 50 years ago when she herself experienced a healing. For years her work has been recognized by the Archbishop's Commission on Healing. ■

7 Diocesan Clergymen to Preach In Cathedral at Dean's Request

Seven clergy have accepted Dean Butler's invitation to preach at the Cathedral this fall. Their visits are part of a program, started by the Dean last year, to have leading clergy of the diocese as visiting preachers, usually at Sunday Evensong, 4:00 p.m.

Last year 18 men, including the deans of convocations, the archdeacons, members of the Standing Committee, chairmen of diocesan departments and members of the Cathedral board of trustees, were among the visitors.

The fall schedule opened on September 17 when the Rev. Robert W. Cromey, dean of the Bronx Convocation, preached at Evensong. He was followed on September 24 by the Rev. Alfred H. Whisler, Jr., dean of Dutchess.

Also invited are the Rev. Andrew C. Long, dean of Richmond, Oct. 15; the Rev. Kenneth Mackenzie, dean of Westchester, Oct. 22; the Rev. George F. Kempsell, Jr., member of the Diocesan Council, Nov. 5; the Rev. H. August Kuehl, chairman of the Department of Christian Education, Nov. 26 — all at Evensong; and the Rev. Bernard C. Newman, member of the Standing Committee, Jan. 14 at 11 a.m. ■

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedral Church

In this monthly column, Canon West answers some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

What shall I call my rector?

Assuming that this is a polite question, let me tell you first the one thing never to call him, and that is "Reverend." The word Reverend is, in English, invariably an adjective and can't be used except to qualify some other word. It is exactly analagous to Honorable.

One can address The Honorable Herbert Hoover, and even conceivably refer to him as The Honorable Mr. Hoover, but under no circumstances could he rightly be called Honorable Hoover.

With the clergy, correct usage demands The Reverend John Smith, The Reverend Mr. Smith, The Reverend Father Smith, The Reverend Dr. Smith, The Reverend Canon Smith, or, if dean of a cathedral, The Very Reverend John Smith. A bishop, in the United States and Japan, is properly referred to as The Right Reverend John Smith or The Right Reverend Dr. Smith. (The Right Reverend Bishop Smith is not good form; rather it should be The Right Reverend John Smith, D.D., Bishop of Amherst, or The Right Reverend the Bishop of Amherst.)

In direct address, a handle helps. If a man is a bishop, a canon, a doctor, or a monk in Holy Orders — in which case his title is invariably "Father" — no problem arises.

If, however, he is none of these, and you don't know whether he wishes to be called "Father" or "Mister," the one absolutely safe thing to say or write is "Sir."

Certain ancient technical distinctions of legal position dictate that an archdeacon (The Venerable John Smith) should

Key General Convention Committee Holds Meeting at Cathedral House

Now that General Convention is over, those who helped plan it are perfectly willing to admit that the preparation for this nation-wide meeting took almost as much time, thought and prayer as the Detroit sessions themselves.

Twenty-four joint committees and commissions made reports and recommendations during the 12-day Convention which ended September 29. (Committees and commissions are made up of members of both the House of Bishops and the House of Deputies. Commissions, in addition, may have members chosen at large.) The Joint Committee on Program and Budget, the most important of all these groups, did its pre-Convention planning here in the Diocese of New York.

Meeting at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine last June, the bishops, clergymen and laymen who comprise the committee went to work on recommendations which would largely determine the General Church Program for 1962-64. The committee worked on the National Council budget for the triennium and drew up a list of areas in which the Church should be most active. The National Council is the administrative arm of the General Convention.

The budget as originally proposed involved $35,157,752. Per year, this meant $10,705,663 for 1962, $11,788,312 for 1963 and $12,663,777 for 1964. The work areas include overseas work, theological education, social relations, work in cities and industry, work among Indians, the deaf and blind, and women's work.

Dr. Theodor Oxholm, treasurer of the Diocese of New York, is a member of this committee. The Rt. Rev. J. Wilson Hunter, Missionary Bishop of Wyoming, was the chairman. The Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop, gave an address at the committee meeting. ■

West and de Tar Are Appointed N.Y.U. Lecturers

Two distinguished Episcopalians have been appointed lecturers at New York University this year. They are Canon Edward N. West of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and Vernon L. de Tar, organist-choirmaster, Church of the Ascension, Manhattan.

Both will teach in the Department of Religious Education. The Rev. Lee A. Belford, associate minister of Epiphany, Manhattan, is chairman of the Department, and William P. Sears, Jr., a lay reader at St. Andrew's, Manhattan, is a professor.

Canon West, an expert in the arts and the meaning of worship and religious expression, will teach a course entitled "Fine Arts and Religion" during the fall term. Mr. de Tar, a composer and a member of the faculty at Juilliard and the School of Sacred Music of Union Theological Seminary, will teach in the spring. His course is entitled "Music and Religion." ■

Diocese Appoints Director of New Program for Aged

A new program for the aging has been announced by the Diocese. Miss Esther C. Stamats, who on August 1 became Director of Services for the Aged, will be in charge.

The new program is under the Diocese's Department of Christian Social Relations. It is not related to the now inactive independent corporation known as Episcopal Service to the Aged.

Included in the Diocese's work for the aged will be institutes and seminars, clergy counseling, and assistance to parishes in setting up programs for the aged. A referral service will be maintained, but follow-up case work will be provided by the agencies accepting the individual.

Miss Stamats (rhymes with playmates) has been with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for the past two years. She helped plan and organize the 1961 White House Conference on the Aging and acted as technical director for two of the workshops.

Living proof that age need not be a handicap, the new director began her work with HEW after retirement from the National Council of Churches. Before reaching the compulsary retirement age of 65, she she was for nine years the Council's Executive for Christian Social Relations of the United Churchwomen. She is 68 now.

A woman with a warm but forceful personality, she has devoted her long career entirely to working with people. For 11 years she was head of all the YWCA's in Baltimore. She was with the Chicago YWCA for 17 years. During this time she was written up in Reader's Digest for her training program for women unemployed because of the Depression.

For two years she operated her own employment agency and vocational guidance service.

The new Director of Services for the Aged, an Episcopalian, has traveled all over the country as a lecturer and discussion leader. She has written extensively and read many papers before national organizations working with the aged.

She is a charter member of the National Council on the Aging, former president (the first woman) of the Maryland-Delaware Council of Social Agencies, and a former member of the Executive Committee of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

A native of Bellefontaine, Ohio, she was graduated from the University of Michigan. She also studied at Northwestern and the University of Chicago.

Miss Stamats' office is on the second floor of the Diocesan offices building on the Cathedral grounds. She lives just a few blocks away in Butler Hall. ■

Church Unity Experts In Seminar Nov. 8-10

A three-session discussion of "The Episcopal Church and the Unity We Seek" will be held at Calvary Church, Manhattan, November 8-10. Prominent theologians representing various viewpoints on the controversial question of unity will be the participants. The meetings are open to the public.

According to the Rev. Albert B. Buchanan, rector of Calvary, the principal purpose of this event is "to determine, open and forthrightly, the relationship of the Episcopal Church to the various Protestant Communions." He said this relationship will be explored in terms of doctrine, tradition and practice, "with some attempt to throw light upon the particular attitudes and prejudices of the Episcopal Communion."

Mr. Buchanan emphasized that the conference goal is "the attainment of better understanding, clarification and real cooperation, rather than the consideration of any specific plans for organic unity."

The first two sessions will begin with Choral Evensong in the church at 7:30 p.m. The third meeting will be held at 9 a.m., concluding with luncheon.

Bishop Dun to Speak

Giving the opening address will be the Rt. Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington (D.C.).

Bishop Dun, former dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., has given special service to the ecumenical movement of Christian churches around the world since 1925, when the first Faith and Order Conference was held at Lausanne, Switzerland. He is serving his second five-year term on the Central Committee of the World Council of Churches. He is chairman of the Commission on Ecumenical Relations of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and a member of the Working Committee of the Commission on Faith and Order of the World Council.

Other speakers at the first session will be the Rev. James I. McCord, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, and the Rev. John Meyendorf, professor of patristics and church history at St. Vladimir's Orthodox Seminary.

Principal addresses at the second session will be given by the Rev. Arthur A. Vogel, William Adams Professor of Apologetics and Dogmatic Theology, Nashotah House, and the Rev. Charles D. Kean, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D.C. Dr. Vogel is a member of the Episcopal Church's Joint Commission on Ecumenical Relations. Dr. Kean, secretary of the Joint Commission on Approaches to Unity, is an associate professor at George Washington University, and the author of over ten books, including "The Road to Unity."

Panel Discussion

A panel discussion will follow these addresses at the second session. The participants will be the Rev. Kenneth Woollcombe, Mary Crooke Hoffman Professor of Dogmatic Theology at General Theological Seminary; the Rev. John Knox, Baldwin Professor

Whole Village Pitches In To Aid Charred St. Mary's

It will be a long time before fire-ravaged St. Mary's Church in the Highlands gets back to normal, but in the meantime the whole village of Cold Spring has united to help the stricken parish.

The disastrous fire of July 27 left the historic, 96-year-old gray granite church with its roof virtually demolished, its walls charred, its valuable organ ruined and the interior a sopping mess. The damage was estimated at $300,000. The building was insured for $124,000.

But almost immediately the community began to plan fund-raising benefits. The Cold Spring Fire Company held a special, three-day bazaar on the church grounds. The firemen netted $3,300.

A three-day premiere of the movie "The Young Doctors" raised another $2,200. This event was sponsored by a community group led by Joseph DeLuccia, prominent Roman Catholic layman. "I've never seen anything like the way these people have been working," said St. Mary's new rector, the Rev. John Mills. "People of all faiths are banding together to help us."

Even during the fire there was proof of this undivided concern. Into the blazing church went two priests from Garrison, a Roman Catholic and an Episcopalian, to rescue the Communion vessels. They were the Rev. Roch Mullin of the Capuchin Fathers' seminary and the Rev. William S. Reisman, rector of St. Philip's Church. Both are volunteer firemen.

St. Mary's new rector arrived early in August to succeed the Rev. Edward S. Gray, who is now at St. Matthew's Cathedral, Dallas, Texas. Father Mills was assistant minister at Zion Church, Oconomowoc, Wis., and taught English at Wisconsin State College in White Water.

St. Mary's was one of two church fires within a week in Cold Spring. The second was at Our Lady of Loretto Roman Catholic Church, where a sexton arrived before serious damage occurred. Police said two small boys, nine and ten years old, admitted responsibility for both, although only one youngster was at Our Lady of Loretto. The boys were members of the churches involved. Their case was referred to the Putnam County Children's Court. ■

The program for the third session of the seminar will be dictated to a large extent by the outcome of the first two sessions. ■

. . . in brief

■ NEAT HOBBY with a twofold effect is the post card collection of Dr. Kenneth R. Waldron, rector of Trinity Church, Mount Vernon. For several years he has been collecting picture post cards of churches that his parishioners have sent him from vacation spots. To date, he has 282 cards from 35 states and 11 foreign countries. Naturally, his favorite message on the back of the post card is "We attended services here last Sunday." In addition to making a fascinating scrap book, what better way to get vacationing Episcopalians into churches away from home?

■ WESTCHESTER women from seven foreign countries will model their native clothing October 16 at "Fashions Around the World." The show, to be held at the Gonzales estate in Rye, will be a benefit for the Youth Consultation Service of the Diocese of New York.

■ MUSIC LOVERS at Grace Church, Nyack, decided to try a series of "do-it-yourself summer sings" this year. Three were held under the leadership of Ted Flath, director of music. The singers agreed not to attempt to polish serious works for public performance, but to have fun, learn more about sight singing and become acquainted with new works.

Haydn, Bach, Faure and Brahms were among the composers whose music was explored. Mr. Flath says he highly recommends the project for communities where there are enough people who enjoy singing together but ordinarily would not do so because their regular groups have scattered during the summer.

■ EXCHANGE PREACHERS for the months of July and August were the Rev. John C. Harper, rector of St. Matthew's Church, Bedford, and the Rev. Charles G. Hooper, vicar of St. Michael's, Bishop's Stortford, Hertfordshire, England. St. Michael's is about 30 miles north of London.

The clergymen were accompanied by their families. The exchange primarily involved Sunday duties so that the travelers had weekdays free to explore the country they were visiting.

■ THE REV. GORDON HUTCHINS, JR., assistant post chaplain at the United States Military Academy, West Point, has been promoted from the rank of major to lieutenant colonel.

■ RANDLE ELLIOTT, executive director of the Greer School for 12 years, resigned recently to become president of Hood College, Frederick, Md. His successor is Ian Morrison of Bronxville, who had served as executive secretary of the school since 1957. Greer School, Hope Farm, N.Y., is an Episcopal community for boys and girls from broken homes.

Mr. Morrison was dean of students and assistant professor of history at Wagner College from 1948 to 1956 ■

Volunteers Help To Build Parish House at Trinity

"We can't spend all that money for a new parish house . . . "

More than one vestry has chanted that refrain, but at Trinity Church, Garnerville, the congregation decided that money is not the only thing that will do a job. Men and women pooled their talents and said, "Let's do it ourselves."

The result was that when Bishop Donegan arrived for the dedication ceremony on June 11 he saw a brand new wing built of cinder blocks faced with brick. It contains a large all-purpose room, offices, sacristy, classrooms and washrooms. The Bishop also saw a modern, utilitarian kitchen and was told that a chapel, still under construction, would be ready this fall.

The whole project, which also includes new electrical work in the church, cost about $26,000, slightly less than half of the original estimate. It was the first building program at Trinity since the cornerstone was laid in 1898.

Field marshal for the unusual operation was Trinity's breezy, collegiate-looking young rector, the Rev. William S. Root, whose knowledge of architectural drafting enabled him to revise an original set of plans down to the level of his church's capacity to build.

His first lieutenant was Albert C. Midwood, chairman of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, who rounded up at least 30 people whose daytime pursuits were a cross section of local occupations. There were carpenters, a physio-therapist, garagemen, white collar workers, housewives and businessmen.

Some portions of the work were subcontracted, but parishioners did the carpentry, electrical work and painting. The women scrubbed, washed windows and made curtains and draperies. It took the contingent about three months, Father Root estimates. ■

Sidewalk Sermons Attract Strollers on Fifth Avenue

Church of the Ascension, Manhattan, is a well known church with a good congregation, but its rector, the Rev. James W. Kennedy, hasn't forgotten that Christ spoke by the wayside.

Every Sunday afternoon for six weeks this spring, Dr. Kennedy presented an "outdoor short story hour."

Promptly at 5 p. m., the church bell tolled and Dr. Kennedy, fully vested and preceded by a crucifer, took his place. He stood on a low podium set up on the front lawn just inside the iron railing which surrounds the church at Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street. Behind him flared two tall kerosene torches. There was a large sign announcing the "story hour."

"If you think it's easy to get out there and start talking in the open air — it's not!" he confided to a friend recently. "But I did it to reach those people who don't normally enter a church building or stop to hear a 'Gospel' sermon."

Usually he would preface his "story" with a brief greeting. One day the topic was "Mr. Big's Goat." The things that get one's goat these days, he said, are indeed small. "Everybody carries a chip on his shoulder and thinks, 'Nobody loves me,' and therefore I should go out into the garden and eat worms. We all want to be giants, Goliaths ... The only people who can be made fun of nowadays are psychiatrists and preachers..."

But, he continued, speaking gently but with a strength that carried above the rumble of passing buses and the swish of Sunday pleasure cars, "Somebody does love us ... and that Somebody can be found inside a church..."

A young girl who had been licking an ice cream pop paused reflectively. Others, ranging from young to old and from informally dressed to impeccably tailored, looked attentive. All kinds of people, from millionaires to beatniks, are apt to stroll on lower Fifth Avenue during a spring Sunday afternoon. Dr. Kennedy had no hecklers, though.

Actually, this was the second year for the "short story" project. As the result of the first six-week series in 1960, several new members joined Dr. Kennedy's parish. Two of them were "lapsed Episcopalians," he said.

This year he concluded each message with an invitation to a brief "before-going-home prayer" in the church. ■ be addressed as Mr. Archdeacon; a canon, when note is taken of his particular canonry, is called by it: e.g. Mr. Sacrist, Mr. Precentor; a dean is, for the same technical reason, called Mr. Dean.

No one should be shocked by this usage of Mister; it is standard for all secular clergy in France and for some religious.

(All bishops in all parts of the Anglican Communion, excepting only the United States and Japan, are "Lord Bishops," and are addressed as "My Lord." This is merely medieval academic practice and has nothing whatever to do with the English House of Lords. Actually, most Latin diplomas continue this academic practice. Even I have one which starts Vobis notum sit quod Dom. Edward N. West Gradus Primi Candidatum, et cetera. The "Dom." is the title to which I refer. In classic Latin the word from which "Mister" derives is a far more imposing one than that which is translated as "Lord.")

If you are writing a clergyman you don't know, you will never go wrong with "Reverend Sir," or "Reverend and dear Sir." Silly as it sounds, if you address him as "Reverend Smith," his instinctive response isn't that you don't know, but, rather, that you don't like him. ■ and will see that their Christian commitments make demands on the whole of their week rather than at just the times they are in church. A second result hoped for is that the responsibilities in the parish which now rest on a comparatively few men will be spread out over a larger number."

So far, convocation councils have begun to move in different ways. Early in June, more than 75 men of the Dutchess Convocation held an all-day seminar at Greer School. They attended a service of Holy Communion, had breakfast and heard Dr. Robert H. E. Elliott of Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center discuss Christianity as it relates to the medical profession. Then groups formed round tables under the leadership of specialists in religious and secular subjects.

"If this meeting did nothing else, it gave men from many parishes the idea that there are some pretty good guys in other parishes," said one man who attended. "Besides, I think we learned a lot."

Ramapo Convocation held a series of area Communion services and breakfasts on Memorial Day. Hudson is struggling to work out a melding of "Men of the Hudson" within ELNY. Manhattan has become interested in exploring the role of the lay reader within the total ministry of the Church and may try to develop special courses for laymen.

Men from all convocations will attend ELNY's first Diocesan event November 25 at the Cathedral. It will be a day-long rally, opened with Holy Communion at 10:30.

To be sure, the Church "gathered" will not be able to live up to full responsibilities of being the Church "scattered" overnight. But if ELNY's first year is a good indication, many Churchmen are on their way! ■

Church, Churchmen Mark 50 Years

Three 50th anniversaries were celebrated this summer — by a priest, by an organist and by a church.

By coincidence, the priest, the Rev. Frederic Wamsley, and the church, St. Paul's New Rochelle, observed theirs simultaneously.

The organist is Paul W. Townsend, who has played at Christ Church, Patterson, since he was sixteen. He was honored at a special service of Holy Communion, followed by a buffet luncheon for 125 parishioners and friends in the nearby Grange hall.

Dr. Wamsley, who was St. Paul's first rector and has been rector emeritus since his retirement in 1953, was guest of honor at a dinner for more than 200 persons.

Acting Mayor Theodore R. Greene read a City Council resolution honoring the priest. Commendations for his services to church and community were lavished upon him by officials of the police and fire departments, the New Rochelle Hospital, the local newspaper and various city churches.

Dr. Wamsley came to New Rochelle as the youngest rector in the Diocese of New York on the day he was ordained to the priesthood, June 11, 1911. He served the church for 42 years, longer than any other ordained minister in the city. Now, at 75, he continues to make parish calls and assist with services. He also visits daily at New Rochelle Hospital.

Dr. Wamsley's life has had more than its share of tragedy. A son was killed in World War II, his wife died in 1951, and two years later another son was killed in an auto crash.

At the buffet for Mr. Townsend, the organist was presented a check from the congregation. There was an anniversary cake, topped with a miniature pipe organ. ■

Hammarskjold Honored

Four thousand persons attended memorial services for Dag Hammarskjold in the Cathedral on October 1. Tributes were delivered by Bishop Donegan and by Henry Cabot Lodge, former U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations.

Diplomats from 39 nations attended the service. They included Mongi Slim, President of the UN General Assembly; Dean Rusk, Secretary of State and V. K. Krishna Menon, India's Minister of Defense.

Bishop Donegan declared that Hammarskjold's death "calls for a new dedication to the principles of the Charter of the United Nations in an hour when its life is imperiled." He paid tribute to the UN statesman for his "fearless leadership, for his dedication to moral law, for his integrity and painstaking honesty in a world replete with suspicion and enmity." The Bishop declared Hammarskjold "had a vocation as a blessed peace-maker. He lived up to his calling. Indeed he lived out his calling right to the end."

Mr. Lodge hailed the UN Secretary-General as a man "great and strong and wise," who "will not die in human memory as long as quality and excellence and self-sacrifice are respected." ■

World Council to Meet in India

Nearly 1,000 Christians representing member denominations of the World Council of Churches will meet in New Delhi, India, from November 18 through 25 for the Third Assembly of the World Council.

This will be the first Assembly to be held in Asia. It will convene in Vigynan Bhavan Conference Hall, which was built by India for a UNESCO conference. Of the 1,000 participants, nearly 635 will be voting delegates from 172 member church organizations.

Previous assemblies were held in 1948 in Amsterdam, and in 1954 in this country, in Evanston, Ill.

Two men from the Diocese of New York will be among the 11 regular delegates representing the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A. They are Dr. James W. Kennedy, Rector of Ascension, Manhattan, and Clifford Morehouse, prominent Episcopal layman who was elected President of the House of Deputies at the 60th General Convention in Detroit.

Dr. Kennedy also will represent the Department of Information of the World Council. ■

Convocation Slates Dinner for Bishop

Dutchess Convocation will hold a reception and dinner for Bishop Donegan at Nelson House, Poughkeepsie, on November 16. Some 300 clerical and lay leaders from 30 parishes and missions in Putnam and Dutchess Counties are expected to attend.

The Rev. Alfred Whisler of Wappingers Falls, Dean of the Convocation, said the event will be purely social, "its purpose simply to demonstrate our loyalty to and affection for Bishop Donegan." The reception is scheduled for 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 8. Both will be quite informal, said Father Whisler.

The event is being sponsored by the Dean and Executive Committee, but the Episcopal Laymen of Dutchess Convocation have made this their special project for the fall. A group from Episcopal Churchwomen will assist.

H.W. Williams is chairman, assisted by Mrs. C. Meredith de la Vergne, Mrs. C. Howard Ellis, Mrs. Joseph Hayworth, Mrs. Robert DeF. Boomer, Mrs. David Dutton, Mrs. E. Matthew Netter, Mrs. Louis A. Doughty, Mrs. M. E. Brownell, Miss Gweneth M. Williams, Clifford Nuhn, C. William Rich, G. C. Sprague, Edward V. Lynch, Theo Evans and John Gardner.

Reservations can be made through the Dutchess Convocation clergy. ■

GFS Special Service Held in Cathedral

Some 350 members of the Girls' Friendly Society from the Dioceses of New York, Newark, and Long Island, marched in procession on October 1 at the Cathedral. The occasion was a service of Thanksgiving to commemorate the 85th anniversary of the Society, and to observe the GFS World Day of Prayer.

Guest speaker was the Very Rev. James F. Hopewell, Dean of Cuttington College, Liberia. Approximately 900 persons attended the service. ■

The Bishop's Message

Another General Convention has passed into history. It was one of accomplishment, and its spirit was excellent. The Church is stronger and more united as a result of the 60th Convention, which will be remembered as "the Ecumenical Convention."

Within recall, no General Convention has made such significant and influential decisions in regard to the Church's ecumenical relationships as the one held in Detroit. Without any of the anticipated controversy, we agreed to enter into full communion with the Philippine Independent Church, and with the Spanish Reformed Church, and the Lusitanian Church of Portugal. We expressed to our Anglican brethren in Ceylon the readiness of our Church to enter into full communion with the Church of Lanka, hoping that certain anomalies, disturbing to some, will be satisfactorily resolved.

We accepted the invitation of the United Presbyterian Church to enter into conversations with the United Presbyterian Church, the Methodist Church, and the United Church of Christ to explore the possibilities of serious discussions that might eventually lead to the formation of a united Church, "truly Catholic, truly Reformed and truly Evangelical."

The Convention gave complete support to the World Council of Churches, and with the request that "our own representatives guard more carefully what they take to be our rightful interests and convictions" also gave support to the National Council of Churches.

What one would normally think of as an almost routine step was in fact one of the most significant actions of the 60th Convention, namely the adoption of the budget. It is a record-breaking budget, the largest ever adopted by the Church, $34,105,522.00 for the next three years.

But the prime significance of this step is not so much in the material realm as in the spiritual one, not so much in what was formally adopted as in the corporate enthusiasm, which, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, united the Convention in a determination to move ahead with the mission of the Church.

The 1960 Convention made it clear that the whole Church wants to advance in its mission at home and abroad; that it wants our Communion to assume a full and responsible share in the Ecumenical Movement; that the Church wants to strengthen itself to reach men and women and boys and girls everywhere with the Good News of the Everlasting Gospel, following the Divine Commission of Our Lord and Saviour.

Praying God's blessing upon you,

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

Meet Mr. President

New York's Clifford Morehouse, President of House of Deputies

What's it like to preside over the Church's huge and sometimes rambunctious House of Deputies — a legislative body half again as large as the House of Representatives?

Clifford P. Morehouse can supply the answer. He's the new President of the House of Deputies, an office which he won by acclamation at the recently concluded 60th General Convention.

It is the highest position a layman can hold in the Church, and Mr. Morehouse is the second ever to hold it. The first layman was the late Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, who served from 1946 to 1949.

Dr. George W. Barrett, Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville, and a member of the New York delegation to General Convention, escorts Clifford P. Morehouse to the speaker's stand of the House of Deputies. Dr. Barrett seconded the nomination of Mr. Morehouse.

Mr. Morehouse, after 11 days as legislative commander-in-chief, admitted that he was tired. He said he flew to Milwaukee directly after the Convention to celebrate his grandson's birthday, and he slept for 24 hours straight. Then he felt fine!

Back in his book-lined office at Morehouse-Barlow Co., Manhattan, where he is Vice President and Secretary, Mr. Morehouse agreeably answered questions about the Detroit sessions. He is a soft-spoken man with a sprinkling of gray in his hair; and he has keen, dark eyes.

Why did many of the delegates describe the Convention as "the most momentous" to be held?

"First, because of its ecumenical emphasis, and second, the adoption of a program and budget that is really forward looking," declared Mr. Morehouse.

Did the President find it difficult to hold the 670-member House together?

"I did not find them unruly," he smiled. "I felt that these deputies were my friends, and therefore very cooperative."

Mr. Morehouse is a calm, self-possessed individual with an attitude of quiet efficiency. Delegates to the Convention reported that he moved through the parliamentary shoals with a deft sense of humor and an expert's knowledge of the procedure. Actually, this ability has made him one of the best known and most highly respected laymen in the Church.

He was born in Milwaukee, Wis., 57 years ago, went to Harvard and then joined the staff of The Living Church, of which his father was editor. When his father died in 1932, Mr. Morehouse succeeded him. During World War II, he volunteered for service in the Marine Corps, and is now a Lieutenant Colonel in the Marine Corps Reserves.

After the war he was editor of the Living Church until 1952, when the magazine was separated from

Unity Talks Wi

"One of the great ecumenical meetings in the history of the Church" is what Bishop Donegan has called the 60th General Convention of the Episcopal Church. The convention, in Detroit, was held September 17-29.

There were 11 all-day sessions. On the first floor of giant Cobo Hall met the 670-member House of Deputies — four laymen and four clergymen from each diocese, one of each from each missionary district. On the second floor met the House of Bishops, composed of 190 bishops of the Episcopal Church. Both houses must concur before any legislation can be passed, as in Congress.

Here are some of the highlights of General Convention.

- Acceptance of the United Presbyterian Church's invitation to join in asking the Methodist Church and the United Church of Christ to explore establishment of an eventual united church. The House of Bishops took unanimous action. In the House of Deputies the vote was far above the necessary two-thirds majority.
- A concordat of full communion with the Philippine Independent Church, the Spanish Reformed Church, and the Lusitianian Church of Portugal.
- Anticipation of the possibility of full communion with the Church of Lanka (Ceylon).
- Rejection of two proposals to drop "Protestant" from the name of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A.
- Rejection of a proposed Book of Propers for Minor Holy Days. This book would have been, in effect, a revision of the Prayer Book.
- Adoption of the National Council program and budget for the next three years. The budget for 1962 is $10,504,760, for 1963, $11,496,615, and for 1964, $12,104,147.

- Election of three new missionary bishops. They are the Rt. Rev. Gonalez-Agueros as Bishop of Cuba, the Rt. Rev. Dillard H. Brown, Jr., as Bishop Coadjutor of Liberia, and the Rt. Rev. Charles P. Gilson as Suffragan Bishop of Honolulu. Bishop Gilson will serve in Taiwan. He was consecrated in Detroit. It was the first time in 30 years that a consecration took place during a Convention.

- Election of Clifford P. Morehouse of New York as President of the House of Deputies.

- Rejection of proposals to withdraw the Protestant Episcopal Church from the National Council of Churches in the U.S.A. and adoption of a resolution calling for a study of the structure, program, and finances of National Council.

- For the first time in the history of the Episcopal Church, the Bishops and Deputies defined "member" and "communicant in good standing."

Members are those persons who are recorded as baptized and, having been baptized, have fulfilled the requirements of the Canon "Of the Due Celebration of Sundays," unless for good cause prevented. Communicants are those who have been confirmed or received by a bishop, and "unless for good cause prevented, have received Holy Communion at least thrice during the next preceding year." This has been interpreted to mean a communicant is to receive Holy Communion at least three times each year.

- Rejection of a proposal to allow women delegates at Convention.

- Adoption of a resolution calling Marxist Communism "a false, atheistic religion," and calling upon the Church to oppose it "by sound teaching and the example of a better way."

- Rejection of a proposal to change the name of the Episcopal Church's National Council to "National Cabinet."

- Endorsement of birth control. In a resolution concerning the world's

Thank Offering Is Largest Ever

United Thank Offering custodians from every diocese and missionary district in the Church laid $4,339,190.18 in offerings upon a golden alms basin held by the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop, at the UTO Presentation in Detroit on Sept. 22.

The Presentation was the high point of the Triennial meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen. This event, attended by delegates from all over the nation, is traditionally held simultaneously with General Convention.

Churchwomen from the Diocese of New York presented $208,231.25 as their Triennial Offering. This figure marks a substantial increase over the previous triennium, when the total was $189,407.77. The five Triennial delegates marched with the eight convention deputies and three bishops from New York in the processional at the opening service in Cobo Hall.

Among the items of business at the Triennial sessions were election of eight women as members-at-large of the General Division of Women's Work, National Council, and the nomination of four women for places on the National Council. One of these was Mrs. Leila Anderson of New York.

The women also received reports from various cooperating agencies of ECW, and heard a number of addresses. Among the speakers was noted anthropologist Dr. Margaret Mead. ■

A Place for Our Own

By the Very Rev. John V. Butler
Dean, Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine

Recently, in one of our suburban areas, an adolescent boy was brought to the attention of his parents as needing assistance for scholastic difficulties. The school counsellor said to the parent, "If you were a Roman Catholic or a Jew, we would know where to refer you for help. But since you are an Episcopalian, we don't know where to refer you."

But we do have a place for our own. It is not, of course, of the same scope and magnitude as those of other religious traditions, but we hope our service will grow in usefulness.

Under the direction of the Dean and the Canon Pastor, the Cathedral Counseling Service is specifically designed to be of assistance to any and all members of the Diocese requiring assistance with emotional problems.

Just what does this mean? It means that any priest of the Diocese may refer for evaluation, psychiatric consultation, and/or pastoral counseling anyone who has emotional problems of such severity that they are interfering with working efficiency and with personal or social adjustment. This would certainly include those facing problems of family and individual and work adjustment beyond an ability to adjust satisfactorily. It would also include those with excessive anxieties, sexual conflicts, and our younger citizens experiencing behavior problems at school and in their community.

The purpose of the Counseling Service is to assist and extend the pastoral functions and duties of the parish priest by offering facilities and services not ordinarily available on a parish level. Such services include the psychiatric consultative services of Dr. Gerald J. Taylor, who maintains regular hours at the Cathedral. It also includes psychological testing when recommended. It includes referral and recommendation to other agencies or clinics when these are indicated. It provides also the opportunity in some instances for continued pastoral counseling by the staff of the Cathedral, and most particularly the Dean, with psychiatric supervision. The Counseling Service never replaces the parish priest; it supplements him. The program, it will be noted, is not limited to psychiatric counseling, but includes counseling on the broadest pastoral basis.

At the present time, the Counseling Service does not offer psychiatric treatment on any regular and continuing basis, although this may be possible in the future. The Counseling Service feels a responsibility for those people referred to it and is concentrating on being able to give a service especially to Church members.

There will always be a place for our own, and the Cathedral, so far as it can, offers this ministry gladly. ■

Miss Irene Henderson, the Director of Christian Education for the Federation of Churches of Rochester and Vicinity since 1954, has been appointed the Associate Director of the Department of Christian Education.

The appointment was announced by the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Jr., Executive Director. He said Miss Henderson will work in all areas covered by the Department, but that she will be particularly concerned with guidance to parishes with Released Time and vacation Church School programs.

She also will do regular parish consultation and visitation for Church School teacher training.

In a letter to diocesan clergy, Father Cragon expressed the hope that all churches will feel free to call upon Miss Henderson for any help needed in the areas mentioned.

The new associate director is a native of Alexandria Bay, N. Y. She was educated in Syracuse, has a bachelor's degree in religious education from Biblical Seminary, New York City, and a master's degree from the School of Education, New York University. In Rochester she was responsible for administration of the weekday religious education program.

She also was director of religious education in Brooklyn, Waterbury, Conn., and Cortland, N. Y. From 1950 to 1954, she was director of children's work for the Council of Churches of Greater Bridgeport, Conn. Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedral Church

In this monthly column, Canon West answers some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

Would Christ be regarded as a Communist in America?

From the point of view of one who regards Calvin Coolidge as dangerously "left wing," I suppose he would be; from the point of view of one who considers the "left" as "center," he would be regarded as too inhibited by compassion. The one thing that is clear is that in the U.S.S.R. he is not regarded as a Communist, nor are any of his followers!

Is a soldier killing an enemy actually a murderer?

The fundamental problem is whether war is ever justified. Were the individual soldier to be killing his own personal enemy he would indeed be a murderer, but if he is only part of a great killing machine then he is nothing other than the extension of the will of a whole nation. He has, in the latter case, no more personal responsibility than the weapon itself. The nation he serves must take the full responsibility for the declaration of war. It was a great general who noted that "War is hell." It is, and in a perfect world there could be no excuse for it. In an imperfect world, however, there are alternatives far worse than war, and we should never permit ourselves to be deceived in this matter. (I should in fairness point out that there are able and highly representative clergy who disagree with me completely. From this point of view, war as a method is so wicked that it completely frustrates any good which might be either gained or preserved.)

Rides Fire Truck, Honored by Town On 90th Birthday

Highland Falls' shiny new fire engine clanged down Main Street and drove all over town one night last August while many a bystander grinned and waved. There, surrounded by a delegation of firemen, was the Rev. Henry Lowndes Drew, rector emeritus of Holy Innocents Church. The firemen were taking him to his 90th birthday party.

At the party Father Drew received a gold chaplain's badge, the first issued by the Department, and a fireman's dress hat. Five years ago, he became the first clergyman ever elected to Department membership.

Mayor Lorentz Graber was among the many community dignitaries who attended the celebration. Letters of congratulation from Bishop Donegan and Bishop Boynton were read.

From the Rev. Wendell Tamburro, present rector of Holy Innocents, Father Drew received $90, one dollar for each year, on behalf of the parish. He also received $57, one dollar for each year of his priesthood, from his many friends in the community. Other gifts were also presented. Father Drew was rector of Holy Innocents for 31 years. He retired in 1956. ■

At Last—A Hospitalization

GOLD STAR — TOTAL ABSTAINERS HOSPITALIZATION POLICY

NO WAITING PERIODS ★ ONLY YOU

To the one American in four who does not drink, we are pleased and proud to offer the Gold Star Total Abstainers Hospitalization Policy which will pay you $100 a week in cash, from your first day in the hospital, and will continue paying as long as you are there, even for life!

If you do not drink and are carrying ordinary hospitalization insurance, you are of course helping to pay for the accidents and hospital bills of those who do drink. Alcoholism is now our nation's #3 health problem, ranking immediately behind heart disease and cancer! Those who drink have reduced resistance to infection and are naturally sick more often and sick longer than those who do not drink. Yet their insurance — UNTIL NOW — cost the same as yours. NOW with the Gold Star Plan, your rates are based on the SUPERIOR HEALTH RECORDS of Non-Drinkers! Why should you help pay for the hospitalization of those who ruin their health by drink? Gold Star rewards you instead of penalizing you for not drinking!

Now, for the first time, you can get the newest and most modern type of hospitalization coverage at an unbelievably low rate because the Gold Star Policy is offered only to non-drinkers. With this policy, you receive $100 a week in cash, from the first day and as long as you remain in the hospital! This money is paid to you in cash to be used for rent, food, hospital or doctor bills — anything you wish. Your policy cannot be cancelled by the company no matter how long you remain in the hospital or how often you are sick. And the present low rate on your policy can never be raised simply because you get old, or have too many claims, but only in the event of a general rate adjustment up or down for all policyholders!

One out of every seven people will spend some time in the hospital this year. Every day over 64,000 people enter the hospital — 47,000 of these for the first time! No one knows whose turn will be next, whether yours or mine. But we do know that a fall on the stairs in your home, or on the sidewalk, or some sudden illness, or operation could put you in the hospital for weeks or months, and could cost thousands of dollars.

THE GOLD STAR PLAN MAKES IT EASY!

With a Gold Star Total Abstainers Hospitalization Policy, you would receive $100 per week in cash, as long as you remain in the hospital. If your hospital stay is less than one week, you still collect at the rate of $14.29 per day. Even if you are already covered by another policy, the Gold Star plan will supplement that coverage and will pay you directly, in addition to your present policy.

This wonderful, generous protection costs only $4 a month for each adult, age 19 through 64, or $40 for twelve full months. For each child under 19 the rate is just $3 for a month's protection. And for each adult of age 65 through 100, the premium is only $6 a month.

And, remember, with Gold Star, the NO-LIMIT Hospital Plan, there is no limit on how long you can stay in the hospital, no limit on the number of times you can collect (and the Company can never cancel your policy), and no limit on age!

DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN, Nationally known preacher, Author and Denominational Leader: "It has been my life-long policy never to give public endorsement to any commercial enterprise, but I am heartily in favor of the principle involved in the Gold Star Plan. It only seems fair and just that those who abstain from alcoholic beverages should not be penalized for those who indulge."

DR. FRANK C. LAUBACH, Author, preacher, former missionary, and internationally known authority on literacy: "All my life it has seemed to me that people who take good care of themselves and do not burn the candle at both ends should not be charged the same premium for insurance as those who are killing themselves by intemperance and excess. This Gold Star Total Abstainers' Policy seems to be exactly what people who do not drink ought to have."

ELNY to Hold Rally Nov. 25

Council members of the Episcopal Laymen of New York and their guests will attend an all-day diocesan rally November 25 at the Cathedral.

Bishop Donegan will celebrate Holy Communion at 10:30 a.m., followed by a general meeting, luncheon and an afternoon discussion session.

Guest speaker will be Michael Budzanoski, of Pittsburgh, Pa., a member of the District Board, United Mine Workers. He is on the Board of Trustees, Diocese of Pittsburgh, and has represented his diocese at General Convention for three consecutive conventions.

He will be introduced by Bishop Wetmore.

The Episcopal Laymen of New York (ELNY) was established by Bishop Donegan last January. Its principal aim is to coordinate and encourage men's activities in this Diocese.

Plans for the organization call for one diocesan event each year. The rally is the first of these. ■

White Plains Parish Buys House to Serve Learning and Living

St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, recently bought a house, and thereby solved three problems. The new property will relieve overcrowded Sunday School rooms, it will provide an apartment for the Rev. William R. Merrill, assistant minister, and one for Herbert E. Breiner, sexton.

The house, a three-story structure, is on a 14,000-square-foot, L-shaped plot adjacent to the church. The sexton will live in the basement and Mr. Merrill on the second floor. The main floor will be used for Church School and Senior High classes.

An impressive growth in Sunday School registration has taken place during the past five years, church officials said. They added that this growth has been the result of a heightened parish concern for Christian education rather than a general population rise in the community. ■

Sew Vestments for Interchurch Center

Eight women of St. Luke's, Katonah, spent two months last summer making Eucharistic vestments to be used in the Chapel of Interchurch Center. The Center, in Manhattan, is headquarters for several denominations, the National and World Councils, and other church groups.

The eight volunteers made four sets of vestments, in red, white, green and violet, and presented them to the Rev. William A. Norgren, Jr., an Episcopalian who is Faith and Order Secretary of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. He has been holding services in the new Center chapel since early in October. The schedule is Holy Communion every Thursday at 8:15 a.m. Services for Saints' and Holy Days are as posted. Cathedral clergy will conduct services from time to time.

The vestments were designed by Graham French of Morehouse-Barlow Co., in consultation with Father Norgren and Mrs. Clifford P. Morehouse of St. Luke's. Materials were given by Mrs. Morehouse and Mrs. John Heuss, president of the New York Altar Guild. Mrs. Morehouse supervised the work.

The finished garments were accepted by Bishop Donegan on behalf of the Cathedral. They will be on loan to Interchurch Center as long as an Episcopal priest conducts services there. A chalice and paten have been loaned by the Cathedral.

Several hundred Episcopalians work at the Center. ■

400 Pounds of Food for a Dollar

If you give just $1 to the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, you provide nearly 400 pounds of Government surplus food for refugees and homeless people both at home and abroad. Of course, $5 means a ton of food!

The reason for this fantastic bargain is that the Federal Government contributes both the food and its transportation overseas. The $5 is used entirely for transportation within the overseas country and for promotion to get more people interested in the program.

Of the $170,000 raised last year, the Presiding Bishop's Fund earmarked some $25,000 for the Share Our Surplus program sponsored by Church World Service, an interdenominational agency. Another $26,000 aided Asians through Church World Service, and $50,000 went to people in the western hemisphere. The Episcopal Dioceses of Texas and West Texas received $2,000 when disaster struck.

THE FACE OF A CHILD

The face of a child, the window of honest emotion — emotion not dimmed by the inhibition that comes with age. But all too seldom are these flashes of naturalness recorded on film. All too seldom does a picture of a child reflect the spirit of a child. The pictures on these two pages are the exception. They are completely candid photographs, taken during Sunday School classes at St. James the Less, Scarsdale. Photographer Charles Steinhacker concealed himself behind a door and then used a telephoto lens to shoot through a glass panel in the door. The pictures are presented here merely to entertain, not to prove anything — except maybe that children are children, even in Sunday School. We assigned the photographer to Scarsdale for one simple reason: he lives there. The children were selected entirely at random.

Home Department Director To Address ECW Meeting

Bishop Corrigan

Miss Wolff

A new triennial period will begin for the Episcopal Churchwomen when they hold their annual Advent meeting and presentation of the United Thank Offering on December 5.

The day will start with Holy Communion at the Cathedral at 10:30 a.m., followed by a box luncheon in Synod House. The meeting will convene at 1.

The ingathering will be the first of three fall and three spring offerings to be received by ECW. The three-year total will be presented, together with thank offerings from all other dioceses of the Church, at the Triennial held simultaneously with the 1964 General Convention.

Preacher at the December 5 service will be the Rt. Rev. Daniel Corrigan, Director of the Home Department, National Council. He will preach on "Thanksgiving is Dangerous."

As head of the Home Department, Bishop Corrigan directs the work of its five divisions: Domestic Missions and Church Expansion, College Work, Armed Forces, Town and Country Work, and Racial Minorities.

Bishop Corrigan had the unusual experience of being elected to two high Church posts on the same day. On February 12, 1958 he was elected Bishop of Quincy, (Ill.) and Suffragan Bishop of Colorado. He accepted the latter post and served until the Presiding Bishop named him to the National Council position in June, 1960.

Mrs. Gurney Williams, ECW Diocesan President, will preside at the meeting. Important business will include the annual vote on pledges for the General Church Program.

Guest speaker will be Miss Carman St. John Wolff, Associate Director of the Department of Christian Education, National Council. Miss Wolff, who until last March was Associate Secretary for Overseas in the Department of Christian Education, has served in both China and Brazil.

During the 1940's, she taught in St. Hilda's School, Wuchang, China, living under both the Communist and Nationalist governments. Beginning in 1951, she headed a woman's auxiliary program in three districts in Brazil. ■

Morehouse —

Morehouse-Barlow Co. (then Morehouse-Gorham). In his present position, he is editor of the Episcopal Church Fellowship Series and the Episcopal Church Annual. He also supervises the company's book publishing operations.

Mr. Morehouse and his wife live in Katonah, where they attend St. Luke's. He is a vestryman at St. Luke's and at Trinity, Manhattan. He has represented the Church at many national and international denominational and interchurch meetings and has written several books, including "An Outline Life of Christ."

What were the liveliest moments of the Convention? The name change proposal and discussion of whether the Church would continue its membership in the National Council of Churches.

"On the National Council issue, we agreed to continue our membership, but asked the Commission on Ecumenical Relations to study our relationship to the Council," he explained. "This was done to clarify the matter for our own people, and also in the hope that the Council itself might exercise greater restraint in some of its pronouncements."

This was the tenth consecutive convention Mr. Morehouse has attended as a deputy. The first, in 1934, at Atlantic City, during the depths of the depression, resulted in the Foreward Movement. He was a member of the original Foreward Movement Commission.

"I think we have been moving forward since then, and I think we moved forward a great deal at this Convention," he said. One of the important areas was in the adoption of a program and budget "that will help us use our resources more adequately to meet the problems of the day both at home and abroad." He added that the contribution of Dr. Theodor Oxholm, Treasurer of the Diocese of New York, "was an outstanding one."

Was Mr. Morehouse satisfied with the way the Convention went?

Yes, in several ways. "Its harmony and the fact that we emerged with a large measure of agreement on matters before us."

Was he disappointed in anything?

Yes. At the failure to change the name of the Church, "or even to authorize a joint committee to study the best way of doing this." He also was sorry that the Convention "failed to express concern of the Church over various matters regarding world peace."

Are his responsibilities as President over now that the Convention has ended?

No. Next he will appoint all the presbyters and laymen to the joint committees and commissions that operate during the three years between General Conventions. He'll do some traveling, give talks here and there and do the administrative work his job calls for. This month he will attend the World Council of Churches Assembly in New Delhi, India.

"That will keep me busy for a bit," he grinned. ■

N.Y. Youths At Detroit Meeting

Four young people from the Diocese of New York were emissaries to the 60th General Convention in Detroit. Two others served as delegates to the North American Ecumenical Youth Assembly and the Convocation of the Episcopal Young Churchmen, August 16-23 in Ann Arbor, Mich. All six were sponsored by the diocesan Department of Christian Education.

Attending the Ann Arbor program were Barbara Gray of Holy Innocents, Highland Falls, and Robert Erikson, of St. John's, New City. They were accompanied by the Rev. Richard J. Kirk of St. Mark's, Yonkers. In a report to the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Director of Christian Education, Father Kirk said he believed the conference was "very worth while because it helped the young people better see their Church in the context of American Christianity and modern culture."

The delegates to General Convention, shown in the accompanying photograph, participated in the Youth Weekend, during which the Rt. Rev. E. R. Wiskham of Manchester, England, and the Most Rev. Howard H. Clark, Primate of Canada, were the special speakers. ■

The Bulletin is sometimes asked to publicize Hollywood's so-called religious movies. We have always turned down these requests, one reason being that we felt the producers were merely "using" religion.

Recently, however, we attended an advance showing of a film so outstanding that we feel compelled to urge our readers' attendance.

It's called "Question 7" and is a full-length feature produced for Lutheran Film Associates by Louis de Rochemont. This is the team that gave us "Martin Luther."

"Question 7" is based on actual incidents in East Germany and was filmed in a village five miles inside West Germany.

The plot concerns Communist harrassment of the Christian religion, as personified in a Lutheran pastor. And it concerns his talented son, torn between giving lip service to the Communists and getting ahead — or standing up for his principles and being shunted off to oblivion.

Much of the power of "Question 7" results from its under-playing, a technique uncommon in Hollywood. There are no beatings, no torture, no violence at all — just steady and diabolical mental harassment.

See "Question 7." It's a picture you will remember.

DECEMBER 1961

Niebuhr Colloquium Draws Interest of Many Scholars

A colloquium devoted to the writings of Reinhold Niebuhr was held at the Cathedral on October 20 with approximately 75 scholars, statesmen and religious leaders from all over the United States and other parts of the world in attendance.

The lectures and discussions were sponsored by the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral. The Rev. Harold M. Landon, Canon Precenter, was in charge of arrangements. Bishop Donegan welcomed the gathering.

First to speak was Dr. Paul Tillich of Harvard University who has achieved his own reputation as one of this era's great theologians. His topic was "Sin and Grace in the Theology of Reinhold Niebuhr."

Following tea in the dining room of Cathedral House, the speaker was Dr. John C. Bennett, Dean of the Faculty and Reinhold Niebuhr Professor of Social Ethics at Union Theological Seminary. He spoke on "Biblical Faith and Social Ethics in the Life and Thought of Reinhold Niebuhr." A dinner at 6:30 p.m. was served in Synod House undercroft.

The evening lecture was delivered by Dr. Hans J. Morgenthau, Professor of Political Science and Director of the Center for the Study of American Foreign and Military Policy, University of Chicago. His subject was "The Influence of Reinhold Niebuhr in American Political Life and Thought."

Discussion periods followed the lectures. According to Dean Butler, Reinhold Niebuhr was chosen as the subject for this colloquium because of his profound influence upon the religious life and thought of our time. "His prophetic insights into the nature of the crisis of history have guided the thought and action of a whole generation," he said. "His book 'The Nature and Destiny of Man' is one of the great books of our day and will continue to influence theological thought for generations."

$50,000 Granted For New Center

The Church of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan, has been granted $50,000 toward construction of a $200,000 community center next to the church. With this gift, construction money on hand is $158,000.

The grant was made by the nation's Episcopal Churchwomen from their $4,339,190 United Thank Offering at the recent Triennial in Detroit. This is the first time that a UTO grant has been made in the Diocese of New York. A check for the $50,000 has already been received by the church.

Demolition of buildings on the construction site was begun October 30; and completion of the new structure is scheduled for next June.

St. Matthew and St. Timothy, of which the Rev. James A. Gusweller is rector, is on West 84th St. Father Gusweller is well known for his campaign to improve housing conditions in the area.

The new community center will have two stories and a basement. Classrooms and a gym will be in the basement. The street floor will contain a library, nursery, meeting room and housing clinic offices. The rectory and a conference room will be on the top floor. ■

The Bishop's Christmas Message

A great Bishop of the last century, in preaching a Christmas sermon, pointed out that it was "a multitude of the heavenly host" which cried forth "peace on earth, good will towards men", and then he went on to say that most men missed the real significance. "Host", both in the Old Testament and in the New Testament, means army, and it is only a powerful army which is in a position to say "peace on earth." Our ability, yours and mine, to say and mean "peace on earth" is in direct proportion to our strength.

I would be the last person to say that "strength" ruled out just plain physical strength, but I would, I hope, be one of the first to affirm that physical strength is not the most important strength that we have. The true might of our nation lies in its spiritual strength — in the idealism, the integrity, and intelligence of its citizens. A few Sundays ago I was deeply moved to hear the Prime Minister of one of the world's great countries, himself not a Christian, say that the real strength of America is in the ideals of its people.

We Americans are frequently criticized for our insistence on our own high standards of living. This criticism can be justified only when you and I fail to recognize that the real criterion of our standard of living is the conviction that God, by sending His Son in the fullness of time, has made it possible for all men everywhere to claim the dignity of eternal significance.

This is why we have missions — to make this fact known. This is why at Christmas you and I attend Divine Service to voice our thanksgiving. In the words of one of the greatest of the saints, "God became man in order that man might become God." This is the message of Christmas. Believe it! Enjoy it!

I wish you a Blessed Christmas and God's guidance and protection throughout the coming year.

Faithfully yours,

Horace W.B. Donegan

As this scene from "Meet the Real St. Nicholas" shows, the famous figure so closely associated with Christmas was a bishop. Actors are members of St. Mark's, Mt. Kisco, where the pageant was presented. Photographs by Smallman for Woman's Day magazine.

WHO was the real Saint Nicholas?

NO, VIRGINIA, the feast of St. Nicholas is not December 25th. It's December 6th.

That was one of the points brought out to the children of St. Mark's, Mt. Kisco, in a pageant produced at the church last December. The idea was to put Santa Claus in his rightful place.

The Rev. Marcus Hall, Rector of St. Mark's, had been disturbed for some time about the confusion in children's minds about St. Nicholas, or "Santa Claus." So he did some research on St. Nicholas and gave his findings to Hilda Cole Espy, a professional writer who volunteered to weave the material into a children's play.

The result was a presentation called "Meet the Real St. Nicholas." Children of the parish appeared in short scenes, while two young narrators explained how the real St. Nicholas got changed into the Santa Claus we know today.

St. Nicholas was born in the late third century in Myra, Asia Minor, a peninsula which is now part of Turkey.

He and his family were Christians. It is said that his father was moderately wealthy and that Nicholas felt compassion for the many poor people in his village. He was especially moved by the plight of one particular family, but he wanted to help them without their learning who their benefactor was.

The houses of the poorer people at that time were very low and, instead of a chimney, there was only a hole in the roof. Late at night, when all were asleep and the fire had died, Nicholas is said to have thrown three bags of gold into the hole in the roof and down into the hearth. Despite his attempts at secrecy, however, his identity became known and news of his generosity spread.

Later, Nicholas became the Bishop of Myra. He was a forceful and active man; and accounts of his accomplishments as a bishop spread over the area. Today, legend and fact are difficult to separate.

But the legend of St. Nicholas that spread the widest was that of the three bags of gold. In Holland, Sinter Klaus (Dutch for St. Nicholas) was said to leave presents in the children's wooden shoes if they placed them near the fireplace. This joyous event naturally took place on December 6, the feast of St. Nicholas.

The Dutch brought the St. Nicholas Day observance with them to New Amsterdam. When wooden shoes were no longer worn in the colonies, they were replaced at the hearth with stockings. And, over the years, Sinter Klaus became known as Santa Claus.

The present popular conception of Santa Claus arose largely from a poem, "A Visit from St. Nicholas," written in 1822. The author was Clement Clarke Moore, a professor at General Theological Seminary and a leading layman in several Manhattan Episcopal churches.

Though "A Visit from St. Nicholas" is an important chapter in the changing image of St. Nicholas, this was not intended by Clement Moore. He wrote the poem only for the entertainment of his six children.

Santa Claus will be with us for a long time, no doubt. And children will think of what they will get from him. But, at St. Mark's, Mt. Kisco, the children may also think of the real St. Nicholas, think of giving instead of getting. ■

Dutch children leave their shoes for a visit from St. Nicholas. As time went on, stockings replaced wooden shoes as the receptacle for St. Nicholas' gifts. Sets for the colorful pageant were built by the St. Mark's Players, a drama group in the church.

Campus Body Becomes Part Of Council

The National Canterbury Association, an organization of Episcopal student groups on 600 college campuses, has become the National Canterbury Committee of the National Commission on College Work. The commission is an advisory body to the Church's National Council. As a standing committee, the new body will no longer function as an independent national organization. Rather, it will serve as liaison between campus units and the Commission on College Work.

Unlike the former National Canterbury Association, the Committee will not hold conventions, will have very limited administrative duties, and will not pass legislation affecting individual college units. The Committee will "seek to be a channel of communication between students and the Commission on College Work."

First major project of the committee will be publication of a new Episcopal student magazine tentatively called Crossways. In the Diocese of New York, information on distribution of the magazine may be secured from Miss Susan Randell, c/o Hunter College Protestant Association, 49 East 65th St., N. Y. C. Telephone RE 4-6800. ■

The annual mail appeal from the Roman Catholic Boys Town prompts us to point out that there are also Episcopal homes for boys. Because they are not as well known (amazing what a movie can do) and because their fund raising is not as massive as Boys Town, the Episcopal homes depend largely on Episcopalians. So, if you want to make a Christmas gift to a boys home, we suggest you send it to one of the following:

Mr. Muncaster Is Honored For 50 Years at Cathedral

Fifty years ago, a young carpenter came to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine to help build the first pulpit. He's worked for the Cathedral ever since.

This is Thomas Muncaster, who was honored by the Bishop at an anniversary party October 13 in Cathedral House. There were about 50 at the party, most of the people who work on the close for the Cathedral and for the Diocese. Included among the guests were the 16 men and women Mr. Muncaster supervises as the Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds. He's held this position for nearly all the 50 years he's been with the Cathedral.

In 1911, when Mr. Muncaster was employed, the Cathedral consisted only of the crossing, the chancel, the sanctuary and two chapels. The nave, which will seat 8,000, wasn't started until 14 years later. The only other building on the grounds was the New York Training School for Deaconesses, which now houses the Diocesan offices.

You don't have to talk to Mr. Muncaster long before you detect a slight burr. Born in Scotland, he grew up just across the Tweed River in England and came to this country when he was 18.

As Bishop Donegan noted smilingly at the anniversary party, Mr. Muncaster has seen Bishops come and go. He's worked under Bishops Greer, Burch, Manning and Gilbert and now Bishop Donegan.

"Tell you something," the bright-eyed and soft-spoken superintendent said with a grin, "I think I'm the only person who's been married twice in St. Ambrose's Chapel." A widower, he married the present Mrs. Muncaster 18 years ago. For the past ten years, they've lived in an apartment on the top floor of the Diocesan Offices Building. ■

All Saints Buys Parcel of Land For New Church

All Saints, Staten Island, has purchased two and a half acres on which to build a new church. The land is in the Westerleigh section of the island and is bordered by Victory Blvd., Wooley Ave. and Crystal Ave.

No date has been set for start of construction, but preliminary architectural plans have been drawn.

All Saints has been without its own church since December, 1958, when fire destroyed its historic building at Mariner's Harbor. The parish then rented a former Methodist church, which was sold in late October to the Spanish Christian Mission. The parish is now worshipping in the chapel at Snug Harbor, a home for retired seamen. The church to be built will be about a mile and a half from the original one at Mariner's Harbor. ■

The Clergy Conference

About 225 men attended the 32nd annual Clergy Conference of the Diocese of New York.

The conference, held October 10 at Tuxedo Park, began with lunch and ended after dinner. The conference itself was held at Tuxedo Club, with meals at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center.

Principal speaker was Bishop Donegan, who reviewed a number of canons (church laws), especially those relating to marriage.

Bishop de Mel of Kurunagala, Ceylon, in an off-the-record speech, outlined trends and probable developments in his and nearby countries.

Also on the program was the Rev. Dr. Reamer Kline, President of Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, N. Y. Bard, Dr. Kline noted, has in its student body double the number of Episcopalians it had last year. Also, the freshman class and the student body are the largest in the school's history. ■

ECW Treasurer Explains Diocesan Finance Program

By Mrs. Harold M. Linstedt
ECW Diocesan Treasurer

Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of New York each year pledge themselves to help two important aspects of the Church's work. These are the general Church program and the port and immigration work undertaken by the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society.

A vote on both pledges is taken at the ECW diocesan meeting held each Advent. For 1961 the pledges are $35,000 toward the Church's budget for general program and $4,550 for port and immigration.

Each branch of ECW is asked to help fulfill the pledge for general program by giving either to "budget undesignated" or "budget designated."

The former can be used by National Council as it chooses. The latter must be used for whatever work the branch has designated, provided that this work has been included in the budget of the general Church program. Funds given in either category count toward the missionary quota of the church to which the ECW branch belongs.

The port and immigration allotment is called the Christian Social Service pledge. This year, $1,200 will go to Miss Alice Palmer, retired worker, as a pension, and $3,350 toward the salary of Miss Dorothy Bigelow, the present administrator. Each branch has an obligation to fulfill this pledge, but it does not count on the Church's quota.

At this writing, neither pledge has been fully met. It is hoped that this article will alert each ECW branch that the year is fast drawing to a close!

People sometimes ask, "How does a group of women in a parish or mission become a branch?" Easily! By paying dues to the Diocesan Expense Fund each year. There is no set sum, but $5.00 is the minimum.

Each branch should also contribute to the Convention and Conference Fund, especially this year, when we have had five delegates to the Triennial.

Many phases of the Church's work are aided by ECW, including Youth and College Work, Church Periodical Club, Church-related hospitals, foreign and domestic missions, work with the blind, and our own diocesan agencies such as Youth Consultation Service. Donations to these activities, as well as other special gifts, may be sent through the diocesan ECW treasurer.

THE QUEEN'S CHAPLAIN

THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND probably knew that the Chaplain at Windsor, the Rev. Edwin J. G. Ward, would make an excellent ambassador. But his visit to New York this fall was Bishop Donegan's idea.

Chaplain Ward came. He saw the Diocese of New York, virtually from end to end, and, like Caesar, he conquered. Only in this case the victory represented a new and agreeable link with the Church of England for all who met this handsome, scholarly 42-year old chaplain.

Chaplain Ward is at All Saints, a small private chapel at Windsor, 22 miles from London. The Chapel is on the front lawn of the Royal Lodge, now the private home of the Queen Mother. Windsor Castle is three miles away on the 4,800-acre estate.

The Chapel was built in 1861 under Queen Victoria's direction. When the present Queen's mother and father, then the Duke and Duchess of York, rebuilt the Royal Lodge as their country home, they naturally used the Chapel. When the Duke became King, he did much to improve the building. Thus, the little church came to mean a great deal to young Princess Elizabeth and her sister Princess Margaret.

Now, all three households of the Royal Family, that of the Queen, the Queen Mother and Princess Margaret, worship in Windsor Chapel nearly half of the Sundays in the year.

Since it is a private Chapel, All Saints cannot have a vicar or rector. So the Queen appoints a chaplain to do what a rector ordinarily would do. The chaplain ministers not only to the Royal Family but also to the 1,000 other people who live and work on the Windsor estate.

In 1955, the Queen appointed Chaplain Ward, a native of Australia who was educated at Cambridge. His father, the Rev. Canon F. G. Ward, was rector of St. John's Church in Canberra, Australian Capital Territory.

During his one-month visit in the Diocese of New York, Chaplain Ward admitted that people asked him a mass of questions, first, about the Queen, and second, about the Church of England.

Questions about the Queen he found hard to answer, without invading what is her simple basic right — that of privacy.

The Chaplain feels that his dealings with the Royal Family are the happier in that he sees them informally as parishioners.

"They are thoroughly representative of what a Christian family should be," he reported.

The Royal pew is within the chancel, on the Epistle side of the Chapel, and obliquely to the left of Chaplain Ward as he preaches.

After the service, the Queen talks to people she knows — and she knows most of the worshippers. Since the Chapel seats only 150, the congregation must be restricted to those who live and work on the estate, plus a few of the old, local families who have been worshipping there for generations. There are three services each Sunday.

One of the most popular summer visitors has been Bishop Donegan, who is "a great and good friend of the Church and of the Royal Family." Chaplain Ward said the Bishop has preached at Windsor each summer for some five years. "The Church of England is drawn closer to the Episcopal Church in America through the Bishop — through his participation at Lambeth and through his more informal visits," said the Chaplain. He considers this personal link between the Church in England and America to be very valuable.

Concerning his experiences here, the Chaplain reported considerable misunderstanding about what is meant by the established Church of England. "Of course, you are governed by Parliament and by the Queen?" people asked.

"Not at all," he would reply. "In fact, the Church is remarkably free to get on with its job." It is true that important clergy appointments are made by the Crown with the counsel of the Prime Minister, but "he takes his cue from men of the Church." The choice is really within the Church, Chaplain Ward insisted.

He praised the Church in America for "your general emphasis on an educated clergy and an educated laity." Also, "one can't help being struck with the remarkably efficient organization which is not just a good business set-up, but something far more significant." People here seem to be much more enthusiastic about church work, he observed.

"In England, many people take the Church and its services for granted. Seventy per cent of the people are baptized members, but only 15 per cent of these take their memberships seriously.

"In England, a parish is a civil, geographical unit as well as ecclesiastical; so the parish priest, being responsible for all who live in the parish, spends much of his time ministering to those who are outside the active fellowship of the Church.

"In America, some of this work is taken off the priest's shoulders by a more vital laity."

In England people know they have a right to the Church's services, but they largely take the Church for granted, Chaplain Ward continued. He said they have little spiritual vitality or real dedication.

"Furthermore, we have lived on the generosity of our forefathers for generations. For many years, the average person has given little. As a result, there is something of a financial crisis."

In many places, he admitted, clergy like Canon Ernest W. Southcott are finding the answer. Parishes are "coming alive" and both clergy and laity are becoming more educated to today's needs. "But the process is slow," said the Chaplain.

During his visit here, he preached at the Cathedral, Manhattan's Ascension, St. James' and St. Martin's; St. John's, Yonkers; St. Andrew's, Hartsdale, and St. John's, Tuckahoe. He attended a clergy conference and a Diocesan Council meeting, and he was the Bishop's guest at many of his administrative meetings. "You probably know more about this Diocese than many of its members," the Bishop finally told him with a grin.

The Chaplain's wife joined him late in October. From here the couple flew to San Francisco for a short visit to the West Coast. Next stop was to be New Zealand, then Australia. They will then spend ten days with Bishop De Mel in Ceylon. By Christmas, the Wards expect to be back at Windsor with their three children. ■

St. Paul's Chapel Officially Gets 'Landmark' Title

St. Paul's Chapel, the oldest public building on Manhattan Island, has been designated a "Registered National Historic Landmark" by the National Park Service of the U. S. Department of the Interior.

St. Paul's, located near City Hall, is the original building on the site. It was built 195 years ago, in 1766.

A certificate naming the pre-Revolutionary structure as an historical landmark was put on view at the chapel during a 195th anniversary service October 29. The Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish, of which St. Paul's is a part, preached at the service. The celebrant was the Rev. Robert C. Hunsicker, Vicar of the Chapel.

Also at the anniversary service, a new ivory-toned damask frontal, richly embroidered with the shield of the Chapel, was used at the high altar for the first time. It is the gift of the weekday congregation and other friends of the Chapel. ■

New Book Offers Lectures From 3 Schools of Worship

The lectures given at three Schools of Worship (1958-59-60) have been published in book form by Seabury Press. Title of the new 210-page book is "Living Thankfully." Price is $3.75.

The School of Worship, held annually, is sponsored by the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of New York.

"Living Thankfully" is a compilation of twelve essays on the sacraments and the sacramental life of the Church. The editor is the Rev. Harold R. Landon, Canon Precentor of the Cathedral.

In the preface, Canon Landon notes that there are very few single books dealing with all the sacraments, "and this book has the practical advantage of having been prepared for lay people."

The book is expected to be especially useful to Confirmation classes, inquirers, and study groups.

"Living Thankfully" has four main sections. The first, The Preparation for Sacramental Living, includes Holy Baptism, by the Rev. Samuel J. Wylie, Rector of the Church of the Advent, Boston; Preparing for the Sacramental Life, by Mrs. Dora P. Chaplin, Assistant Professor of Pastoral Theology at General Theological Seminary; and Confirmation, by the Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral.

The second section is entitled God's Holy Communion with His People. It includes The Knowledge of the Risen Lord and The Communion, by Canon West; and The Heavenly Banquet and The Holy Sacrifice, by the Rev. Cyril C. Richardson, Washburn Professor of Church History and Director of Graduate Studies at Union Theological Seminary.

In His Hand, the third section, has The Assuring Hand: Absolution, by the Rev. Leslie J. Lang, Rector of St. Peter's Westchester Square, the Bronx; The Healing Hand: Unction, by the Rev. John Ellis Large, until recently Rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Manhattan and now Vicar of St. Boniface, Sarasota, Fla.; Joining Hands: Holy Matrimony, by the Rev. Thomas van B. Barrett, Rector of St. John's, Tallahassee, Fla.; and Apostolic Hands: Holy Order, by Canon West.

The final section is The Life of Thankfulness. The single essay is Living Eucharistically, by the Rev. John B. Coburn, Dean and Professor of Pastoral Theology at the Episcopal Theological School.

"Living Thankfully" is the second in a series of Cathedral Books. The first, "This Church of Ours", was published in 1958. It was edited by the Rev. Howard A. Johnson, Canon Theologian of the Cathedral. The foreword was by the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Bishop of New York. ■

United Thank Offering Total Hits New High

"We rejoice that the gift of women in the Diocese of New York was $208,238.25 in the Church-wide United Thank Offering presented at the Triennial," said Mrs. William E. Leidt of Scarsdale, retiring UTO treasurer. The total offering, from all parishes across the nation, was $4,339,190.81.

Mrs. Leidt has prepared a report showing how the participation of each Convocation in this Diocese contributed to the total, and in an accompanying statement she has presented a tribute and a challenge to all Churchwomen.

"A happy record is made in the participation of 10,290 women in the last year of the Triennium," said Mrs. Leidt. "The number sharing in several parishes which take part only in the spring was added to the Advent report to reach this long-sought level of participation — 395 plus 9,895.

"The Ingathering for Advent, 1960, with 9,895 sharing in it, and the Spring, 1961, Ingathering, with 9,612 taking part, both exceed the previous high of 9,451 made in the spring of 1958.

"The realization that there are more than 40,000 women in the Diocese makes us recognize that this year's accomplishment, fine as it is, can be only a milestone on the way to the record we strive for, the participation of all thankful women in the Diocese.

"The task of being your Diocesan United Thank Offering chairman has been a privilege highly valued. To all custodians and convocation UTO officers go my most affectionate thanks for your cooperation and your inspired work. The fine report which appears below is your accomplishment."

Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd of Chappaqua is the new UTO treasurer. She will serve for the next three years.

The Advent Ingathering of the United Thank Offering was held on Tuesday, December 5, in the Cathedral at 10:30 a.m. The occasion marked the first Ingathering of the new Triennium, the three-year period which ends with the Triennial meeting and General Convention in 1964. ■

. . . in brief

■ TWO PARISHES in Manhattan have discontinued pew rentals. They are Transfiguration (The Little Church Around the Corner), which made the change on October 15, and St. Thomas, November 5.

In a letter to parishioners, the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, Rector of St. Thomas, remarked that "in the long run, the freeing of the pews will help to sustain and possibly augment the rate of growth both in membership and Sunday congregations."

Pew rental was traditional in many Episcopal churches and constituted a major source of financial support for a great number of years. Today, however, very few churches in this Diocese have rented or owned pews.

■ TWO MEN from the Diocese of New York have been elected class presidents at General Theological Seminary. They are Jeremy W. Bond, St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, permanent president of the senior class, and Stewart C. Zabriskie, St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, president of the middle class.

This year's enrollment at General is 192. There are students from 53 of the 101 dioceses and missionary districts of the Episcopal Church. Canon West of the Cathedral delivered the sermon at recent matriculation exercises.

■ THE RECTOR of St. Michael's, Manhattan, the Rev. William F. Corker, recently was presented a scroll by Metropolitan Leonty, Archbishop of New York, Primate of the Russian Orthodox Greek Catholic Church of America.

The scroll was given in recognition of the hospitality which St. Michael's has extended to St. Seraphim Church. This Russian Orthodox congregation has maintained a chapel and other facilities in St. Michael's parish house for the past 10 years. Metropolitan Leonty made the presentation at a special anniversary service.

■ ELECTED to the Board of Trustees of General Theological Seminary was Edwin F. Russell of Christ Church, Bronxville. Mr. Russell is a partner in the Brooklyn law firm of Cullen and Dykman. He is Counsel for the Village of Bronxville and is a warden at Christ Church.

■ ST. GEORGE'S, Manhattan, honored its Rector Emeritus, the Rev. Karl Reiland, at a parish reception following 10:30 a.m. services on October 22. The occasion was Dr. Reiland's 90th birthday. Approximately 400 persons attended the reception at which Dr. Reiland blew out the candles on a large birthday cake. He served as Rector of St. George's from 1912 to 1936. ■

Major Renovation Work in Progress In Manhattanville

The 51-year-old church building of St. Mary's Manhattanville, is undergoing its first major renovation in many years. Work on the uptown Manhattan church is expected to be completed by Christmas.

Cost of the project, which was authorized and is being directed by the Diocese, is $25,000. St. Mary's is an assisted parish, meaning that it is partly supported by Diocesan funds. The Rev. Richard E. Gary is priest-in-charge.

The improvements include repointing and washing the brick walls inside the church, vacuum cleaning the ceiling, washing and treating the interior trusses, and painting or varnishing all doors, trim and plaster.

In the undercroft, an acoustical ceiling will be installed; and an old wooden floor will be replaced by cement topped with asphalt tile. Fittings will be installed to accommodate curtain dividers. Miscellaneous repairs are also planned. ■

Bishop Asks Women to Aid Vital Chaplaincy Service

The important service of Episcopal chaplains in hospitals and other public institutions of the Diocese was stressed by Bishop Donegan in an address at the second anniversary luncheon of the Woman's Council of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society.

The luncheon, attended by more than 250 persons, was held October 30 at the Savoy-Hilton Hotel. Bishop Donegan said that a chaplain's ministry "is seen in its stark reality by picturing a rector of a parish of some 500 communicants, every one of whom is sick, discouraged, distressed or in some serious trouble."

He said, "We would be reluctant to impose on a parish clergyman the pastoral burdens carried by most of the Society's 37 staff and associate chaplains," and consequently, "I can think of but a few things more vital to which a woman of the Church could dedicate herself than to a strong consecrated Woman's Council to help the Society's chaplains minister to their charges more adequately."

The Bishop asked women from Westchester to help the Society establish at Grasslands a third center of Clinical Pastoral Training. The Society now sponsors two such centers, one at Bellevue Hospital and one at the New York City Correctional Institution for Men on Rikers Island.

Also addressing the luncheon was Dr. Oscar K. Diamond, Director of Manhattan State Hospital. He declared that isolation of state mental institutions from community life has ended. Patients increasingly participate in outside functions; and community organizations and volunteers bring the world into the therapeutic life of the hospital.

The Woman's Council, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Thomas F. Vietor of Manhattan, has groups of volunteers in each of the seven Convocations. They act as chaplain's aides in most of the 36 public institutions in which the Society sponsors a chaplain. ■

Convocation Speakers Tell About Convention

More than 1,300 clergymen and parishioners attended the Diocese's seven Convocation meetings on Sunday, October 29. Theme of all the meetings was Highlights of the General Convention. The main speakers were the three bishops and four of the deputies to Convention.

All seven speakers dealt with the significant achievements of the Convention. They emphasized in particular the ecumenical aspects of the Detroit sessions. Acceptance of the United Presbyterian Church's invitation to join in unity talks with the Methodist Church and the United Church of Christ was discussed in every Convocation.

Other topics which received considerable attention were the new definition of "member" and "communicant in good standing," the question of membership in the National Council of Churches of Christ, and the concordat of full communion with the Philippine Independent Church, the Spanish Reformed and Lusitanian Churches.

Bishop Donegan was the speaker in Manhattan, where the meeting was held at Heavenly Rest. The Bishop spoke during a service of Evening Prayer. A coffee hour followed.

In the Bronx, the Convocation met at St. David's, where the Rev. George W. Barrett, Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville, a Convention deputy, was the speaker. Evening Prayer was followed by a special women's program on the Episcopal Churchwomen's Triennial held in Detroit at the same time as General Convention. Miss Alice Wheeler, ECW Convocation Chairman for the Bronx, was the speaker. A coffee hour followed.

Bishop Boynton spoke at the Richmond meeting, held at Christ Church. Evening Prayer began with a procession of massed choirs and vestrymen from the ten Richmond churches. A 15-minute hymn sing was led by the Rev. Charles Brieant, Assistant Minister and Organist at St. Mary's. A buffet supper for the clergy and their wives was held in the rectory after the meeting.

In Westchester the meeting was held at St. Bartholomew's, White Plains. The program opened with a hymn sing conducted by the Rev. G. Clayton Melling, Rector of St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck. The Convocation voted to endorse sections of the Rourke Report which call for establishment of an alcoholic ward and clinic at Grasslands Hospital. Following a service of Evening Prayer, Clifford Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies of General Convention, addressed the group.

The Rev. John A. Bell, Rector of Incarnation, Manhattan, was the Convention deputy who addressed the Dutchess Convocation at Zion, Wappingers Falls. At the service of Evening Prayer, a Convocation-wide offering was received to aid the rebuilding of St. Mary's in the Highlands, Cold Spring, which burned last summer. The offering totaled $5,800 with more reportedly on the way. Gerald Sprague, Chairman of the Episcopal Laymen of Dutchess Convocation, presented a report on forthcoming plans.

Hudson Convocation held its meeting at St. John's, Cornwall, where the speaker was Theodor Oxholm, Treasurer of the Diocese of New York. A service of Evensong preceded his talk, and a reception in the parish house followed.

In Ramapo, Bishop Wetmore addressed the Convocation at St. Francis, Sloatsburg. In addition, Mrs. Ralph F. Stott, vice president in charge of public relations for the Episcopal Churchwomen, gave a report and showed slides of the Triennial. The meeting was followed by the service of Compline. Refreshments were served in the parish house.

The gathering in Manhattan was attended by 275 persons; Bronx, 100; Richmond, 450; Westchester, 150; Dutchess, 150; Hudson, 80; and Ramapo, 150. ■

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West

In this monthly column, Canon West answers some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

What does Advent mean?

It means "coming." If you read the Collects for this Season of the Church Year, you will discover that the "coming" referred to is the Second Coming — when Christ, after the end of the world and the end of time as we know it, will deliver the whole of redeemed creation up to the Father, "that God may be all in all." It is a solemn season but not a fasting one, according to the Book of Common Prayer.

Medieval piety treated it as a little Lent devoted to preparation for Christmas, but this one-sided notion was subsumed into our understanding of Advent as a preparation for the end of the world, and incidentally, a preparation for the Lord's endless coming anew at Christmas.

The ancient Church had in the course of its Liturgy a phrase which makes this point clear. At the culmination of the process of consecrating the Elements, the recognition of the Divine Presence was voiced in the words, "He who will come, comes."

It is to be remembered that in our own Liturgy, note of this is taken in the phrase which makes it clear that the Blessed Sacrament of Holy Communion is to serve us only "until his coming again."

Just as the Christian life is a devout essay into becoming what we are, so Advent is a liturgical and devotional essay into the last days which are always in a mystical sense, already upon us. For the devout Churchman the A-Bomb is horrible not because it might end the world but because it is intended to hurt people. The most devout and joyous prayer of the Apostolic Age was Maranatha — "our Lord, come!"

Bishop Donegan Named By St. Luke's Hospital

Bishop Donegan will serve as honorary chairman of the Dual Century Fund Drive announced recently by St. Luke's Hospital. The campaign goal is $11,500,000 for the rebuilding and expansion of a part of the hospital's facilities.

St. Luke's Hospital will build a new Woman's Hospital to replace a structure which has stood at 110th Street and Amsterdam Avenue for more than 50 years. It will also build a Research and Special Services Center, a 10-story building devoted to administration and research. It is to be one of the key structures in the hospital's long-range plans.

Jarvis Cromwell, President of St. Luke's Hospital, announced the opening of the Dual Century Drive at a reception and dinner for 300 invited guests at the Pinnacle Club on November 10. The name "Dual Century" represents the 200 years of service Woman's Hospital and St. Luke's have rendered to New York City prior to their consolidation in 1953. A. Varick Stout, senior partner of Dominick and Dominick, investment bankers, and vice-president of St. Luke's, is general chairman of the fund drive.

St. Luke's was founded in 1850 by an Episcopal clergyman, the Rev. William Augustus Muhlenberg, Rector of the Church of the Holy Communion. From the beginning, patients were welcomed without respect to race or religion. Today, although St. Luke's is not supported financially by the Diocese, it continues to reflect the Episcopal tradition. ■

Diocesan Schools Festival Attracts 3,000 at Cathedral

The annual Diocesan Schools Festival was held at the Cathedral on October 29 at 4 p.m. with a dozen day and boarding schools participating. Guest preacher was the Rev. Darwin Kirby, Jr., Rector of St. George's Church, Schenectady. Approximately 3,000 attended the service.

Boarding schools which took part were the Cathedral Choir School and St. Thomas Church Choir School, both Manhattan; St. Mary's and St. Peter's Schools, both Peekskill; the Greer School, Hope Farm; and the Malcolm Gordon School, Garrison-on-Hudson.

Day schools represented were Manhattan's Trinity, St. Luke's, St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's, Grace Church, and Church of the Heavenly Rest; and Church of the Mediator School, the Bronx. ■

Three Clergymen Write Books

Books by two rectors in Manhattan and a former Dean of the Cathedral have been published recently. The rectors are the Rev. Terence J. Finlay, St. Bartholomew's, and the Rev. James W. Kennedy, Ascension. The other clergyman is the Rt. Rev. James A. Pike, now Bishop of California.

Reviews of the three books follow:

THE MOST COMFORTABLE SACRAMENT by James W. Kennedy. $3.00. Seabury. 145 pages.

Sub-titled "A Primer for Eucharistic Devotion", Dr. Kennedy's newest book is designed to aid the worshipper in finding the fullest possible meaning in Holy Communion, and to make the words of the service more relevant to modern life. Realizing that the Holy Communion does not mean as much to some of his parishioners as they think it should, he has written this study first, to stir and inspire, and, second, to teach and interpret.

A NEW LOOK IN PREACHING by James A. Pike. $2.50. Scribner's. 104 pages.

Bishop Pike calls for a closer study of the actual communication — or the lack of it — that takes place during a sermon. Sermons must be made more relevant, more graphic. Though not a how-to-do-it, the book does give concrete suggestions. The general emphasis, however, is on a broad look at the process of communication through a sermon. The view is certainly not from an ivory tower, as indicated by the book's four chapter headings: "Market Survey" ... "The Product and Its Packaging" ... "The Salesman" ... "The Store."

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS by Terence J. Finlay. $2.50. Scribner's. 123 pages.

Dr. Finlay explains in simple terms the meaning of the Ten Commandments. He tells something of the people to whom they were given and the times in which these people lived. Then he explores and expands his interpretation so that the reader has an affirmative approach to the teaching of the Decalogue rather than a sequence of "thou shalt nots."

The book ends with a consideration of Jesus' summary of the law in the great Commandment concerning man's love toward God and toward his fellow man. ■

Church Remodels Entire Building

A thoroughly renovated church building was re-dedicated at Holy Trinity, Seaman Avenue and Cumming Street, Manhattan, on October 1. The event coincided with the 10th anniversary of the Rev. Cyrus L. Heron as rector.

Archdeacon Brätt was guest preacher at the 5 p.m. service, which was followed by a reception in the parish house for more than 200 persons.

Renovations included work in the chancel, nave, vestibule, sacristy and choir rooms. A new acoustical ceiling, asphalt tile floors, and masonite hardboard paneling in a walnut grain were among the improvements. Work in the chancel took a year; the rest of the project four months. The cost was approximately $20,000. The parishioners presented a $1,788 check to their rector as an anniversary gift. Mr. Heron said he may use it to buy a car. ■

Sailors at Sea On Christmas To Get Gifts

By Virginia S. Briggs
Public Relations
Seamen's Church Institute
(an affiliate of the Diocese)

By the time Christmas Day rolls around, there are at least 150 women who should be thoroughly tired of the whole season.

Why? Because ever since the middle of October they have been filling and wrapping gift boxes to be put aboard ships which will be at sea on Christmas Day.

But, according to Mrs. Grace T. Chapman, Executive Secretary of the Women's Council at the Seamen's Church Institute, the time spent in this prolonged pre-Christmas flurry only seems to heighten the true meaning of Christmas for the women.

The Christmas Room at the Institute, 25 South Street, where the wrapping is done, is open daily. From 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. a steady stream of ladies comes to the Institute bent on breaking last year's record of 7,800 boxes. The Christmas Room is also open Wednesday evenings. The women come from as far as New Haven, Conn., Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. and Short Hills, N. J. This year one lady came from Pasadena, Calif., while another traveled from Ashville, N. C.

The boxes contain books, stationery and knitted garments. Ever since last Christmas, more than 1,600 women in nearly every state of the Union have been knitting the garments and sending them to the Institute.

Not all the boxes will be put aboard ships. About 2,000 of them will go to hospitalized seamen in the metropolitan area or ashore at the Institute.

The boxes find their way aboard outward-bound ships with the help of the shipping companies. Each year they send the Women's Council the names of their vessels which they know will be on the high seas on Christmas Day. After the gifts have been wrapped and put in cartons, representatives from the Institute's Ship's Visiting Department deliver them to the ships. ■

Altar Dedication, Varied Programs Highlight Two 100th Anniversaries

Two churches in the Diocese celebrated their 100th anniversary this fall, All Souls, Manhattan, and Grace, Nyack.

At All Souls, Bishop Donegan officated on October 1 when a new $32,000 altar and other additions to the church were blessed. It was the first time since last June that the congregation had used the sanctuary. Services had been held in a neighborhood theater until renovations were completed.

In honor of the centennial, some of the worshippers were dressed in early 19th century costumes. More than 1,000 persons attended the service. The church was founded as a mission of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie. It has occupied its present structure at 114th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue since it merged with the Church of the Archangel before World War 1. The Rev. Clifford J. Lauder is rector.

On October 8, the parish held a centennial dinner in the Starlight Room of the Waldorf Astoria.

At Grace Church, Nyack, the Rev. George F. Regas, rector, proclaimed October as centennial month. The observance started on Sunday, October 1, with Bishop Boynton preaching the sermon. Bishop Donegan presided at special anniversary services on October 29.

On that day each churchgoer arrived with a jig-saw piece of a 4 x 6-foot photograph of Grace Church. The original photo had been cut up and sent to parishioners with the reminder that "You are the Church!" Placing the pieces back together was a symbol of renewed dedication.

A total of 650 adults and children participated.

During the week prior to the Bishop's visit, the church held a preaching mission entitled "Adventure in Faith." Speaker for five nights was the Rev. Donald Henning, Rector of Calvary Church, Memphis, Tenn. Approximately 1,200 persons attended.

In preparation for the mission, a dinner was held at which two men described their own "adventures in faith" and the resulting change in their lives. They were Ralston Young, the redcap who is the subject of the Episcopal Radio-TV Foundation Film, "Track 13," and Col. John Robie of New York City, a retired Air Force officer.

An anniversary bazaar was held on November 18, and a special concert was given on December 2. ■

This Church Is Crowded on Sundays . . .

"Isn't it wonderful going to a crowded church?"

That's what people in the Clason Point section of the Bronx are saying these days as the Sunday morning attendance at St. Andrew's climbs and climbs.

The church is a Diocesan mission. This fall, as the result of a $450,000 175th Anniversary Fund construction program, St. Andrew's moved from a small structure on Sound View Avenue into a large new building on Castle Hill Avenue, close to the many apartment projects which have been built in the area during recent years.

Last year at the old location the average attendance for September was 80. This year at the new location it was 200, according to the Rev. Wray E. MacKay, vicar. On October 1, attendance jumped to 340. Since then it has leveled off to an average of about 290. "Just about right," said Father MacKay. "But we can always add another service!"

Chief reason for this great influx is a survey undertaken last spring. A group of seminarians did the initial work, but an all-out congregational follow-up has continued during the summer and fall. Half of the newcomers are Episcopalians. Many of those who are not will be taking instruction this year, the vicar said. ■

New parish house at St. Alban's, S. I. It should be considered "the material means of bringing people to Christ," says the rector.

Bishop Donegan Dedicates St. Alban's Parish House

Bishop Donegan dedicated a new $120,000 parish house at St. Alban's, Staten Island, on Sunday, November 12.

The parish, which had been using a small, antiquated wooden structure, lost no time in putting the new ultra-modern building into use. A week-long series of events began two hours after the dedication was over.

The first event was a Richmond Convocation youth meeting. This was followed the next day by a Men and Boys Night, at which the speaker, a zoo curator, illustrated his talk with live snakes.

Tuesday night there was a parish supper, Wednesday a musical program, Thursday a community open house, and Friday a youth dance.

On Saturday afternoon, the new parish house was used for a children's party; and hardly had the spilled ice cream been cleaned up when the adults moved in for a dance.

On Sunday, a Festival Eucharist of Thanksgiving was held for and in the new building, with Archdeacon McEvoy the preacher.

St. Alban's parish house has two levels. The upper level has a 64 ft. x 40 ft. assembly area that will seat 250. It also has a small parish library room.

On the lower level is another hall, 64 ft. x 28 ft., parish offices, clergy offices, kitchen, and storage and utility rooms.

The building, which took a little over a year to complete, was designed by Creative Builders, Inc., of Urbana, Ill. The general contractor was John P. Thompson, of Staten Island.

St. Alban's rector, the Rev. Robert W. Renouf, writing in the parish newsletter, warned against allowing the new building to become dominant in the church's life.

"... Here, then, is the crucial question. Will this new building be our master, or will we use it to serve the Master? We can worship this building ... even serve it. We can work hard to maintain it and pay for it. We can use it for our own selfish ends. If this is what we do — then we will be serving the building. It will be our master.

"But if we look upon the building as the material means of bringing people to Christ, then the building will truly be serving its purpose, 'to serve God and man.'" ■

Bishop Lichtenberger Sees Pope John XXIII

For the first time in history, a Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church has visited a Pope of the Roman Catholic Church. The meeting took place November 15, when Bishop Lichtenberger conferred with Pope John XXIII for 40 minutes in the Pope's private library.

The two men met less than a year after Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, then Archbishop of Canterbury, visited the Pope.

According to a news release issued by National Council before the Presiding Bishop's visit, the meeting "is in character exactly parallel with that of Archbishop Fisher last year. It is a courtesy visit and has no doctrinal implications on either side. But it is intended to reciprocate the attitude of good will and friendliness which the present Pope has always shown towards those who are seeking the union of Christendom."

Bishop Lichtenberger, who was in Rome on his way to the World Council of Churches meeting in New Delhi, stressed the cordiality of his visit with the Pope. "We did not discuss our differences, since this would have been quite beside the point at this time."

The Presiding Bishop said he expected Protestant churches would be invited to send observers to the Roman Catholic ecumenical council.

"Our presence would depend on who also was invited, because we

The Bishop's Message

The Presiding Bishop has designated January 28th as Theological Education Sunday. Throughout our Diocese special offerings will be received to help support the training of men studying for the Sacred Ministry in the seminaries of our Church. A generous response to this appeal and continuing gifts for theological education are essential if our seminaries are to fulfill their responsibility to provide the highest standard of training for those preparing for Holy Orders.

One thing every diocese must have, and before everything else: well-trained, devoted priests and pastors. Every bishop knows this and thanks God for what our seminaries do in preparing men for this leadership. They must have the hearty support, spiritual and financial, of the whole Church. The strength of the Church, both for its self-maintenance and its power to lead and uplift mankind, lies in the strength of its ministry; strength in numbers, in ability, in consecration. Are the laity aware of this?

It is disturbing to note that fifty per cent of the men applying to our seminaries come from other religious bodies. That the ministry of the Episcopal Church should have so great an attraction to those of other religious backgrounds is a cause of satisfaction. But it is disquieting to realize that if we were to depend entirely upon candidates for Holy Orders from our own communion, the number of clergy to staff our churches would decrease alarmingly. Our Church is not reproducing its ministry. Is it because our parents do not encourage their sons? Is it because seldom do the clergy, either in the pulpit or in conversation with young men, speak of the challenge and opportunity and abiding spiritual satisfaction the ministry brings in the following of a vocation that seeks to better individuals, the community, and the whole of mankind?

When the fathers and mothers of the Church think of their sons as possible theological students and more of the clergy are deeply concerned with the increase of the ministry, then we shall have sufficient recruits, and the seminaries will have the loyal backing and adequate financial support which will enable them to maintain the highest possible level of training for Holy Orders.

The ministry is the most vital and urgent of all the needs of the Church; a ministry adequate in numbers, well-prepared, sure of purpose, strongly supported. One sometimes wonders whether or not it is fully recognized that the ministry is essential to the Church's strength, to its very life. Only with a strong ministry is the Church able to serve humanity with certainty, conviction and power.

Faithfully yours,

Henry W. B. Morgan

What's it like to be a priest? How do you become one? How holy do you have to be anyway?

Don't you have to be terribly smart? And rich, in order to pay for another three years of education after college?

And what about that "call" people always talk about? What is a "call"?

How many times have you asked these questions, or heard relatives or friends ask them? Through exclusive interviews with the deans of our 11 Episcopal seminaries, with Bishop Donegan, with seminary students and with several of the clergy, The Bulletin has assembled a tidy collection of answers. Some of them may surprise you.

First of all, what is a "call"? To this there are as many different answers as there are people, but students and scholars alike are quick to suggest what it is not. It is not a flash of light, thunder, and voices in your ear. In fact, if a person claims some Damascus Road kind of experience, the seminary deans say "beware!" Furthermore, a "call" is not necessarily to the ministry.

Several deans emphasized that every Christian is "called" in some way — to be a doctor, lawyer, truck driver, secretary, housewife. For men, the ministry should be considered as one of many possibilities. But it is undeniably a special sort of possibility, as you will see if you glance at the box accompanying this article. It gives the 11 deans' interpretation of a "call." Notice the repeated emphasis on a three-fold aspect — the "strong sense of vocation," the "response" to the conviction, and "the Church's authentication." Where there is all of these, there is likely to be a genuine "call."

In their book entitled "What is the Priesthood?" Dean Butler of the Cathedral and Professor W. Norman Pittenger of General Theological Seminary assert that, "If God means a man to be a priest, He will give him the aptitude necessary. He will fit a man and give him grace sufficient for his calling."

The seminarians admitted that often it isn't very easy to be sure God means a person to serve Him as a priest. But generally they defined this elusive thing as "a slowly growing conviction." Dean Lawrence Rose at General Theological Seminary concurred.

THE ROAD TO THE MINISTRY

A Two-part Article

BY RUTH WEBER

The pull toward the priesthood "may start when a boy is in junior high, perhaps go underground for years and then pop up later to torment a person," he said. It may not appear until middle age, when a man is securely tied (or so he thinks) to another profession and has marital responsibilities.

Bishop Donegan pointed out that a number of men in this diocese thought of the ministry during college years, but went into the Army or into another vocation. "Then, in their thirties, it became quite clear that they really had a vocation in the priesthood," he said. "And generally, these men have done very well academically."

Most of the seminarians interviewed for this article fell into the category of young men who felt the "call" almost a soon as they began to worry about a vocation. And it persistently grew stronger as they went through high school and college.

All admitted that their sense of "call" changed between the time they were in college and their first or second year of seminary. One seminarian said, "You can't define it. Most of us grew so slowly into it, we were scarcely able to realize what was happening. But finally, we knew we had found the only thing we could do and be happy."

It is "something you want to do more than anything else in the world . . . like falling in love, you can't really prove to anyone else that you have done so."

Well, then, after the "call," what next?

Talk to your rector. It's the obvious thing to do. Anyway, it's required in the Constitution and Canons of the Episcopal Church.

Probably your rector will reach for his copy of the Canons and read you these steps:

1. Consultation of your "immediate pastor or some other clergyman whom you know."

2. After that, if he counsels you to persevere in your intention, you should make your desire known personally to your Bishop.

The Bishop, you will discover, becomes a close and very important partner in this enterprise. After your initial talk with him, he

3. "shall require the applicant to submit to a thorough examination by a physician appointed by the Bishop." This is a physical, psychological and psychiatric examination.

(In this diocese the Standing Committee interviews you at this point and makes a recommendation to the Bishop.)

4. The Bishop admits you as a "postulant."

5. As a Postulant, before entering upon your course of theological studies, you must lay before the Bishop and the Board of Examining Chaplains satisfactory evidence that you are a graduate of some college or university, together with a full statement of the work done there.

If you are not a college graduate, or if your studies did not adequately cover the canonical requirements given below, you must take an exam in these subjects:

English, including grammar, composition and literature; Latin or a reading knowledge of an ancient or modern language other than English; (Incidentally, if you can, take Greek in college. It will be the most helpful thing you do.) history, ancient and modern; mathematics or a natural science; philosophy; psychology or one of the social sciences.

Men who are 32 or more, who "have shown such proficiency in business or professional life as gives promise of usefulness in the Ministry," may be required to pass tests only in English, history, and one of these five: mathematics, philosophy, psychology, or a natural or social science.

The Bishop gets the exam report from the Board of Examining Chaplains and gives it to the Standing Committee.

6. Now comes the application to the Standing Committee for recommendation to the Bishop to be admitted as a Candidate for Holy Orders. (Usually this is done during the second year at seminary.) You submit an application, the Bishop's certificate of your admission as a Postulant, a certificate from the theological seminary where you are studying, and a certificate signed by your rector and the majority of the vestry.

7. You take your Canonical exams the spring before graduation from seminary and ordination to the Diaconate. (This may include an oral exam before the Bishop and two priests.) You are approved by the Standing Committee.

8. You are ordained a Deacon, (but you must be at least 21) and you may serve as such for not less than six months, although you may be required to continue as a deacon for a full year.

9. The Standing Committee recommends you to the Bishop for ordination to the Priesthood. You file another series of certificates and applications.

10. You present yourself for ordination. You feel the Bishop's hands on your head, and you hear him say: "Receive the Holy Ghost for the Office and Work of a priest in the Church of God, now committed unto thee by the Imposition of our hands . . . "

But let us go back a moment to the point just after you have been admitted as a Postulant. The problem now is to choose a seminary and be accepted.

"What did you do?" The Bulletin asked its group of cooperating seminarians, "Write for all 11 catalogs and then pick the school that appealed to you?"

"Oh, we don't pick the seminary," they chorused. "The Bishop does!"

"That is true," Bishop Donegan said later. But ordinarily the student's wishes count. He smiled. "Occasionally a young man will come in and insist that he wants to go to a particular place. Then I may say, 'You will go where I send you,' and his face falls; he is very unhappy. But if his reason is valid, and his choice is wise, I concur with his wishes and allow him to go to the seminary of his choice. You should see him then!"

Still, it doesn't hurt to know something about seminaries.

The 11 seminaries of the Episcopal Church are, from East to West, Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., (known as ETS); Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.; General Theological Seminary, New York City (known as "General" or GTS); The Divinity School in Philadelphia; Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, Va.; The School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn. (hereinafter referred to as "Sewanee"); Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.; Bexley Hall, the Divinity School of Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio; Nashotah House, Nashotah, Wis.;

The Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Southwest, Austin, Texas; and the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, Berkeley, Calif. (CDSP).

These seminaries are known for a variety of achievements which sometimes affect prospective students' desire to enter.

General and ETS have won particular reputations for scholarship. Sewanee and Bexley Hall say their aim is to provide a good, solid, broad theological education. CDSP and Seabury-Western pride themselves upon a notable faculty. Nashotah House considers itself outstanding for discipline, and its deep sense of community."

Berkeley Divinity School says it has "a tradition of Church history and interest in the Old Testament," and that it represents the "solid center" of the Church. Philadelphia also prepares people "from all areas of the Church," and "emphasizes pastoral care and ministry." The Seminary of the Southwest says it emphasizes the relationship between Christian faith and culture "in both its practical and theoretical aspects."

Virginia Seminary reported that it has stressed two areas from the beginning of its history — the missionary emphasis and great attention to the pastoral ministry.

Some of the schools are crowded; some are not. More than half are operating at, or nearly up to, capacity.

Last year the Joint Commission on Theological Education reported 1,211 students enrolled in the 11 schools. This year official reports have not yet been prepared, but the individual deans have provided the 1962 figures in the table elsewhere on this page. It shows two years' enrollment compared with estimated capacity.

* Philadelphia Divinity School officially reported a capacity of 90 students, but told this magazine that as far as housing facilities are concerned, it is bursting at the seams.

To marry or not to marry before ordination has become a debatable question. The percentage of married men in seminary has skyrocketed in recent years, adding to housing woes.

All of these schools, except Virginia, said they are planning expansion projects of one sort or another in the near future. The majority will build facilities for the tremendous number of married students who have been flocking to both college and seminary campuses in recent years.

General Theological Seminary recently dedicated a new $2 million library building. Nashotah House has embarked upon a $5 million drive to extend over a ten-year period. It has raised its first half million.

Sewanee has built new quarters for married students and it plans others. Bexley Hall, Seabury-Western and the Divinity School in Philadelphia are hoping to build married students' apartments. Seminary of the Southwest expects to start construction of a chapel this year. It will be the last of several new buildings. Church Divinity School of the Pacific plans at least three new buildings. Berkeley plans some expansion in the near future, but did not elaborate on its plans.

At ETS, Washburn Hall, a new refectory and lounge building which combines lecture and recreational facilities, was dedicated last June. The seminary is in the special gifts campaign stage of a sizeable long-range building program. Virginia Seminary said it might build a faculty home, but indicated that the date is uncertain.

All of this will cost money.

What many people don't realize, a dean pointed out, is that top level theological education cannot continue without contributions from individuals and parishes. Both the students and the seminaries need this financial help.

Another thing people generally do not consider is that seminaries get no official Church grants. That is, funds from General Convention.

A seminary education is not as expensive, generally, as going to college. But, after four years of college, very few students have sufficient private means, or have well-cushioned friends or relatives from whom they can obtain funds. Most have to ask for aid from their parish, their Bishop, or their seminary. Sometimes from all three.

Many deans asserted that no student has ever had to forego theological education purely because of financial need. But, at the same time, the seminaries feel justified in asking that all other sources be exhausted before a student approaches them for funds. As it is, the seminaries say, they are in effect subsidizing every student, because each man pays far less than it costs the school to educate him.

To the right is a table showing tuitions and the actual cost per student. The figure for tuition, room, board, and incidentals is based on costs for single students living on campus. Married students have other problems — rent, support of children — which makes it almost impossible to arrive at any kind of cost for them.

When these figures are adjusted to show the per pupil cost for 1962, it is likely that the gap between actual costs and the amount each student pays will be greater, because operating expenses have been rising from year to year. The Very Rev. George M. Alexander, Dean of Sewanee, remarked that, "If every student had to pay the full cost, I think theological education would be priced out of existence."

Seminary endowments vary. They range all the way from half a million to seven million dollars. But Dean Almus M. Thorp of Bexley Hall asserted that "no seminary is anything like heavily endowed compared to the colleges." One dean said he had only $3 500 a year available for scholarships.

This situation leaves a great deal up to the Bishops and the parishes. The seminaries report that the Bishops are carrying most of the load. In some dioceses, parishes have created scholarship funds and are helping in other ways. The Diocese of New York was not highly praised for its efforts. Observers in the diocese believe it can do a great deal more.

According to Bishop Donegan, there are 26 men from this diocese in seminary at the present time. Six more are studying privately. In all, there are some 39 postulants and candidates, plus perhaps another 15 aspirants. This is more than many a diocese can claim. But most of these men either will have to be, or are being, subsidized. At present, the Bishop is supplying the bulk of the funds — either from his Fund for Diocesan Needs, or from friends, or from a variety of sources.

Sometimes the Bishop even helps men with their college education.

"The encouraging thing is that funds received on Theological Education Sunday do increase each year," the Bishop remarked. But he said it is his conviction that parishes should do more to support their seminarians. At present, only two churches here are providing for men in seminary.

"To be quite fair," said Dean Rose at General, "many of our students are sent into parishes in this area to do field work, and there is a great element of scholarship grant in much of this." But he believes people could help aspiring priests more by helping the seminaries more.

Other deans were asked for ideas.

"It would be a great thing if parishes would follow the policy of some corporations," said Acting Dean Edward R. Hardy of Berkeley. "When supporting a student, they give an equal sum to the seminary." Dean John B. Coburn of ETS urged "a continuing relationship of a constant nature" with the boys in seminary. "Give them affection and support, so that they feel they have a home base."

Divinity School in Philadelphia said he believes the results of Theological Education Sunday are "good," but it needs "intensification and expansion." Dean Alexander at Sewanee said, "it would help if parishes that could afford to do so would establish theological education scholarships and give them to the schools when the parishes did not have their own representatives at the Seminary."

Dean Thorp of Bexley Hall would like to see generous offerings on Theological Education Sunday, but in addition, "I should like to see every parish and mission write into its budget an annual item of some size for the support of theological education. In this way we would have the certainty of both a free offering and a specific amount. I do not believe in either one alone." This view also was expressed by Dean Charles Harris at Seabury-Western.

Dean Jesse McL. Trotter at Virginia said, "I think the time has come when all of our seminaries must look to the parishes to give more attention to the vocation of the ordained ministry. There are not as many applicants as ten years ago. Ten years ago, we selected a class of 50 from 175 applicants. Last year we chose 66 from 128. In addition to financial support, more attention should be given to recruitment."

At Nashotah House, Dean Walter C. Klein said an experimental "open house" this year received a gratifying response. "I think the most important thing is for people really to understand what the seminary is trying to achieve," he said.

Dean Sherman E. Johnson of the Divinity School of the Pacific has found that, as in any organization, the best help comes in the form of unrestricted funds, "to pay salaries, the cook, the gardener, and the faculty."

This, then, is the seminaries' story. The boy who wants to go, his family, his friends, his fellow parishioners, all have a share in insuring a continuing supply of priests to do the work of the Church.

What's it like to study for the priesthood? How holy do you have to be? How rich? How smart? Pretty darn smart, the evidence suggests. Not so rich if all the people in the diocese get behind you. The qualities of "holiness" and the question of what it's like to be a seminarian will be the subject of a second article in this magazine next month. ■

ELEVEN DEANS DEFINE A 'CALL'

"A 'call' is a strong sense of vocation. There are very few men who can say they had one like St. Paul's on Damascus Road. But most are convinced that God has led them . . ."

Dean George M. Alexander, Sewanee

". . . the interior conviction . . . that God intends a man for Holy Orders. It is the individual's response to this conviction and its authentication by the Bishop, rector, vestry, seminary faculty and the Standing Committee of the man's diocese."

Dean Charles Harris, Seabury-Western

". . . one's awareness of the will of God for one's life, and that comes in a great variety of ways. Some people have a strong personal feeling . . . some feel no other way of life will do. Whether or not the Church wants a man is important . . ."

Acting Dean Edward R. Hardy, Berkeley

"A 'call' occurs when a person has come to the realization that he has found what God wants him to do with his life; and second, when he understands that he is fully responsible for the religious life and spiritual development of other people so that they, too, are related to God."

Dean Edward G. Harris, Philadelphia

"Every Christian is 'called' — whether he is called to be a priest, a doctor, a lawyer, housewife or other kind of person . . . A call to the ministry comes usually the way others come. Then there has to be agreement from the Church's side — That is the temporal instrument of God's summons."

Dean Lawrence Rose, General

"You might say it is a man's realization, first, that God is a factor in his life, and second, that he has the compulsion to relay the truths about this to other people. In the Episcopal Church, you cannot do this from a soap box. You have to become an ordained minister first."

Vice-Dean Garret Conklin, Pacific

". . . a response to opportunities for decision in life, and the arrival at a decision that a man wants carried out because of his love of God. One might say a 'call' means responding to the initiative that God has already taken in a man's life."

Dean John B. Coburn, ETS

"On one hand it is the inner certitude of a man that the Holy Spirit is calling him; on the other it is the Church's approval of the man. If there is agreement on both sides, the man usually has a 'call.'"

Dean Walter C. Klein, Nashotah House

"One of the things we find is that a man's sense of what his 'call' is changes radically after he enters seminary. But it surely consists of three things — a conviction, a response and the authentication by the Church."

Dean Gray M. Blandy, Southwest

"We often offer the rule of St. Chrysostom. It has four steps — the call to be a Christian; the providential call (whether God has given the mental and physical capacity . . . ); the Church's call; and the inner call. The latter a man does not really experience until he has, in seminary, explored the Christian claim upon him."

Dean Jesse M. Trotter, Virginia

"I can tell you what a call isn't. A negative call is a diffused discontent with one's present occupation combined with the pious hope that three years of seminary will resolve every personal, marital, economic, social, political, spiritual and intellectual problem, tension, and anxiety, world without end . . ."

Dean Almus M. Thorp, Bexley Hall

The Holy Spirit Is for Us, Today, Speakers Say

"The Holy Spirit clearly stands for direct, first-hand experience of religion, something in which our modern age, fascinated with psychology, ought to be deeply interested," said Dr. Frederick C. Grant, retired Union Theological Seminary professor, at this year's first School of Worship Session.

An estimated 700 persons attended the four lectures, held on Mondays during November at both morning and evening sessions. The day sessions took place at the Cathedral, and evening meetings were held at four Manhattan churches. The theme was the Holy Spirit, "The Lord, the Life-Giver." Dr. Grant discussed "The Holy Spirit in the Bible."

Other speakers were the Rev. John Knox, Baldwin Professor of Sacred Literature at Union Seminary who spoke on "The Holy Spirit in the Church"; Dean Butler, "The Holy Spirit in Our Lives"; and Canon Johnson, "The Holy Spirit in the World". Canon Landon was chairman of the arrangements committee. The School was sponsored by the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and the Episcopal Churchwomen.

Dr. Grant explained that, "The rich variety of the spiritual life, awakened and inspired by the Holy Spirit, is displayed and described in the Bible. But, we greatly underrate the meaning and significance of the Biblical revelation if we think it merely archaic, and now outgrown in this advanced age."

Actually, "the modern scientific view of the universe is the most beautiful, most poetic, most spiritual ever conceived," declared Dr. Grant. "The ancient poets and philosophers, from Plato to Augustine, would all have revelled in this sublime vision, revealed by science.

"That is to say, it is God who is revealed in modern science as also in the ancient Bible, and who orders all things . . . "

Dr. Knox described the Holy Spirit in the Church as a unifying force and discussed it in the context of a unified Church. He said that the Spirit of God is the love of God, "the bond which not only binds the Church with heaven, and this distinguishes it, but also binds its members together and thus unites it . . . "

But the Church also consists of "certain structures in the historical community," said the speaker. "To recognize the manifest fact that Christians who do not acknowledge the structure yet share in this 'life' and belong to this 'body' is not by any means the same thing as saying that the forms are not both valid and indispensable. So, I should say, the more 'Protestant' churches, whether they know it or not, depend on the more 'Catholic'."

He added, "It may be argued that this dependence is in some degree mutual . . . certainly no 'catholicity' which pretends that the Reformation did not happen or denies or rejects the authentic fruits of it can be a true catholicity . . . Catholicism may embrace and absorb the Reformation — it must if it is ever to be fully Catholic and the Church is ever to be fully and deeply one — but it cannot exclude it . . . "

Admitting today's "general neglect" of the Church's doctrine of the Holy Spirit, and the confusion of many in their understanding of this doctrine, Dean Butler said: "Spirit is not the opposite of matter — completely foreign to it . . . the truly spiritual life is not alienated from material things and from common concerns."

Later he said, "It is through our union with Christ in His death and resurrection that we have become members of His Body and so have received the gift of the Spirit which He alone has the right to bestow

Speaker Leery of Real Reasons For Growing Church Attendance

A leading Episcopal layman has cast a skeptical eye at America's growing church attendance.

He is Michael Budzanoski, who has been an official representative of the Episcopal Church at meetings of the National Council of Churches and the World Council of Churches. He has also been a deputy to the last three General Conventions.

Mr. Budzanoski gave the main address at the first annual diocesan rally of the Episcopal Laymen of New York, held on Saturday, November 25, in the Cathedral and Synod Hall.

"Many who attend church with some regularity are motivated by very un-christian reasons," the speaker charged.

He listed some of these reasons as, "social status, practical business purposes, family pressure, or timidity about defying convention."

"Whatever their motives, though, these fringe Christians are coming to church. The challenge is to integrate them into the life of the church and to change their motives."

Mr. Budzanoski is a former coal miner who rose from private to major during World War II. He has been a Pittsburgh union official since the war.

"Many churches restrict leadership to the acknowledged leaders of the community," the speaker asserted.

Conceding that this is "the easy way out," he warned that such a restriction "results in the deterioration of the base of the church."

In a call for congregations to be more inclusive, Mr. Budzanoski observed that:

"People of different income brackets do not live together, do not work together, and do not play together. Their church may be their only meeting ground."

Pointing out the role of the layman, Mr. Budzanoski called upon church members to become better informed.

"You cannot persuade someone to become a follower of Christ unless you yourself know what it means to follow Him."

A strong proponent of lay evangelism, Mr. Budzanoski stated that, "We are the laity, and we must Christianize the world. It cannot be done by the clergy."

Earlier, the speaker observed that the world is still only 25 per cent Christian.

Mr. Budzanoski urged laymen to make a point of talking about religion.

"The most obnoxious idea I know of is that we shouldn't discuss religion or politics."

Mr. Budzanoski's speech was aimed at stimulating group discussion later in the rally. Written reports of these discussions were given to Bishop Wetmore, acting leader of ELNY and moderator of the meeting.

The all-day rally began with a Service of Holy Communion in the Cathedral at 10:30 a.m. Bishop Donegan was the celebrant.

The remainder of the rally was held in Synod Hall.

Bishop Donegan, in welcoming remarks before the main address, cautioned against the Episcopal Laymen of New York becoming "just another organization, just another club."

He also asked that laymen completely take over ELNY as soon as practicable.

Brief remarks were also made by the Rev. William Gray, of the Episcopal Church's General Division of Laymen's Work.

Though the rally was well received, attendance was not up to expectations. Each of the over 200 churches in the Diocese was asked to send at least one man, preferably two. Actual attendance was 90. ■

300 Honor Bishop Donegan At Dinner in Poughkeepsie

Nearly 300 clergymen and laymen gave Bishop Donegan a standing ovation at a dinner in his honor sponsored by the Dutchess Convocation on November 29 in Nelson House, Poughkeepsie.

Presiding was the Rev. Alfred H. Whisler, Rector of Zion, Wappingers Falls, and Dean of the Convocation. Russell E. Aldrich, a Poughkeepsie attorney and a member of the Diocese's Standing Committee, was toastmaster.

The Bishop told his audience that, "The Church's role in our kind of world is to bring men and women into a living, loving relationship with Christ. We must communicate the good news to all men outside the Christian faith as well as to our own — and in language readily understood by all."

Exploring ways in which today's church men and women can be effective witnesses, the Bishop concluded, "It is the Church's task to furnish the spiritual dynamics which will make this world better for the children of God."

Speaking on behalf of the clergy, Father Whisler expressed appreciation for the Bishop's leadership, both within the Diocese and in the national Church. Harold W. Williams of Pawling, dinner chairman, presented a leather-bound book containing a hand-lettered inscription by the Rev. Richard Rogers, Assistant Minister at Zion. The book contained photographs of Putnam and Dutchess County churches, and signatures of those who attended the dinner.

Before the dinner, an informal reception was held to give the officers and clergy of mission churches and aided parishes an opportunity to chat with the Bishop. ■

Youth and College Workers Will Attend ECW Seminar

A seminar dealing with young people's opportunities in church vocations will be sponsored by the Personnel, Youth and College Work committee of the Episcopal Churchwomen on January 24 at Cathedral House.

The meeting, entitled "A Seminar for Youth and College Workers," is for parish representatives. It will be held from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., with luncheon served at noon. Clergy, also, are invited.

Mrs. Woodson D. Scott, ECW Diocesan committee chairman, explains that: "At this seminar we intend to survey the needs of our young people, the opportunities for them, and then to suggest specific 'helps' for the individual in the parish."

Every church in the diocese is being urged to name a representative.

The Episcopal Church Annual reports that in 1959 there were from 1,200 to 1,500 too few parochial clergy to carry on the Church's work in this country, the chairman said. According to statistics filed at General Convention, there are some 123 full-time college workers and 41 half-time clergy and women workers for the 1,800 college campuses in our country today.

Furthermore, said Mrs. Scott, only one-half of our seminarians are from Episcopal homes; the 1961 Episcopal Church Annual indicates that the Church is constantly losing many of those confirmed. "It is these rather frightening facts that best explain the reason for our committee's work."

One aim of the ECW, Mrs. Scott explained, is to encourage young people's interest in a variety of church-related activities — the Girls' Friendly Society, the St. John's in-the-Wilderness camp, Church-sponsored conferences, or parish work among college students, for example. Speakers from these groups will address the seminar.

Morning Session — Youth Work

Speakers: Miss Jean Pflomm, Girls' Friendly Society; the Rev. William Scott Root, Wilderness Conferences; the Rev. Howard O. Bingley, Bard Conferences; the Rev. Richard Kirk, leadership training programs conducted on weekends in Westchester.

Afternoon Session — College Work

Speakers: the Rev. Dudley Bennett, rector of St. Andrew's, New Paltz, and a part-time chaplain at New Paltz State Teachers College; Miss Trudy Gier, Windham House graduate student, who will discuss "Professional Church Careers"; and David Marshall, a seminarian who assists in the office of Dr. William H. Kennedy, executive director of the Episcopal Council for Foreign Students on the East Coast. ■

Missionary Quota Gets Priority

Payment of its Missionary Quota will be the "primary moral obligation on the income of this parish," according to a resolution adopted unanimously by the vestry of St. Stephen's, Woodlawn, in the Bronx.

(Each church in the Diocese is assigned an annual Missionary Quota. Quota payments received are divided between the Diocese and the National Council of the Episcopal Church. In 1962, the division will be 44 per cent to the Diocese and 56 per cent to National Council.)

In a letter to the Rector of St. Stephen's, the Rev. E. Perren Hayes, Bishop Donegan wrote:

"I wish to express to you and, through you, to the Vestry of St. Stephen's Church, Woodlawn, my deep appreciation of their actions as set forth in the resolution adopted at the last Vestry meeting.

"It is most encouraging to me that your Vestry have placed the Missionary Quota as the primary obligation of the parish. This represents missionary concern and true understanding of the mission of the Church."

St. Stephen's will not only pay its 1962 Missionary Quota, but will overpay it. The Quota is $1,683. The parish also paid more than its Quota last year.

A stewardship canvass was conducted at St. Stephen's last fall, under supervision of Eric Ley, the Diocese's Director of Stewardship. As a result of the canvass, St. Stephen's will depend more on giving from members of the parish and less on various fund-raising activities. ■

What does the word ecumenical mean?

It is strictly speaking anything to do with all the inhabitants of the world. As generally used, it applies specifically to members of the Christian Church throughout the world. Its original Greek form comes from a word which described all the inhabitants of a house. As used by the Patriarch of Constantinople it asserts his ancient claim to the oversight of all Christians who were not specifically attached to any one of the other Orthodox small patriarchates. As used in the title, The Ecumenical Movement, it means the drawing together of Christians from widely differing historical, theological, and devotional backgrounds. This tremendous drive towards Christian unity has since the Edinburgh Conference, held over a half century ago, been characterized by manifestly sincere desire to know what is right about other people's religions rather than devoting one's energy to finding out what's wrong about them. The recent meeting in New Delhi ought to be viewed in this light, as indeed should the friendly overtures now being made by Pope John XXIII. Possibly, the most useful text to bear in mind in considering the possibilities of the Ecumenical Movement is this little-considered one:

"And when they prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness. And the

Mr. Lanier

A dramatic program entitled "Revelation Through Involvement" will be directed by the Rev. Sidney Lanier at the diocesan meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen, Saturday, February 3. The meeting, at Synod House, will begin at 10:30 a. m.

Mr. Lanier, Assistant to the Rector at St. Thomas Church, Manhattan, is chairman and one of the founders of the Religious Drama Council in Manhattan. He is the Episcopal Church's national representative both on the Committee on Religious Drama, Commission on General Christian Education, and the Religious Drama Committee, Department of Worship and Arts, National Council of Churches of Christ.

A proponent of drama in the Church as a powerful instrument of teaching and persuasion, Mr. Lanier has been active in television and radio as an interviewer, actor, writer and critic.

Mrs. Gurney Williams, diocesan ECW president, will preside. ■ upon all who would trust Him and believe in Him. So those of us who are members of the Body of Christ through invitation have become sharers in the Holy Spirit, and have together entered into what we know as 'the fellowship of the Spirit,' made possible through Christ's atoning and victorious life."

The Dean cited St. Paul's list of "the fruits of the Spirit." They are: "love, joy, peace, patience, kindliness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, self-control." (Gal. 5:22) "These are the things that really count," the Dean said. "And the most important of all these fruits is that of of love."

Canon Johnson's address began with a description of the first Pentecost, and concluded with several episodes from his 24-month trip around the world to study the work of the Anglican Communion.

He said the Holy Spirit at Pentecost offered three gifts — illumination, strength and concern. At Pentecost the apostles "were grasped in the marrow of their being . . . they understood that His resurrection was the guarantee of their own, that His ascension meant that where He went, they were to follow." These men who had been "scared stiff" to declare themselves now found themselves speaking before great crowds. They were "inspired with a new concern" because they knew they had news that all the world must hear.

"That which happened on Whitsunday was just as much a miracle as was Easter, Christmas, the creation of the world at the beginning," said Canon Johnson. But the fact that there is a Christian Church is as much a miracle as all these, he added. In 24 months, which included 730 days of non-stop travel in 80 countries, Canon Johnson said he had seen something of "the miracle that the Holy Spirit has wrought." ■ would not come unless all other Protestant churches were invited. It would depend also on the nature of the invitation and on the positions assigned."

Asked about the chances of a reunion of the Episcopal Church and the Roman Catholic Church, Bishop Lichtenberger replied that, "Reunion is a very long process."

"But I think contacts such as the one I had with the Pope are most helpful and serve to keep the door open. It would have been impossible five years ago."

After the meeting, Bishop Lichtenberger introduced to the Pope the Rt. Rev. Lauriston L. Scaife, Bishop of Western New York, and Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies and a layman in the Diocese of New York. Both were traveling with the Presiding Bishop. ■

Festival to Last 8 Months

An eight-part series of events called "The Festival of Religion and Arts" is being held at Grace Church, Middletown. The programs, approximately one a month through April, include church music, jazz, dance, drama and the graphic arts.

A concert on October 15 by Charles Blackman and the National String Quartet launched the series. In November, the Boys' Choir of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine sang Choral Evensong, followed, early in December, by an organ recital by Alec Wyton, Organist and Master of Choristers at the Cathedral. Just before Christmas, the Chaminade and Apollo Choral Group and the Middletown Symphony Orchestra gave Handel's "Messiah."

This month's event (January 1-22) is an art exhibit, featuring contemporary religious prints from the Smithsonian Institute, plus a liturgical arts display and works by local artists.

A religious dance recital is planned for February 11 at 7:30 p.m.

Sister Jean, Headmistress of the Tuller Maycroft School in Long Island, will present the program. She is a member of the Order of the Teachers of the Children of God, and was a choreographer for the Williamsburg Festival.

The controversial "Folk Mass" or "Jazz Mass" by the Rev. Geoffrey Beaumont will be heard at a morning service early in March. This work is scored for violin, saxophone, bass and guitar, with a cantor and chorus. The Rev. Joseph P. Matthews, rector, will celebrate the Mass. "This is a 20th century interpretation written by an Anglican priest," said Father Matthews, "and I think it should be heard."

In April, the Bishop's Company will present "The Great Divorce," by C. S. Lewis. A matinee performance of "Winnie the Pooh" will be given for children.

All events, except the art exhibit, are being presented in the chancel.

The gift of an organ last spring by a parishioner who prefers to remain unidentified was the beginning of this ambitious program. At first the parish planned only to have a dedicatory concert featuring Mr. Wyton. But the venture developed into the season-long festival. All events are open to the public, and five are free. Only the National String Quartet concert, the dance recital and the Bishop's Company appearance require tickets.

"The Festival is not intended to be a money-making venture but a creative experience," said Father Matthews.

Open House Held At St. Gregory's

St. Gregory's, Woodstock, held an "open house" on November 25 to mark the completion of its new parish house. The fast-growing mission now has a complete church plant. Among the visitors were the Rev. Herald Swezy, founder and first vicar, and William van Benschoten, architect for both the church and the parish house.

The new building, started last spring, is of the same unusual contemporary design as the church. It has a steep, pitched roof of hand-split cedar shingles, with the eaves carried down to floor level. The hall seats 140 persons, and converts to eight Sunday School classrooms by means of disappearing partitions. A connecting wing joins it to the church.

Inside-out bay windows penetrating the roof area provide daylight for the auditorium, and at night the room is lit by large bowl-shaped electric fixtures suspended from the high ceiling.

St. Gregory's, founded in 1952, has been an organized mission of the Diocese since 1954. The present church building has received nation-wide acclaim for its outstanding architecture. It was built in 1956, partly with funds raised by churchgoers, but mostly with gifts and loans from the Diocese. Another diocesan loan made the new parish house possible. Membership of the mission jumped from a handful of people in 1952 to 226 in 1961. The Rev. Lloyd Uyeki is the vicar. ■

YOUTH MEETING

An estimated 125 young people gathered in the new parish house at St. Alban's, Staten Island, on November 12 for a Convocation-wide meeting. The speaker was Canon West of the Cathedral who discussed "Mixed Marriages." ■

. . . in brief

■ A MOTORIST driving past St. Luke's, Eastchester, last fall was startled to see a fire truck standing in front of the church with its aerial ladder raised. But there was obviously no fire.

Perched on the top rung of the 100 foot ladder was a man with a bucket of paint, working vigorously on the brown trim up near the steeple. The Rev. Bernard DeW. Granger, rector, who is a volunteer fireman with the North End Hook and Ladder Company, had arranged for the hook and ladder truck.

■ JAPANESE CHRISTIAN missionaries have adopted a technique commonly used by candy salesmen in the country. The candy vendors visit playgrounds, parks and other places where children congregate. To attract the children, the salesman tells some thrilling story, illustrating it with flip cards. Then he peddles his wares among the audience. The missionaries are doing the same thing, only there's no selling and the stories are taken from the Bible.

■ LAST MONTH, when the Rev. Samuel W. Ishibashi left St. Mark's Mount Kisco, to become priest-in-charge at Christ Church, Piermont, parishioners gave him a party. More than 200 gathered in the parish house to wish Him well. They gave him tangible evidence of their esteem — a purse and a new station wagon.

Bishop Lichtenberger Elected To World Council Central Committee

The head of the Protestant Episcopal Church and a leading Episcopal layman are among the 21 U. S. representatives elected to the 100-member Central Committee of the World Council of Churches, at the three-week assembly recently held in New Delhi, India.

They are the Rt. Rev Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop, and Dr. Nathan Pusey, President of Harvard University.

The Central Committee governs the World Council of Churches between its assemblies, held every six years.

Another president is the Most Rev. Arthur Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of All England.

The Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, former Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, was among the retiring presidents of the World Council. ■

The Bishop's Message

As President of the Second Province, and as Chairman of the Planning Committee for the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Caribbean, it was to me a source of great interest and satisfaction to be present last month at the blessing of our Church's newest post-graduate school of theology and the installation of the Dean and faculty.

At present, there are eight handsome buildings of contemporary design, a deanery, faculty residence, dormitory, refectory, and lecture hall, located on a property of over 25 acres of beautiful tropical land at Carolina, Puerto Rico, not far from San Juan. When funds are available, other buildings will be added.

The Dean, who is head of the faculty and administrator of the seminary, is the Very Rev. Eugene E. Crommett, Th.D. He and the faculty of four professors and two instructors are men well qualified for their several responsibilities.

The Episcopal Seminary of the Caribbean was established for a special purpose — to prepare men for the ministry, in spirit as well as in mind, to become leaders of the church and the community in all the countries of the Caribbean, Central America, and Northern South America.

In a real sense it is an international community, for it brings together men of many national and cultural backgrounds. The students are from Panama, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico, Central America, Haiti, and the Virgin Islands. They will return to their own countries to minister to their own people, but having lived and studied and worshipped together in an international community they will know themselves to be members of the world-wide fellowship of the Anglican Communion, and of the wider company of those who acknowledge Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour, whose purpose is to do away with the barriers of pride, prejudice and ignorance that keep God's children divided one from another.

The daily chapel services, which are the center of the seminary's life, and the instruction are in three languages — Spanish, French and English. The library of several thousand volumes of theology and related subjects, under the care of a professionally trained librarian, is tri-lingual. Seminars, papers and sermons are in the native tongue of the student. In jest it was remarked to a visitor to the seminary that with all the languages represented it would be a veritable tower of Babel.

"Oh, no!" the visitor replied, "the day of Pentecost!"

I bespeak your prayers, your concern, and your support, through your gifts to the missionary apportionment of your congregation for the Episcopal Theological Seminary of the Caribbean, that by God's grace, it may prosper, and may increasingly realize the purpose to which it is dedicated.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Missionary Quota Payments Show Increase For '61

Missionary quota payments by congregations increased in 1961 by almost $80,000 over 1960. The deficit between quota and payments was reduced from 20% to 18% for the same period.

Total payments against quota were $983,957 which is the highest amount ever received for the missionary program. However, as in prior years, failure to meet the objective, which for 1961 was $1,199,265, meant that the programs of the National Council, Diocesan Departments, and affiliated agencies had to be curtailed.

Thirty-eight congregations overpaid their quotas by a total of $10,855 in 1961. This compares with overpayment of $4,138 by 31 congregations in 1960. Much of the overpayment was due to actions by parishes which were guided in their Canvass efforts by the Diocesan Stewardship office. In several such cases the parishes arranged to overpay their missionary quota by a pre-determined amount for the current or ensuing year and in some cases the overpayment is being spread over a two or three year period.

While the number of parishes and missions which failed to meet their missionary quota was not reduced from the 84 in 1960, 10 of the parishes which had deficits in 1960 met their quota in 1961. However, 10 parishes which met their quotas in 1960 assumed a deficit position in 1961.

The number of congregations which paid nothing on their missionary quota dropped from three to two.

Missionary quotas are set by formula for both the Diocese and individual parishes. Vestries and Advisory Boards are notified of the amount of their missionary quota several months in advance of the quota year and only after Convention delegates have approved the missionary program objectives.

While Convention has always recognized the needs of both the National and Diocesan Missionary Programs, the Diocese has yet to meet its objectives in this direction, because many congregations do not meet the quota obligations to which they gave support in Convention.

The magnitude of concern for the mission of the church is indicated by the total paid in 1961 which was very close to one million dollars. ■

WE'RE SORRY

The Rev. Robert Pollard, 3rd, new vicar of All Saints, Valley Cottage, came to the Diocese of New York from West Palm Beach, Fla., where he was assistant minister of Holy Trinity. He did not serve as assistant minister of St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, as indicated in last month's Clergy Changes. The Rev. Irving S. Pollard was and is the assistant minister at St. Bartholomew's. ■

Missionary Quotas Compared

A comparison of missionary quotas and payments between the years 1951 and 1961 reflects many interesting developments, among which are:

1. Increased awareness of the importance of Missions with a consequent greater willingness to share with others beyond the parish.
2. Accelerated movement into suburban areas.
3. Changes in income levels in some urban, suburban and rural areas.

As can be seen from the accompanying table the total missionary quota for the Diocese has increased approximately 34% since 1951 but payments against missionary quota have increased by 60%. Using the 34% increase in quota requirements as the norm it would appear that of all convocations only one, the Bronx, either did not, or was not able to maintain the "pace", their increase in giving having been 26%.

The highest increase in percentage was in the Dutchess Convocation which has almost 105%, followed by Ramapo with 92%, Westchester and Hudson with 72% increase, Manhattan with 55%, Richmond with 50%, and the Bronx with 26%.

Indicative of increased income to parishes, which forms part of the basis for establishing the amount of quota, would seem to be the Ramapo Convocation with a 57% increase in quota, followed by Hudson with 53%, Westchester with 49%, Dutchess with 32%, Manhattan with 31%, Richmond with 28%, and the Bronx with 5%. ■

Bishop's Daughter Is Wed

Bishop Wetmore officiated at the wedding of his daughter, Miss Nancy Elizabeth Wetmore, on December 30 in the Cathedral. Miss Wetmore became the bride of James Loring Faulds, of Halifax, Nova Scotia. Bishop Donegan was celebrant at the Holy Eucharist. A reception was held in Cathedral House.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Charles Edward Wetmore. She wore a gown of ivory silk brocade with lantern sleeves and chapel train, and carried white roses and stephanotis.

The bride's sister, Mary Frances Wetmore, was the flower girl. Bridesmaids were the Misses Ann Oolo and Catherine Tilden.

Peter McDermaid of Halifax was best man. Ushers were Robert Bourque, Eric Cooke, Fernand Gibb and David Howell.

Mrs. Faulds attended Scarsdale High School and King's College, Halifax. Her husband attended Dalhousie Law School, Halifax, and is associated with National Studios, Ltd., a publishing firm. The couple will reside in Halifax. ■

Deed Transfer Signals 'Mission Accomplished'

The final step in one of the most successful and unusual examples of missionary strategy in this diocese was taken last month when the Treasurer of the diocesan Department of Missions delivered a deed to the Treasurer of St. Paul's Church, Ossining.

The strategy was initiated ten years ago, when the Board of Managers of the Diocesan Missionary and Church Extension Society (Department of Missions) began a study of the distribution of Episcopal churches in the Town of Ossining and vicinity. As a result of this study, and upon the recommendation of John D. McGrath of White Plains, the decision was made to dispose of the former Grace Hall mission, established by Bishop Potter's family in Crotonville and to acquire a new site on part of the old Donald Farm on Route 9A, Ossining. This tract included the old homestead and barns, and was of little use to the developer who bought the whole farm.

Mr. McGrath, a former vestryman of St. Bartholomew's White Plains, and a long-time member of the Department of Missions, negotiated a contract to purchase the new site, contingent upon the construction by the developer of a number of one-family homes, surrounding the homestead.

When the homes were occupied, a census was made, and it was determined that the area offered considerable potential for a new church.

The approval of the Standing Committee for use of the site was sought, and what were then the nearest parishes were given an opportunity to present their views on the proposal at public hearings held by the Standing Committee.

Missionary strategy reaches fulfillment with transfer of deed from the diocesan Department of Missions to Theodore S. Tompkins, left, Treasurer of St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining. Shown signing the deed is Dr. Theodor Oxholm, Treasurer of the Diocese of New York, and at right, John D. McGrath of White Plains, long-time member of the Department of Missions. Mr. McGrath has his hand on the huge and weighty seal of the Diocesan Missionary and Church Extension Society, under whose province the whole project at St. Paul's was undertaken.

At these hearings it was learned that St. Paul's, Ossining, was faced with the difficult task of maintaining a deteriorating church plant in a section of the city rapidly being developed commercially. The Department of Missions began to study a plan by which St. Paul's would take over the new site on Route 9A and eventually dispose of its downtown property.

Many parishioners at St. Paul's had strong sentimental ties to their old parish, and were uncertain that the proposal could be successfully carried out. But the vestry was composed of men whose vision foresaw that St. Paul's-on-the-Hill would not spell death to the parish, but rather rebirth. Among such men was Theodore S. Tompkins, who is still Treasurer of St. Paul's.

An agreement between the vestry and diocese provided that the latter would donate the land and dairy buildings, upon a promise that St. Paul's would renovate and add to the buildings and start to use them for church purposes. St. Paul's agreed to sell its city premises when the transition could be made smoothly.

The Department of Missions used the proceeds from sale of the former Crotonville mission, together with income from funds bequeathed to the Board by members of the Potter family for missionary work in the Town of Ossining.

Last spring, St. Paul's, having carried out its agreement and having been reestablished in its new location on a strong, self-supporting basis, held a dedication service previously reported in The Bulletin.

The Department of Missions has now completed its part of the plan by delivery of the deed.

The Rev. Benson B. Fisher, now rector of St. Stephen's, Pearl River, was rector of the parish during the early days of this enterprise. The present rector, under whose leadership completion of the church building was accomplished, is the Rev. James J. Sharkey. ■

Long Before This Time

BY RUTH WEBER

"I was at a party one night," said the seminarian, "and I kept meeting people who obviously were surprised to see me there, as though a man studying for the ministry wasn't supposed to have fun!"

"That's the trouble," said his companion. "Many people think a priest — or a prospective priest — is someone who is not human!"

If reports from the field are reliable, many people would like an answer to the question: What are seminarians like? At a seminar on vocations not long ago, some 250 teenagers eagerly pursued the issue. Among their queries: How pious must you be to go into the ministry? Is the ministry only for "holy" people? How often do seminarians pray? What do you study in seminary? Are the subjects hard? At its own informal seminar with a group of seminarians, The Bulletin posed these questions and others.

"The word 'holy' leads people astray," said one young man. (It was he who had been at the party.) "They misunderstand. They think holiness is a case of strict temperance, non-smoking, some sort of extreme abstinence. But our concept revolves around the love of God and its presence in daily life — the knowledge that He is always with you, ever present. It's not a negative thing; it's positive. It's a way of life. Most of us smoke and accept a cocktail occasionally and have a good time — within limits."

"Perhaps," said another student, "People are still being influenced by the Puritan point of view which condemns having any sort of fun and insists that religion consists of a great many prohibitions."

"Wanting to study for the ministry doesn't mean you wish to be, or have to be, removed from life," added his classmate. "The big stress here at seminary is not to be removed from it, but to be immersed in it . . ."

" . . . to find that which is holy in that which is secular," said a fourth young man. "To see God's work in everyday things."

But now, while "holiness" is not the restricted state that many people seem to imagine, a proper attitude for a priest is, in the words of the Prayer Book: "to frame and fashion your own lives, and the lives of your families, according to the Doctrine of Christ; and to make both, yourselves and them, as much as in you lieth, wholesome examples of the flock of Christ."

When a Candidate for Holy Orders presents himself for Ordination to the Priesthood, the Bishop, in his long and serious exhortation, marks the importance of the priestly Office for "Messengers, Watchmen and Stewards of the Lord; to teach, and to premonish, to feed and provide for the Lord's family; to seek for Christ's sheep . . . " He says, "We have good hope that ye have well weighed these things with yourselves, long before this time . . . "

A difference between the man "called" to the ministry and any other person is not so much that he is "holy" but that he is weighing "these things" much more carefully.

The seminarians who were interviewed agreed that most ordinary citizens do not talk easily about prayer and the spiritual life. They added that seminarians are the same way in their junior (first) year, but as they become middlers and seniors, conversations about prayer become more and more frequent. Like most laymen, the juniors are hesitant, feel slightly embarrassed. One of them in the group admitted, "We are talking about everything else this year — about each other, about the faculty, but not about our spiritual selves."

He was echoed by a middler who admitted, "When I first came, this sort of conversation embarrassed me, too. But now I talk about spiritual growth almost constantly with my roommate. And I have found so many lay people who are eager to talk about the subject if I introduce it, that I have no hesitation about talking to anybody who seems interested."

What brought about the change?

"Prayer to the average person is not a very practical activity," one student suggested. "But as you move forward to being a priest, prayer becomes more and more practical." Naturally, questions and comments are quite guarded at first, he said. "But when you are living this sort of life every day, the subject just keeps coming up."

Several students said they believe laymen wonder a great deal about prayer life, and would like to explore it more carefully. One reported that his professor, an eminent theologian, insists that the life of prayer is simply not taught enough in the average parish. "If it were, the whole thing wouldn't be so difficult for people to understand, or to do," said the student. "Spiritual life is a question of exposure to it."

What about Chapel?

Most seminaries do not try to legislate aspects of the spiritual life such as chapel attendance. Only one, Nashotah House, has a written rule. A number of others suggest that daily chapel attendance "is expected." The men interviewed by The Bulletin said that they and their classmates attend chapel as a matter of course.

They gave the impression that here is something which, at twelve or sixteen, might be farthest from a boy's mind — going to chapel daily. But at twenty or thirty, still interested in football and a good time, this same young man could very easily find himself on his knees at 6:30 in the morning.

As a matter of fact, some of the seminary deans and other clergy who were interviewed said the slightly uncertain youth, who has had a background of all kinds of activities, usually impresses schools, bishops and standing committees more than one who has been too "churchy" in his interests.

Going still further, "one of the most unfortunate aspirants to the priesthood is the fellow who craves Holy Orders for the authority and distinction they confer," one clergyman said. The Church needs the kind of man Dr. Butler and Professor Pittenger have described in this passage from their book, "What is the Priesthood?"

"Ultimately, the student will not think much of the honor and dignity of this particular vocation. He will not be too greatly swayed by its perils and losses. He will not be drawn to the priesthood simply because he may deem it to be easy and safe (how wrong he would be to suppose it either of these things!) He will not be 'put off' from the priesthood because it is a poorly paid profession with few prizes paid in the currency of the market place. He will not elect to follow this vocation because it presents a chance to escape from the world into an ivory tower. He will heed the divine voice because of his faith in the Redeemer of us all and because he believes that here in the priesthood of the priestly Body of Christ there is opportunity to make an offering of his heart and mind and will that Jesus Christ Himself wants made . . ."

Once he enters seminary, a student's waking hours are long and busy.

The usual work load during the first year includes two courses in Old Testament and two in New Testament (at least partly in Greek), plus church history and pastoral theology. Some seminaries add music, public speaking and/or clinical pastoral training. One school gives a course entitled "personal religion."

More study in Old and New Testament is generally required in the middle and senior years. Study of the Synoptic Gospels, Johannine literature and the Epistles of St. Paul is particularly emphasized in the New Testament courses, although which one of these comes first or last depends upon the school.

Other middle and senior year subjects include church history, homiletics (the preparation and delivery of sermons), systematic theology (the study of Christianity's body, or system, of ideas), apologetics (the systematic defense of the divine origin and authority of Christianity), dogmatics (doctrinal theology), ethics, liturgics (the study of Christian worship), Christian education, and pastoral theology. Every student, also, must know how to conduct all of the Prayer Book services.

Clinical Training

All but three seminaries now require a period of clinical pastoral training. This period of undergraduate service is becoming to the ministry what student teaching is to education. At Virginia Seminary, the pioneer in developing this type of program, Dean Jesse M. Trotter says that a summer in the field "gives the student an opportunity to see what society is doing to people, and to see the relevance of the Christian faith."

At Virginia the program lasts 12 weeks, and students work in various types of institutions from South Carolina all the way to Connecticut. General Theological Seminary, in New York City, has a compulsory summer field work program. During the academic year many students volunteer to serve (with pay, of course) in urban and suburban parishes throughout this area.

A young seminarian comforts a troubled woman. Clinical pastoral training has become an important aspect of a seminarian's work. Nearly all of the accredited schools now insist upon some undergraduate service in hospitals and other institutions.

Not requiring clinical training programs are Berkeley, where it is "expected," nevertheless, and Nashotah House and CDSP, where it is "recommended."

In some schools, general headings like "pastoral theology" may include what in another seminary comes under a separate heading of "canon law," "parish administration" or "pastoral counseling." But curricula follow closely the list in the Constitution and Canons. The 11 theological seminaries considered in this article are members of, and are accredited by, the American Association of Theological Schools, an organization set up specifically to assure a certain scholastic standard under the broad canonical program.

The most difficult course at seminary is generally conceded to be Greek. Tough as it is to learn, Greek is considered indispensible for complete understanding of New Testament study. Some schools, however, schedule more Greek than others. But the poor level of advance preparation in Greek is a source of concern to deans all over.

At Sewanee, where a planned campaign has been started "to break the back of the Greek problem," juniors who cannot pass an entrance examination in Greek reading, or who have not been dispensed by their Bishops from the study of Greek, take a two-week, accelerated course before the regular academic year begins. This consists of 40 hours of nothing but Greek. Then, during the first-semester course, they are assigned readings from the New Testament and other selected Greek texts.

"By following this schedule, we get Greek pretty much out of the way by Thanksgiving," reported Dean George M. Alexander. "The program is still an experiment. We're not altogether satisfied with it, but we've had some good results."

The most useful course at seminary?

Several seminarians interviewed by The Bulletin proposed pastoral theology, parish administration, the preparation, delivery and criticism of sermons, principles of counseling, and various phases of Christian education.

One student said he considers New Testament studies the most useful, with Greek a close second. Another voted for preaching.

The easiest course?

"There aren't any," chuckled the seminarians. But, astonishingly enough, one of them named Greek! "I think the difficulty of Greek is a big myth," he chortled. Several others nominated Christian education.

How many dates?

Do seminarians ever do anything but study? Do they have any free time? Can they go out on dates, for instance?

Why, certainly.

"But you have to organize your time," warned a member of the group. "You quickly learn to pick and choose what is important to do."

One student said his adviser flatly told him to take one half day off each week and devote it entirely to leisure.

A well-organized senior said he dates four or five nights a week. Approximately half of the students dated "regularly." The other half date "occasionally," it was estimated. Juniors are not apt to date so frequently as upper classmen for two reasons: They are new in the area and have few friends, and the curriculum in the first year really keeps you hopping. "We're given enough work so we could be occupied 100 per cent of the time," one junior said.

What if you decide to get married while in seminary?

All of the seminaries will accept students who are married at the time they apply for entrance, but policies differ on marriage during the three-year residence. GTS has a strict rule that "if any student shall marry during his connection with the Seminary he shall cease to be a member of the institution." At most other schools, marriage is permitted with the consent of the dean, the faculty and the student's bishop. Nashotah House comments in its catalog that this permission is given "rarely."

More and more married men, many of them with children, are entering the nation's Episcopal seminaries. Typical of these students is George C. Brower, a member of St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck, who is a middler, or second-year man, in the School of Theology of the University of the South. Mr. Brower formerly was in the television and appliance retail business.

Most of the other schools have more liberal policies, and most bishops reportedly are willing to give the required permission after assuring themselves that a couple's preparation for marriage presents no major problems either financial or psychological. Bishop Donegan said he considers each case on its own merits. "Sometimes it is better for a man to be married even if it means he has to change seminaries," he told The Bulletin.

Dean Lawrence Rose of GTS said he believes that marriage while in seminary "complicates life."

He said, "The requirement of adjustment to life here has a rather high vocational tension which does not furnish the best auspices under which to start that other adjustment to family life. I think the emotional pressures are greater in seminary than in law or medical school, or, in fact, than in most graduate schools. And the adjustment is a more costly process. We question whether it is advisable for young men to subject themselves to two kinds of emotional strain at the same time."

Dean Rose said he is convinced that "the whole pattern of early marriage (in college and graduate school) has grave danger for the future of the institution of society," and he added, "I know doctors and psychiatrists who agree thoroughly."

Reports from the seminarians themselves indicate that when a man is attending seminary, the adage that "two can live as cheaply as one," is simply not true. Housing is a problem, and rents are high everywhere. Most wives have to work. Yet, despite these drawbacks, the percentage of married seminarians is increasing annually. Philadelphia and Seabury-Western report that approximately 50 per cent of their student body is married. At Virginia there are more married than single students.

One of the men interviewed by The Bulletin said he considers being married a distinct advantage. "You're settled, you have a domestic routine; after classes you go home to your own happy hearth and aren't tempted to go gadding about and wasting time."

During the entire three years in seminary, many of a man's major decisions will be reached after consultation with his Diocesan Bishop. Without doubt, he is the single most important and influential factor in any seminarian's life. At the Ember Days, four times a year, in Lent, at Pentecost, and in September and December, the student must "report himself to the Ecclesiastical Authority personally or by letter." In the Diocese of New York, this Ecclesiastical Authority is, of course, Bishop Donegan. How do the seminarians feel about this obligation?

"Well, when I first saw the Bishop, I sat around with a great deal of awe," admitted one student tentatively.

"I know," a second chimed in. "So did I. But, when I began to know the Bishop better, I realized I could really go to him about any problem. I have all the confidence in the world that he knows best."

And what does the Bishop think of the students? Is writing letters or seeing 39 Postulants and Candidates four times a year a grim chore? Not on your life!

Bishop Donegan says he enjoys this part of his work, and he writes a personal letter to each young man.

"They write about all sorts of things," he reported. "Often they write very wonderful letters, too."

He continued, "I desire to have a pastoral relationship with these men, not simply an official one. Then my clergy have no hesitancy to seek my counsel on any matter that concerns them."

The clergy ordained by Bishop Donegan keep in touch with him even after they are well settled in parishes. "They ask me to officiate at their marriages, baptize their children. Naturally, I follow the careers of all the men I ordain with the deepest of interest."

Actually, Bishop Donegan has more seminarians to communicate with than almost any other bishop. It is his custom to hold an annual conference for seminarians and a retreat before ordination. At the present time, there are students from the Diocese of New York in seven of the Church's eleven schools.

"I wish parents would encourage their sons when they are considering the ministry as a vocation," the Bishop told The Bulletin.

"The tragedy is that some parents discourage young men because they would rather have them successful financially. The ministry does not offer financial rewards, but if a man loves the Lord and His Church, and cares for people, there is no more satisfying, challenging and unique opportunity for service than Holy Orders."

He was silent a moment.

"Some church people are willing to have anyone else's son go into the ministry but their own," he said wistfully. ■

Students in seminary have to eat, too. At General Theological Seminary, the refectory is called Hoffman Hall, in memory of Dr. Eugene Augustus Hoffman, who was dean of the seminary around the turn of the century. The splendidly paneled room accommodates the whole student body of nearly 200. Faculty members are served at a long table on the dais at the rear.

Bishop Elected Chairman GTS Board of Trustees

Bishop Donegan has been elected chairman of the Board of Trustees of General Theological Seminary.

The action, which was unanimous, took place at a meeting January 17. The Bishop succeeds the Rt. Rev. Benjamin M. Washburn, retired Bishop of Newark, who held the post for 15 years. The seminary trustees elect a chairman every three years.

The election of Bishop Donegan represents the first time in the history of GTS that a Bishop of New York has been elected board chairman. Prior to the adoption, in 1913, of the seminary's present constitution, the senior Bishop of the Church automatically became the presiding officer. New York's Bishop Henry Codman Potter served in this capacity during the 1880's.

Normally, the Bishop of New York is an ex-officio officer of the 42-member body. The board also consists of the Presiding Bishop and the Dean of GTS; ten bishops, ten priests and ten laymen chosen by the House of Bishops and House of Deputies; and three bishops, three priests and three laymen chosen by seminary alumni.

Six Manhattan Churches Sponsor Laymen's Course

Six Manhattan churches are sponsoring a four-part course for the laity on Monday evenings during February. The series is entitled "The Biblical Perspective" and will be held on February 5, 12, 19 and 26 at 7:45 p.m. at Calvary Church, 61 Gramercy Park North.

The Rev. Dr. Robert C. Dentan, Trinity Church Professor of Old Testament Literature and Interpretation at General Theological Seminary, will conduct the series. His topics will be "The Biblical Experience of God," "The Biblical Understanding of Man," "The Biblical Interpretation of Christ," and "The Biblical Way of Life."

The cooperating churches are Calvary, St. Mark's - in - the - Bouwerie, Grace, Ascension, Holy Communion, and Holy Trinity, East 88th Street.

Purpose of the series, according to a spokesman for the cooperating churches, is to offer laymen the opportunity to be intellectually challenged, with the hope that each parish later will integrate the material presented by Dr. Dentan into its own adult education program.

The Rev. Miller Cragon, Director of the Diocese's Department of Christian Education, said that the series reflects a trend which is being encouraged by his Department — to present more inter-parish events. ■

Did God punish Hitler through making him lose the war?

Hitler had already lost the war before it started. His was an internal war which personified and symbolized a similar experience on the part of a profoundly sick element of a great nation. Hitler did not create the Third Reich, he was the incarnation of the disease which made it possible. The answer then is Yes — if you are aware of the real cause of the war and the issues at stake. The solemn Christian reminder is this: even had he won the war he would still have lost it in the only area which really matters. Alexander the Great did just this. All the people who heard Jesus would immediately have thought of Alexander when these words were uttered, "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

Hails Orthodox Admission

Dr. Paul B. Anderson of White Plains has retired from his post with the International Committee of the YMCA of the United States and Canada. He had been associated with the YMCA since 1913.

Dr. Anderson, a member of St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, and a deputy to the 1961 General Convention of the Episcopal Church, is regarded as one of America's top authorities on the Eastern Orthodox Churches. He is an associate editor of The Living Church, a weekly Episcopal news magazine.

Although he is relinquishing his active role in YMCA, Dr. Anderson will continue to serve the International Committee in an honorary capacity as its adviser on East-West relations and ecumenical affairs. Upon his return from his most recent visit to Russia, he told newsmen that he believes the greatest effect of the Russian Orthodox Church's admission to the World Council of Churches will be on the millions of Orthodox faithful in the Soviet Union.

"Every time I have been in Russia," he said, "I have been impressed chiefly by the way in which the people in the local parishes, both in Moscow and elsewhere, have crowded around me and said how glad they were to see Christians from the outside." He added, "There can be little doubt that by voting the Russian Church into its membership, the World Council has done much to hearten and encourage the Russian Orthodox faithful."

Dr. Anderson was originally to have retired in 1959 after having served for 12 years as associate executive secretary of the International Committee, but he was persuaded to remain for another two years as its special agent for ecumenical affairs and policy study. ■

Play at St. George's Wins Critics' Praise

A Christmas play that won the enthusiasm of Broadway critics was given at St. George's, Manhattan, during the holiday season. The production, entitled "The Curate's Play," was commissioned to help celebrate St. George's 150th anniversary.

It was written by Nathaniel Banks and directed and acted by professional theater people. St. George's choir and soloists provided the musical background, which Arthur Gelb of the New York Times said "blended without contrived effect into the whole." He described the performance as "a thoroughly felicitous Nativity play — a delight to eye and ear."

The play — actually a pageant within a play — also was praised by Norman Nadel of the World Telegram and Sun, who said that the production was "well written, intelligently directed and acted with taste and meaning." ■

Roosevelt Family Ties Stressed At St. James Anniversary Event

St. James, Hyde Park, climaxed its 150th anniversary celebration on December 10 with a special service and a parish luncheon. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was the guest speaker.

Bishop Boynton officiated at Confirmation, and delivered the anniversary sermon. The Rev. Gordon L. Kidd presented the Confirmation class, which also included persons from St. Paul's, Poughkeepsie, and St. Margaret's, Staatsburgh.

Arthur S. Halpin, senior warden emeritus, was master of ceremonies at the luncheon, held in the parish house. Mrs. Roosevelt had travelled to Hyde Park from the Midwest especially for this occasion. At its conclusion, she left immediately for California. During her talk, she reminisced, largely about her family's long association with the parish.

President Roosevelt became a vestryman at St. James in 1927, and was senior warden at the time of his death in 1945. His father and stepbrother had been active on the vestry before him.

Mr. Kidd spoke briefly and presented a scroll to Mrs. James E. Spratt, Sr., who compiled a history of the church's past 50 years. It is a supplement to a book published during the centennial. The 150th anniversary celebration began on October 8. On October 10, the actual anniversary day, Mr. Kidd celebrated a family Communion. ■

GFS Faces Sticky Problem; Even the Dog Lends a Hand

Some people complain that money just doesn't stick to their fingers, but the Girls' Friendly Society would just as soon it slid off. Ask Mrs. George Diering, who manages the Episcopal youth group's Diocese of New York office.

When the year's Mission Offering came in, Mrs. Diering discovered about a dozen sheets of paper which had pennies gum taped and glued to them. Not wanting to take time at the office, she took the stuff home.

The next day, Mr. Diering, who is often very helpful in these matters, began to dismount the pennies. "Great Scott, Anne," he said finally, "These things are sticky!"

So this is what they did:

1. Soaked all 533 pennies in a bucket of hot water and soap suds. They were still sticky.
2. Soaked them in ammonia water. No good.
3. Put them in a frying pan and tried to dry them out in the oven. (Mr. Diering was worried about germs, but went along with the deal.) It didn't work.
4. Washed them in bleach water. They came out shiny — but still sticky.
5. Used nail polish remover.
6. Soaked them in soapy water over night and then lined them all up on the back porch for a day to dry in the sun.

"Mom," said Mrs. Diering's youngsters, Barbara and Bob, when she arrived home that night, "The dog walked on your pennies and we thought he had taps on his feet!"

Finally, the pennies were rolled up, taken to the bank and put back in circulation. Still more or less sticky. ■

The Rev. Sidney Lanier, assistant to the rector, St. Thomas, Manhattan.

Often the church has been critical, sometimes justifiably, of the poor artistic and moral quality of much that is seen on Broadway. On the other hand, it seldom approves, with anything like the fervor it shows in pulpit disapproval, productions that are of high quality.

Two such plays are now being shown, and I recommend them as provocative and satisfying on both the emotional and intellectual levels. They are "Gideon" by Paddy Chayevsky and "A Man for All Seasons" by Robert Bolt. My favorite was "A Man for All Seasons," because of the luminous writing and especially the enormously effective performance by Paul Scofield. He gives one of the finest performances I have ever seen anywhere.

I hope many churchmen will make an earnest effort to see both of these remarkable plays.

(Ed. note — Mr. Lanier is a founder and chairman of the Religious Drama Council in Manhattan, and has been active in both the production and performing aspects of religious drama in the theater, radio and television. He is also a writer and critic.)

On the Twelfth Day of Christmas, which is Epiphany, the Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan, celebrated its name day. Members of the congregation who participated in this celebration probably will never forget it. They spent the day working.

The rector, the Rev. Hugh McCandless, had asked everybody who came to wear old clothes and to contribute an hour of work instead of money. After a 9:30 A.M. Communion service, and a breakfast of Epiphany cheeses and Twelfth Cake, the projects began.

They included inspecting and repairing kneeling pads in the church, checking prayer books and hymnals, updating the neighborhood "evangelization" map and looking over acolytes' robes for missing buttons. One group distributed welcome slips to new tenants of apartments in the vicinity. Another group redecorated a reception room.

THE COVER

*is a symbolic interpretation of the Christian Church, showing the unbroken yet diverse way in which people today share the very same mandate that Christ gave the early apostles. "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations . . ." these men were told. So they went, aided by the power of the Holy Ghost which descended at Pentecost. Each ray on our cover represents one of the directions taken by the apostles. Along these rays are the churches — actually Christian families joined by celebration of the Eucharist. # Churchwomen Plan Panel Discussion April 3 in Nyack

"The Christian in Contemporary Society" is the topic of a panel to be presented at a diocesan meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen on April 3 at Grace Church, Nyack.

The program will focus on three aspects of women's role in "The Ministry of the Laity," this year's ECW theme. Panelists will deal primarily with three vocations — business, homemaking, and volunteer activities.

Mrs. Robert H. Howe, of the Diocese of Western New York, representative from Province II to the General Division of Women's Work, National Council, will be moderator. Panelists will be Mrs. Landes Lewitin, representing the business woman; Mrs. Woodson D. Scott, the homemaker and mother; Mrs. Albert D. Ketchum, the volunteer worker; and the Rev. Peter Chase, Canon Pastor of the Cathedral. He will define the priest's role in helping to clarify "The Ministry of the Laity."

Mrs. Lewitin, a communicant of St. Luke's Chapel, Manhattan, is assistant director of the French Broadcasting System. She was an alternate delegate to the Triennial Meeting of ECW in Detroit. Mrs. Scott is ECW chairman of Youth, College and Personnel work for the Diocese. She is a member of St. George's, Manhattan. Mrs. Ketchum, a member of Holy

Presbyterians Lend Church To St. Christopher's Chapel

In the Presbyterian Church of Sea and Land, Bishop Wetmore confirms a class of children and adults being presented by the Rev. William W. Reed, Vicar of St. Christopher's Chapel.

St. Christopher's Chapel, Trinity Parish, is outgrowing its worship facilities at the Jacob Riis Settlement House, 48 Henry Street, Manhattan. When Confirmation came early this year, the clergy wondered what could be done about it.

Nearby, at 61 Henry Street, is the Presbyterian Church of Sea and Land, and its pastor, the Rev. David W. Romig, offered a solution. The class of 33 Episcopal children and adults was confirmed by Bishop Wetmore in the Presbyterian Church. More than 300 people from St. Christopher's English and Spanish congregations attended the service. The Rev. William W. Reed, vicar, was the celebrant.

Mr. Romig told the clergy at St. Christopher's that he hoped the chapel would avail itself of a continuing offer to use the Presbyterian Church facilities from time to time. Mr. Romig said he considers it "most important" that his church and the chapel of Trinity Parish be able to work together.

St. Christopher's will worship in the Sea and Land Church again on Easter Sunday. ■

Mrs. Roosevelt's Name? Nearly!

A vestryman at St. John's-in-the-Village recently discovered the name of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in the visitor's register at the rear of the church. While this was not surprising (Mrs. Roosevelt is an Episcopalian and frequently visits friends living near St. John's) the signature was of enough interest for the rector to show it to a visitor.

But, alas, no signature! Someone had carefully cut the page from the register. Some autograph fanatic, the rector thought.

If that's so, the last laugh is on him. It turned out later that the signature was not Mrs. Roosevelt's — that it had been written in the register by a practical joker — and the practical joker even spelled Mrs. Roosevelt's name incorrectly to avoid forgery. ■

The Bishop's Message

ONCE AGAIN THE CHURCH calls us to keep Lent. Originally, it was a time of preparation for baptism on Easter Even, but gradually it became, as it is today, a penitential season of discipline and prayer. "The importance of Lent," as Dom Gregory Dix says in The Shape of the Liturgy, "lay precisely in this, that it was not just one more ascetic exercise for the devout, but that it was recognized as being of universal obligation. Those who wished might continue to pray and to fast with fervour at other seasons; the sanctity of the Church as a whole might help to carry a considerable number of slack Christians." But Lent was intended to be a strictly corporate effort of the whole Church, from the bishop to the humblest catechumen, to live at least for a season as befitted the Body of Christ in fervent and frequent prayer and in a serious and disciplined spirit, in order that at their corporate Easter communion all might be found truly members of the Body. The fast was not a merely mechanical discipline though it was a severe one.

The old Lenten sermons insist strongly on mutual forgiveness and forbearance, on the intensification of private prayer and generosity in almsgiving and on regular and devout attendances at biblical and doctrinal instruction as Lenten observances, just as strictly required of the Christian as the physical abstinence from food.

When the whole world was becoming nominally Christian there was a great wholesomeness about this annual requirement of a season of serious self-discipline. It reminded the careless and sinful Christian, as insistently as it did the devout, of the claims of the Christian standard: "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind."

We cannot say that our world is now even nominally Christian, therefore we need to make the best possible use of Lent. We need to work at our religion, to pray more, to give generously, to participate with regularity in Sunday and weekday public worship, to receive further instruction in the teaching of the Church as it is set forth in the Bible and the Book of Common Prayer, and, in our daily life, to walk more faithfully in the Christian way. We need the reminder which Lent brings of the duty of self-examination. It is essential to take stock of ourselves, to discover just where we are going in our religious life. Someone has said: "The unexamined life is not worth living." Lent is a time for taking spiritual inventory.

In calling us to observe Lent, the Church does not hedge us about with minute rules and restrictions. The great principles of the Christian life are held up before us and we are left to apply them under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. The Church expects and trusts us so to use the Lenten season that it will make our religion more real to us and a greater power in our lives. Let us keep Lent this year as never before, that it may be for us the rich, rewarding experience it is designed to be — a time of moral renewal and of spiritual refreshment to our souls.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

Your Money--

A frank and unrehearsed conversation about people, their lives and their money. Some of the conclusions may astonish you!

The dialogue which follows is an actual tape recording of an interview with Eric Ley, Director of Stewardship for the Diocese of New York.

What is the chief aim of stewardship? Isn't it getting people to pledge more and more money to the church?

No, it isn't. It isn't at all. In fact, money and stewardship aren't necessarily related. Stewardship is a matter of getting the individual to exercise his basic membership in the Church.

What do you mean by basic membership?

Our Lord told his apostles to go into all the world and teach the Gospel. He made them "the Church." People are "the Church."

So here we are, descendants, if you will, of the disciples and apostles, and we, today, are "the Church." All the time we have had a charge laid upon us: To exercise our stewardship as Christians, to go teach, bring people to Christ. Now, you can expand this to think of a steward as someone who is given charge over something. Just as in the famous parable the landlord distributed talents, so God has given us "talents," with the expectation that we will be stewards. Ultimately, I think this means we're to use them for the betterment of mankind.

This sounds as if stewardship means more than simply going to church on Sunday.

Stewardship operates every day in the week.

You mean we are supposed to use our "talents," and these aren't just money?

That's the point exactly. As far as money is concerned, it's something collateral. It runs parallel to other things, but it does not cross.

Where does money enter into this thing?

Well, let me start from the beginning. After Our Lord had charged his apostles to go into all the world, the first Church was pulled together in somebody's home, we're quite sure. These people felt their charge very deeply. They said, "Our job is to go into the world, teaching, baptizing, bringing people to Christ. Okay, let's get started."

But someone said, "I'm a fisherman. Can I leave my nets? Can I leave my family? I want to, but how can I?" So, we read, there were people in the congregation who sold their possessions, sold their homes, and brought the money and laid it at the feet of the apostles. Thus, the giving of money started very early, and men were able to go out and teach. Some of those who were taught listened, were convinced, and in turn went out and taught others. That's the way it went, down through the centuries.

We stop here for St. Andrew's, Staten Island, and there for Trinity, Manhattan, and so we go. But the charge that was laid on one church back in the first century is also laid on the one established in 1753 or 1895 or 1962.

Now, it's true that this straight line of responsibility has a number of intersections, because here came the Methodists, and here came the Roman Catholics. But the original intent was to carry out the charge given by Christ. Not to be a religious club, not to be a self-contained institution, not to be a group of people who sit and are entertained . . .

In this Diocese, there's a Division of Stewardship. Is it teaching this attitude?

It's trying to teach it, yes. Unfortunately the only entree it has to the parish is the financial one, because this is the only understanding, generally speaking, that vestries and congregations have of the word "stewardship." Our only access to a parish occurs when the parish has a financial problem or would like to expand its work and has heard that it can get help from us.

Or Your Life?

Eric Ley:
"The original intent of the Church was . . . not to be a religious club, not to be a self-contained institution, not to be a group of people who sit and are entertained . . ."

You just don't go to parishes? You wait to be invited?

Oh, yes. I wait to be invited. And when I go into a parish, I don't talk about finances, either!

You don't? How is that possible? Where do you start?

Take a look at the cover design for this issue and go all the way back to the first little Christian gatherings. That's where we start.

In today's parishes you get to the point eventually where everybody recognizes that you have to go out and test the people who profess to be members of this congregation. We, individually, as canvassers, have the job of going into homes and talking about the Church, and about our motives for giving. But we never ask anybody for money. Not ever. We have the pledge cards, yes. But these don't come out for a long, long time.

Speaking of pledge cards, should the clergy pledge?

By all means.

Do they?

They do, indeed. They're better than parishioners, generally, because they understand this matter of giving back to God in gratitude. I've heard of parishes where the rector is criticized for giving because the vestry says it's simply taken out of one pocket of the church and put into another. But they want to rob the rector of the joy of giving back to God.

Don't they think of that?

No. Who's going to teach them? You see, a lot of people "never talk about money" in the Church. It isn't nice. And this is the thing that plays into the hands of the token givers. They've set up this — this wall, you might say — of money being indecent.

Why?

It's a long story. It's a shame. The token givers toss money to the Church and say, "What I give is my business. It's between me and the Lord." They would hate to have the Lord know what they give. They don't believe anybody knows. But if it's more than a dollar they want the clergy to know, because this is a "splendid" gift.

You're kidding. What is the average gift?

It's hard to say. It varies. In some parishes, it's under a dollar; in some it's up close to five dollars. These are generally where people are enlightened about the meaning of stewardship.

Isn't it true that people are giving to the Church pretty much according to their means?

Oh no! Not at all. Of course they're not! They're giving to the Church because the Church has run around for at least 40 years peddling the budget — talking about the fact that the cost of fuel and salaries has gone up. The last thing mentioned — and people shudder as if it were some terribly distasteful thing to talk about — is that the Missionary Quota has gone up.

All the while we're peddling the budget, some fellow has called on the man next door who is a member of the American Legion, for example, trying to get him to support the budget in terms of salaries and fuel oil. The stories are the same. Only the name of the organization has been changed. And it's about as poor a way to approach this matter of stewardship as I know. But the Church has done it. It seemed the good business approach. Tell people what you need the money for, and they will give. Not so. It's only in the enlightened parishes where as high as 70 per cent of the communicants, or families, pledge. It's more often in the neighborhood of 45 per cent.

Only 45 per cent pledge?

Of the families, yes. No, people don't give, generally, in proportion to their income. They don't give on a meaningful basis.

What is a meaningful basis?

Suppose you have someone you love very dearly. You want to give a gift, to be an expression of your love. You don't go find the cheapest, tawdriest thing on the counter. You look for the best. The very best. What you give is an expression of your joy. Your friend hasn't asked for this gift, but you want him to have it. This is meaningful TO YOU.

The problem, of course, is that down through the years, this business of our making it possible for somebody else to go out and do the teaching for the Church has become so terribly impersonal. The first Christians knew the men they were sending out into the world. But today, we do this through the Department of Missions in the Diocese of New York, and through the National Council.

Could you explain these Departments of Missions?

When we talk about the Missionary Quota in the parish, few people understand it, but what it's for is to keep the diocesan departments and the National Council operating. The National Council's needs are established by quota to the dioceses. Our diocesan needs are set up by making up a budget for each department — Christian Education, Christian Social Relations, and so forth. The total quota and budget is approved by Convention in May. But there's usually a shortage.

You mean the churches don't pay their share?

Last year the total for quota and budgets was $1,199,265. And if you will turn to last month's copy of The Bulletin, you will see that payments came to $983,957, a deficit of $215,309. As a result, somebody's program has to be cut.

What I want to emphasize is that the income to all parishes in this Diocese is more than $12 million. The quota was nearly $1,200,000. You can see that if this money was paid, the amount to be used for Our Lord's charge, "go into all the world" is less than 10 cents on the dollar!

Even at that, some churches say "we can't even pay our own bills, let alone worry about some group in Africa?" What about that?

The very parish that talks that way is often one that owes its existence to the missionary spirit of somebody 100 years ago. The parish was brought into existence to do a job. When its people reach the point where they cannot share with anybody else, this is not a Christian family. These are the people who have what somebody once called the lifeboat complex. They're in the lifeboat all these people. Some of them hate each other, but there they are. This is the parish. They're not going anywhere. They have no compass, no rudder. They drift around, all over the ocean. This is the comradeship of the lost. We have them here. Right in this Diocese. People who won't let the rector go out calling on new people. They don't want him going into the new project nearby. They don't want "those people in our church."

Yet, there are more individuals than whole parishes who don't believe in missions.

Are we making any progress?

There are fewer individuals today who don't like missions than there were some years ago. Before 1919, the only way missionary bishops could support their districts was to preach at parishes here and there. They received whatever was collected at the service. But in 1919 this was changed, and we got into the Every Member Canvass idea, the two-sided envelope, and the quota system. But now we're trying to get away from the red and black-sided envelope. One of the efforts we're making in Stewardship is to have churches budget their missionary quota. By and large, it's 10 cents on the dollar.

I know of one rector in this Diocese who told his vestry that the Missionary Quota payments must be divided by 12, and sent to the Diocese in 12 monthly payments. He said that any month when the Missionary Quota isn't paid, he will not accept his salary.

Isn't that pretty startling?

This man is a startling person. But the church has met its Quota. Every month it sends a check. This takes courage. A lot of it.

It would seem from this that what the Church needs most is a lot of people with vision, personality, perseverance and courage. Where do you get them?

They're there. The raw material is right in the parishes. It needs a catalyst. Someone to go in and dig it out.

And this is where stewardship work comes in?

It is. A parish is like fallow ground. You kind of dig it up, harrow it and plant a few seeds . . . But it has to be done every generation. Except that if you teach stewardship to the parent to the point where he will teach it to his children, some of the next generation's digging is already done. But this is another whole subject. Sometime I'll tell you about this. ■

Sometimes You Can Use Borrowed Talent

The Sunday bulletin at Church of the Divine Love, Montrose, is an example of how talented laymen from one parish can help in another, the Rev. John A. Bruce believes.

Father Bruce became rector of Divine Love last year. He wanted to start a parish leaflet, but he wanted it to have an attractive format that would somehow illustrate the symbolism of "divine love."

In his old parish, St. Barnabas, Irvington, where he had served as curate, Father Bruce remembered Henri Fluchere, an artist and illustrator with a particular talent for heraldic designs. Mr. Fluchere, a vestryman, had done some six architectural plaques at St. Barnabas. Chiefly he designs and illustrates technical textbooks. He has also written and illustrated several books on art instruction, and he writes magazine articles. But he specializes in heraldry and illumination, and he is being considered for listing as Heraldic Artist by the Genealogical Section of the New York Public Library.

Mr. Fluchere's design, shown on this page, is of a cross with trefoil medallions, interwoven with a ribbon bearing the words which appear on the chancel arch of the Montrose church. The trefoil medallions illustrate four principal instances of the Divine Love — the Della Robbia baby symbolizing the Incarnation; the boat, the ecumenical movement; the dove and the shell, the Sacrament of Baptism, and the grapes, the Holy Eucharist.

(NOTE: Father Bruce has left Divine Love since this story was written, and is now at Christ Church, Charlotte, North Carolina.) ■

It is all too true! Some churches have never started a single candidate along "The Road to the Ministry" described in two previous issues of The Bulletin.

MEET THE RECTOR WHO INSPIRED . . .

TEN

When ten young men emerge from one parish and say, "I am going into the ministry!" don't you want to ask, "What made this happen?" Some churches have never produced a candidate, you know.

The parish is Ascension, Staten Island. Its rector is the Rev. Raymond G. Rogers. Father Rogers.

He is a grey-eyed, sandy-haired, articulate man who has the build of an athlete and the mind of a scholar, a friendly smile and a cordial manner. He looks earnest and straightforward. He also looks as if he wouldn't stand for much nonsense.

Is he the chief reason for so much interest in the ministry? Indeed he is. Before he arrived in 1942, the parish, founded in 1802, had sent only two candidates into the ministry. In the past 20 years, eight have been ordained to the priesthood, and two are in seminary.

Father Rogers loves the priesthood with a single-minded and exuberant devotion that bubbles up and overflows into his conversation; in fact, into everything he does. He truly thinks the priesthood is the highest calling there is.

He also has a way with boys. He is interested in them, he understands them, he encourages their confidence and he shares their problems. Boys, understandably, are very fond of him. Perhaps some of them decide they want to be like him. But this, if it is true, is only part of the reason why ten men from Ascension have chosen Holy Orders, including one of the rector's sons.

"All these years I have worked to develop a 'family' parish," he explains. "I believe we have the most closely knit unit I have ever seen. People in the parish know all these boys. They have a tremendous interest in them. I have tried to treat every boy as if he were my own son."

But this story is about a parish that may hold some kind of record.

FROM STATEN ISLAND

Since he has four sons and two daughters, Father Rogers knows what he is talking about.

He, himself, is an only child. His parents were Baptists and he grew up in Hudson Falls, a small community in northern New York State. Instead of taking over the family lumbering business, he became a professional organist. For nearly 15 years, he was the organist at St. Clement's Church, Manhattan, where he developed an outstanding boys' choir. In 1932, at the age of 28, he decided to enter the ministry.

It was no sudden decision. It never should be, he believes. In his own case, as well as that of every boy whom he has sponsored, the "call" to enter Holy Orders became sharp and clear only after a long period of slow, solid deliberation.

In any event, after his ordination to the diaconate, Father Rogers served as a curate at St. Clement's for a year, then became curate, organist and director of Christian Education at Church of the Messiah, Glens Falls. Ascension was his third church. He is its tenth rector.

Strictly speaking, his first candidate for the ministry was not a member of Ascension, but a Glens Falls parishioner, Charles H. Kaulfuss.

He came to New York at the same time as Father Rogers, became a lay reader at Ascension and then started to study for the priesthood. He was ordained in 1947.

As the years went on, other boys followed suit. "But I never push anybody," Father Rogers declares. In fact, he says he uses every discouraging tactic he can possibly think of. When he has run out of ammunition, and the boy still wants to be a priest, the rector says he is pretty sure he has a good candidate. "I don't think we would have so many defections from seminary if more stones were thrown beforehand," he says.

At first some fellows see only the glamor side of the ministry. Some of the initial questions are, "How demanding is it?" What do I have to do? Is your time your own? What sort of status does a priest have? How much money can I make?"

At this point Father Rogers usually warns that "the ministry is one of the lonesomest jobs a man can choose."

You're set apart, he explains. On a train or a ferry, where there are only a few vacant seats left, the last one to be taken is invariably the one next to the man with the turned-around collar.

"People are aloof. They are shy. They don't know exactly what to do with you." Still, Father Rogers is not of the slap-the-rector-on-the-back school of thought.

If the ministry is a lonesome profession, that's the way it has to stay, and he's opposed to making bosom pals of the vestry and congregation and having people call you by your first name. "It's not the man, the Rev. Raymond G. Rogers, who deserves this respect, but the office of the priesthood," he declares. His ten candidates represent a wide assortment of personalities and they are "very much he-men," but they have two things in common: All convinced their rector that they were sincere Churchmen and had really worked at their faith. And not one has ever presumed to call him anything but "Father Rogers."

The ministry is a demanding profession. "As a priest, you are called to be a servant. Therefore, you have to be ready to serve at all times, not merely at your convenience. Your life is as little your own as a good doctor's," Father Rogers tells his boys.

"It is a profession that requires level-headedness — the ability to think on your feet in a tight situation and not get rattled.

It requires diplomacy. It requires tolerance on one hand and absolute loyalty and obedience on the other."

Having come from a Baptist background, the rector believes he places special emphasis upon understanding the other fellow's views on churchmanship. At Ascension, he uses a ceremonial which is quite elaborate. But he says all of his candidates have come to realize that ritual is not important in itself. All have gone into parishes which are different from Ascension in one way or another. Father Rogers says this has pleased him.

But while he teaches tolerance in churchmanship, he is most intolerant of any sloppiness in personal habits or mental attitude. He admits he is a "taskmaster." He says, "I honestly feel when a person commits himself to the service of the Lord, from that point on, he doesn't do what he wants to do, he does what his superior tells him. " He makes his boys toe the mark. They know they can call upon him at any hour of day or night, and that they will receive his full attention and genuine concern. But they don't horse around.

Yet now, having made everything so difficult, Father Rogers admits that he has never successfully discouraged a boy who wanted to be a priest. Some started to talk about it as early as junior high. Frederick Gutekunst was like that. "I always seem to have had the priesthood in the back of my mind, but Father Rogers was the determining factor," he admits. "There's a quality about him that's catching. He's a very real person. Very honest. Very frank. No beating about the bush. He shows you just by his everyday life that the priesthood isn't what a boy usually thinks it is — something for people who aren't quite human. Part of living near him is to discover how happy a person can be in the priesthood."

Father Gutekunst admitted that his mentor made him stay in line. "He's very stern but very lovable," he

The Rev. Raymond G. Rogers smiles as visitors question him about his parish, Ascension, Staten Island, and ten young men who have gone from that parish into the ministry.

WHO THEY ARE — WHERE THEY'VE GONE

Of the ten men who are priests or are preparing for Holy Orders from Church of the Ascension, S. I., three are now serving as rectors. They are the Rev. Messrs. Charles H. Kaulfuss, St. Stephen's, Elmsmere, N. Y.; Kenneth G. Drescher, Good Shepherd, Granite Springs, N. Y. and Frederick R. Gutekunst, who is at the largest parish in Jersey City, St. Stephen's.

The Rev. Bernard Costello is Father Rogers' curate at Ascension. The Rev. Charles Herrick is a curate at Grace Church, Lockport, N. Y. The Rev. George Merrill is assistant minister at St. John's, West Hartford, Connecticut.

Two were ordained to the priesthood last December, including Father Rogers' son, Richard. He is curate at Zion Church, Wappingers Falls. The Rev. Joel Novey is curate at St. Mark's and St. John's, Rochester. The last two, Edmund Schmidt and Frederick E. Preuss, are still in seminary.

said. "He's devout and sincere. He allows the Holy Spirit to work within him and guide him, not his own will. Maybe this is the quality that is catching."

Some of the other boys got into college before they began to think seriously about the ministry. One found himself in the Korean war before the idea crossed his mind.

With several, an obvious stumbling block was money. One trouble with the ministry is that the rewards are not apt to be tangible, Father Rogers acknowledges. Other jobs pay more for less effort, and a fellow has to think twice about what kind of living he is going to make. Still, one of the Ascension candidates turned down $10,000 a year as a commercial pilot to enter the ministry.

Then there's the problem of getting through seminary. Costs run at least $1,000 a year, conservatively, and many families just can't do it. Ascension is creating a trust fund which eventually can be used to help seminarians.

As one may suspect, Father Rogers has by no means sponsored his last candidate. He has high hopes for a second son, Marcus Brayton Rogers, who is a captain in the Marine Corps. And there are a couple of young servers in the parish who have indicated considerable interest.

But whatever credit accrues for having guided so many young men into the ministry, Father Rogers insists that it be given to the parish and not to himself. Rather than have a Theological Education Sunday once a year, he says he would like to see parishes and priests all over the Diocese develop a real concern about young people and their vocations.

Bishop Boynton, a close friend of Father Rogers, agrees with this viewpoint.

"I think many young men would respond if rectors were not afraid to talk about the subject, didn't hesitate to bring it up."

Father Rogers, Bishop Boynton points out, "has not been afraid to confront boys at a time when they should be thinking about what they are going to do with their lives." ■

Mrs. Gurney Williams Named Head Of Mission Society Woman's Council

Mrs. Williams

Mrs. Gurney Williams, Diocesan President of the Episcopal Churchwomen, will serve as chairman of the Woman's Council of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, beginning next fall.

The appointment was made by Bishop Donegan, President of the Mission Society.

Mrs. Williams will succeed the founding chairman, Mrs. Thomas F. Vietor of Manhattan. For the past three years, Mrs. Williams has served in the Woman's Council Cabinet as representative of ECW. Her second term as ECW president expires in May.

Chief among the seven services of the 131-year-old Episcopal Mission Society is its sponsorship of the Protestant Chaplain in 41 public institutions in the ten counties comprising the Diocese of New York. Nearly 400 Episcopal women are now serving in the Woman's Council as Chaplain's Aides, principally in hospitals and homes for the aged. They also serve at St. Barnabas House, the Society's shelter for temporarily homeless children, and at Elko Lake Camps, which hold summer programs for more than 1,500 underprivileged children each year. ■

Track 13 Redcap Featured Speaker At Parish Crusade

Ralston Young, famous redcap of the movie "Track 13", was the featured speaker at a parish crusade at St. Philip's, Manhattan, from February 26 through March 2. Unchurched people especially were invited to the series of evangelistic services. "Some might consider our parish crusade a mission and some might call it an old-fashioned revival," commented the Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector.

A hymn sing featuring a chorus of 100 was held each night, followed by Mr. Young's talk.

Mr. Young, also known as Redcap 42, is an Episcopal layman who for almost 20 years has been conducting fellowship meetings three times a week in a railroad coach on Track 13 at Grand Central Station. His evangelistic work was the subject of a television program produced by the Episcopal Radio and TV Foundation. Recently this documentary was offered as a 16 mm movie.

Mr. Young was confirmed at St. Philip's in 1939. He now lives in New Jersey. ■

NOW! Lifetime Hospitalization

Pays $100.00 Weekly from First Day

NO WAITING PERIODS ✶ ONLY YOU CAN CANCEL

If you are the one American in four who does not drink, the Gold Star Total Abstainers' Hospitalization Policy will pay you $100.00 a week in cash, from your first day in the hospital and will continue paying as long as you are there, even for life!

If you do not drink and are carrying ordinary hospitalization insurance, you are of course helping to pay for the accidents and hospital bills of those who drink. Alcoholism is our nation's #3 health problem, ranking immediately behind heart disease and cancer! With the GOLD STAR PLAN you are not called upon to help pay the high bills for the ailments and accidents of those who drink. GOLD STAR rates are based on the SUPERIOR HEALTH RECORDS of Non-Drinkers!

For the first time, you can get the newest and most modern type of hospitalization coverage at unbelievably low rates, because the Gold Star Policy is offered only to non-drinkers. And your low Gold Star premium can never be raised because you have grown older or have had too many claims. Only in the event of a general rate adjustment up or down for all policyholders can your rate be changed!

One out of every seven people will spend some time in the hospital this year. Every day over 64,000 people enter the hospital — 47,000 of these for the first time!

READ WHAT A BLESSING THIS PROTECTION HAS BEEN TO OTHERS

AUGUSTA STORAKER, Staten Island, New York—"I appreciated your promptness in handling my claim. Thank you very much. Will surely recommend your Company for its trustworthiness."

MRS. N. L. KOLB, Rochester, New York—"I am most grateful for the hospitalization I received through the De Moss service to non-drinkers. It was the only insurance I found covering my age of 86 years. Almost before the ink was dry on the policy, I fell, cracked a bone in my leg, and received payment for every day I was in the hospital."

DOROTHEA BUCK, Jamestown, New York—"The kind letter, with check enclosed, brought cheer and encouragement. Accept my hearty appreciation for the prompt and most satisfactory settlement of claim."

MRS. MARGUERITE JOSLYN, Auburn, New York—"Thank you for my checks. The last one came today. I can truly say I am glad to recommend the Gold Star policy to anyone. Even though my policy was in effect less than a month, I received full payment for the time I was in the hospital."

MR. CARMAN McEWEN, Malone, New York—"I certainly appreciate the prompt action in payment of my claim for my recent hospitalization."

MRS. HELEN L. RICKETTS, Canandaigua, New York—"Thank you very much for your check covering my twelve days hospitalization. I am pleased with the service given and will gladly recommend your insurance to friends."

LOW RATES FOR NON-DRINKERS

With a Gold Star Total Abstainers' Hospitalization Policy, you receive $100.00 per week in cash, as long as you remain in the hospital, starting from your very first day there, for either sickness or accident. If your hospital stay is less than one week, you still collect at the rate of $14.29 per day. Even if you are already covered by another policy, the GOLD STAR PLAN will supplement that coverage, and will pay you directly, in addition to your present policy. And your benefits are tax-free!

This wonderful, generous protection costs only $4 a month for each adult, age 19 through 64, or $40 for twelve full months. For each child under 19, the rate is just $3 for a month's protection. And for each adult of age 65 through 100, the premium is only $6 a month, or $60 for a full year.

And remember, with Gold Star, the NO LIMIT Hospital Plan, there is NO LIMIT on how long you can stay in the hospital, NO LIMIT on the number of times you can collect (and the Company can never cancel your policy), and NO LIMIT on age!

Compare this plan with others. We welcome comparison because the GOLD STAR PLAN pays from the very first day (we can't pay any sooner); and it pays forever . . . as long as you remain in the hospital (we can't pay any longer!).

Six Invested At Ceremony In Cathedral

Six persons were invested with membership in the Most Venerable Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem on January 7 at the Cathedral. The investiture was the second to take place outside of the British Commonwealth. The first was held at the Cathedral two years ago when the American Branch of the Order was established.

The Order is a religious, military and philanthropic organization, with Queen Elizabeth II as its sovereign head. The American Branch devotes its charity to the field of opthalmology (eye diseases).

Lord Wakehurst, Governor of Northern Ireland, who is Lord Prior of the Order, came to New York especially to act at the investiture. Bishop Donegan, a Sub-Prelate, was the Officiating Chaplain. Members of the Canadian Priory of the Order, and of the Johanniterorder of Germany, attended.

Those who were invested are Hugh Bullock of New York, as Associate Knight; Clarence G. Michalis of New York, and Richard W. Reuter of East Setauket, L. I., both as Associate Commanders (Brothers); Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Sr., of New York, as Associate Commander (Sister); James V. Carmichael of Marietta, Ga., as Associate Officer (Brother); and Mrs. Samuel Meek of Greenwich, Conn., as Associate Officer (Sister). ■

New Camp For Older Folk To Be Opened This Summer

A new kind of camping program will be tried in the Diocese of New York this summer. The campers will have the use of 450 acres and a mile-long private lake, 25 miles east of New Haven, Conn. But only adults over the age of sixty need apply.

The cost will be $30 for the two-week program, from June 11 through 20, plus $5 for round-trip transportation on a chartered bus. Up to 60 men and women, either single persons or couples, can be accommodated. The entire group will leave at 1:30 p.m., June 11, from the Cathedral, 110th St. and Amsterdam Ave.

Activities will include swimming and boating, nature walks, music, discussion groups, arts and crafts, worship services, dramatics, talent shows, movies, dancing, outdoor games of various kinds, campfires and a big final banquet.

The project is being developed by the Church and Chapel of the Incarnation with the consultation and cooperation of the Department of Christian Social Relations, Diocese of New York. The camp is owned and operated by Incarnation, but its support is a cooperative venture of Incarnation, All Angels, Grace Church and the Girls' Friendly Society.

Although the Episcopal Church in this diocese has many camping facilities for children and young adults, it has never before attempted to offer camping experiences to older people. Yet groups all over the United States and Canada in recent years have established campsites for the 60-plus group.

Thirty-four camps were operated by other denominations and related organizations in the metropolitan area last year, and indications are that this number will increase considerably.

According to Andrew Katsanis, Director of the Incarnation Church Camp, and Miss Esther Stamats, Director of Services for the Aged, Diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations, this summer's two-week camping period will serve as a pilot project. It is entirely possible that the venture may develop into an annual, summer-long program, they said.

Each person attending the camp must be in good health. A physical examination is required at least a week before the opening date.

For information and registration, write Mr. Andrew Katsanis, Director, Incarnation Camp for Adults, 240 East 31st Street, New York 16, N. Y. or phone MU 9-2151. ■

Seamen's Church Institute Offers New Color Film

A new slide film produced for Seamen's Church Institute is now available for free use by churches. Seamen's, whose headquarters are at the tip of Manhattan, is an affiliate of the Diocese.

The new film is entitled "View of the Harbor." In addition to explanations of the Institute's work, the film contains scenes of the Port of New York and an outline of the port's magnitude and importance.

Produced by Eye-Gate, Inc., "View of the Harbor" is in color and has a running time of 20 minutes. Equipment needed to show it are a 35mm film strip projector, a screen and a 33 1/3 r.p.m. record player.

Church groups wishing to borrow the film should write to: The Rev. Roscoe T. Foust, Director, Department of Religious, Social and Special Services, Seamen's Church Institute, 25 South St., N. Y. 4, N. Y. ■

A Bell for Puerto Cabezas

A church bell that once called people to services in Great Kills, Staten Island, now summons their fellow Episcopalians in a remote village in Nicaragua. The story is right out of the pages of the book "A Bell for Adano."

In Nicaragua, a church bell is not just something nice to have; it's the community time piece. Besides the usual Sunday function of a church bell, it tolls the time of day, sounds alarms, signals good news and the start of community festivities.

Knowing all this, the Rev. Robert W. Renouf understood the consternation of the people when he came to the village of Puerto Cabezas as a missionary and found the church without a bell. From 1956 to 1958 Father Renouf was priest in charge of All Saints Church in the capital city of Managua and visiting priest for Holy Trinity Church in Puerto Cabezas.

When Father Renouf first visited Holy Trinity, the people had just completed a new church but had no funds for a bell. They were using a pipe and a hammer as a substitute.

The young priest tried unsuccessfully to secure a bell. The main source of church bells in Nicaragua is the one railroad, but the demand far exceeds the supply.

The church was still without a bell when Father Renouf was called to become rector of St. Alban's, Staten Island, a positon he still holds.

Then, a year later, in 1959, he was visited by his former superior, the Ven. Arnold C. Waldock, Archdeacon of Nicaragua.

The two men were discussing St. Albans' plan to dig out the crawl space under the church and put in rooms. The space had been used mostly for storage of items discarded since the merger of St. Anne's and Holy Comforter to form St. Alban's in 1951.

Maybe some of this surplus equipment could be used in Nicaragua. Inching forward on their hands and knees in the musty storage space, they pulled out things covered with mud, mildew and cobwebs. Then they lifted a moldy piece of canvas. And there it was — a bell.

The bell, it turned out, hung in the tower of St. Anne's for the 25 years from 1926 to 1951. It was no longer needed after the merger.

When Archdeacon Waldock returned to Nicaragua, he made arrangements with the Robinson Lumber Company to ship the bell from New Orleans to Puerto Cabezas — at no charge. Two New York trucking firms, Republic Carloading and Distributors, and the Richmond Terminal Trucking Co., crated it and carried it to New Orleans — again at no charge.

There was a special service when the bell completed the three-month journey from Staten Island to Puerto Cabezas in March, 1960. It was a big day — the day Holy Trinity's new church building was fully completed. ■

. . . in brief

■ AN EDITORIAL in the Mount Kisco newspaper, PATENT TRADER, credits the Rev. Peter Marks, vicar of the Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, with spearheading a movement aimed at renovating the antiquated Putnam County Jail.

Father Marks is vicar of the diocesan mission at Lake Mahopac. The jail, which is at Carmel, "has been recognized for years as substandard in everything but size," comments the newspaper. "For the new progress toward renovation Putnam is indebted to a group of public spirited citizens, spearheaded by the Rev. Peter Marks of Mahopac and including three other clergymen and two town supervisors (one now retired.)

"It was the realization by Father Marks and his co-workers that rehabilitation is next to impossible in unrelieved confinement that led to the recent surge of activity." Recommendations for the alterations are expected soon from the State Correction Commission.

■ CHRISTIAN BUSINESS MEN in the Philippines are being challenged by the Philippine Bible Society to discover imaginative ways to distribute Scriptures. Two outstanding results to date, according to a report received by the American Bible Society, are a handbag manufacturer who inserts a copy of the Gospel of St. John in each purse, and a plastics manufacturer who places a Scripture portion in each clothing bag.

■ THERE'S A SIGN on the inside of the front door of St. Andrew's, Beacon. Here's what parishioners see as they leave church: "Gossip the Gospel."

■ THE PRESIDING BISHOP, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, has been elected to the board of directors of the Friends of the World Council of Churches. He succeeds the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, former Presiding Bishop, in a term lasting until 1963.

■ CHRIST CHURCH, Staten Island, has been added to the list of churches abolishing pew rentals. The Rev. Andrew C. Long, rector, announced that this "antiquated system" ceased at the end of 1961.

■ NEED FOR MORE Episcopal chaplains in the Army and Navy has been announced by the Rev. Robert J. Plumb, Executive Secretary of the Armed Forces Division of the National Council. Although the Air Force quota for Episcopal chaplains is filled, ten are needed in the Army and five in the Navy, he said. The Church now has 108 clergymen on active duty with the armed forces.

Religious TV Program Planned for Children

A new religious television program for children will be seen on Saturdays at 8:30 A.M. on Channel 2, beginning March 24. It is entitled "Breakthru." Each program will consider a problem and then attempt to see how a child's religion deals with it. The program has been suggested as a resource teaching aid for Church School teachers and parents.

"A Guide for Teaching with Breakthru," (for parents, 25¢) and "Viewer's Guide," (for children, 20¢) are available, preferably ordered by churches. They may be obtained from Breakthru, P.O. Box 871, Nashville, Tenn. ■

Dorothy Brown Retires After 16 Years of Service

Mrs. Brown

When the diocesan convention convenes in May, a familiar figure will be missing. Mrs. Dorothy Brown, secretary to the Rev. Bradford W. Ketchum, Secretary of Convention and Registrar of the Diocese, retired on February 28.

She had served the Church for 16 years, beginning in 1946 as secretary in charge of the diocesan office of the Girls' Friendly Society. In 1951 she joined the staff of the Diocese serving simultaneously in the offices of the Treasurer, and the Secretary and the Registrar of Convention. She worked three days each week.

Mrs. Brown lives in Middle Village, L. I., with her husband, William L. Brown, Jr., a sales representative for a steel firm. Having retired she plans to devote considerable time to her favorite hobby, painting. She is a communicant of St. James, Elmhurst, and for many years she attended St. James, Fordham.

Paying tribute to her years of service, Mr. Ketchum said of Mrs. Brown, "Patience, forbearance and exactitude are the qualities characterizing her valuable service to the Diocese."

Mrs. Brown's successor is Mrs. Robert F. Wilde, a new member of the diocesan staff. Working five days a week, she will serve in the combined position of secretary to Archdeacons McEvoy and Brätt, and secretary to the secretary and Registrar of Convention. ■

Here's a List of Newly Elected Laymen in Parishes and Missions

Here are the names of persons elected wardens and vestrymen at the many annual meetings held around the first of the year. Lack of space prevents us from listing those re-elected.

Unless otherwise noted, persons listed were elected vestrymen. If a church's governing body is called other than a vestry, this is noted with the church's listing. Diocesan missions and parochial chapels have an advisory board or council, instead of a vestry.

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedral Church

In this monthly column, Canon West answers some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

Doesn't the Gospel phrase "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" really justify the Roman Catholic claim that St. Peter was made head of the Church in perpetuity?

This question seems to come up just about annually, but in view of the pressure I realize that it will probably have to be answered over and over again. Before we decide what the phrase means, we have to take pains to find out what it said in the earliest form we know — the Greek. As the sentence reads in Greek, there are two words which must be noticed: "petros" and "petra." "Petros" means a small bit of "petra"; and "petra" means "rock." So the sentence would have read, "thou art 'Petros,' and upon this 'petra' I will build my church," or, "You are a fragment of the kind of rock on which I'll build my church." St. Paul calls Christ himself "petra," which gives some indication of the way the early Church understood the phrase. St. Peter, in confessing Jesus to be the Christ, the Son of the Living God, was demonstrating that rock-like faith in the Rock which would always be essential to the Church. Dr. Alan Richardson notes that Origen, writing as late as the first part of the third Century, could say, "If thou hast Peter's faith, thou art a rock like him; if thou hast Peter's virtues, thou hast Peter's keys!"

To yank any phrase of Scripture out of context, and try to prove something by it, is always a dangerous business. What would be proved if, for example, a phrase which comes just five

Episcopalians Join 1962 Campaign For 'One Great Hour of Sharing'

Episcopalians will join this year in "One Great Hour of Sharing," the united fund appeal for world-wide relief conducted by most American Protestant and Orthodox churches under the sponsorship of Church World Service, an agency of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

Goal for the 1962 appeal is a record-breaking $15,250,811, an increase of nearly $500,000 over last year. The funds will support both individual denominational programs and cooperative projects carried on overseas through Church World Service and related interdenominational organizations.

Some denominations have set Sunday, April 1, as "One Great Hour of Sharing" Sunday. Episcopal Churches will make the drive a Lenten appeal, with the climax to come around April 1.

Although the Episcopal Church participated in "One Great Hour of Sharing" on a temporary basis during an emergency appeal just after World War II, it has remained outside of the appeal since 1949. Instead, as a national body, it has allotted $400,000 annually to relief needs, plus some $150,000 sent to the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief and Inter-Church Aid.

Last fall, the General Convention requested more extensive promotion for the Presiding Bishop's Fund. As a result, the National Council voted unanimously to ask parishes, dioceses and individuals to support "One Great Hour of Sharing." The gifts will still be sent to the Presiding Bishop's Fund, but marked "One Great Hour of Sharing." They will be used within the framework of the Episcopal relief program.

The Presiding Bishop's Fund is used not only for emergency situations brought by sudden disasters, but also for continuing relief and rehabilitation work. ■ verses later in the same chapter, and also addressed to St. Peter, were treated in such a way. It goes: "Get thee behind me, Satan: Thou art an offense unto me: for thou savorest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men." ( St. Matthew 16:23 ).

Question is —

Just how descent from St. Peter is maintained, apart from the Apostolic Succession common to all bishops, poses a question, since the choice is up to a group of electors who need not necessarily be bishops, and the man elected need not be one either. Since, obviously, it can't be a matter either of tactual succession or formula, what does this imply about transmission of Orders? ■

letters to the editor

From Mrs. Willard von Hagen, 7 Wilgarth Road, Bronxville, New York.

On New Year's Day as we prayed for the whole state of Christ's Church, I wondered why we should limit our entreaties for divine guidance to that "of all Christian Rulers"? Aren't we admonished elsewhere to pray for our enemies, to do good to those who despitefully use us?

Since our enemies seem to respect — or even to fear? — the professed belief of the Christian countries to the extent that it is the priests and churches they first seek to do away with, why don't we show at least as much respect for our own great secret power as they attribute to it?

However, "Prayer without thought, never to heaven goes."

We have heard the words of the beautiful prayers of our prayer book so often that they now are apt to fall on deeply muffled ears. How exciting it would be to hear the voice of an Episcopal minister ring out with a prayer for our president, calling him by name, no less; for all others in authority, and especially for those of all Christian and non-Christian nations, that the entire world be led into the ways of peace. ■

Library Lists Current Books To Be Loaned

The Cathedral library, which is open to the public, recently acquired a number of current books of interest both to laymen and clergy.

The library is located on the first floor of Diocesan House, and contains approximately 8,000 volumes, including both theological and general works. Anyone who wishes to do so may borrow books or use the library for reference and study. Books may be borrowed, without charge, for one month. Unless volumes are in great demand, they may be renewed.

Library hours are 9 to 12:30 and 1:30 to 5, Monday through Friday, except holidays. The librarian will send books by mail to readers who cannot come in person. Under this arrangement, the Cathedral pays the outgoing postage, and the reader the return cost.

New Books available:

Anderson; Courage to Change: An Introduction to the Life and Thought of Reinold Niebuhr, by June Bingham; Gore: A Study in Liberal Thought, by James Carpenter; On the Road to Christian Unity, by Samuel McCrea Cavert; Chadwick: The Mind of the Oxford Movement, edited by Owen Chadwick; God in Action, by F. # Dutchess ECW Shows What Happens When People Get Busy

Crest Cottage, Greer School. It was "adopted" by the Rhinebeck ECW.

Not long ago, the Episcopal Churchwomen of Dutchess Convocation held a shower. The guest of honor was neither a bride nor a young woman awaiting the stork! It was a school. Specifically, it was Greer School, the children's community at Hope Farm, near Millbrook.

Twenty-four ECW Branches received "invitations" to this shower, and as the articles piled up, it became evident that the needs of the institution had impressed all who had heard about the venture.

There were articles of new clothing, household furnishings, cake mixes, jars of jam, popcorn, good secondhand clothing; notebooks, pencils, notepaper, erasers, story books, games and other toys.

Many of the Branch representatives said they would continue to seek donations to Greer throughout the year. Later, Branch contributions to the annual Christian Social Relations Christmas project were used to establish a discretionary fund to support the work of the Rev. Charles Speakman, Greer School's Episcopal Chaplain.

Greer School is a private, nondenominational, year-round home and school for approximately 200 boys and girls from broken homes. It was founded in 1906 by an Episcopal Bishop, the Rt. Rev. David H. Greer of New York. The Chapel of the Child on the campus is still an Episcopal chapel. But the school now functions as an independent, self-perpetuating, nondenominational institution.

Most of the financing comes from private contributions. Parents, guardians and county welfare agencies give approximately one-quarter of the budgeted expense. The school accepts "normal, healthy, non-delinquent children who are deprived of a home." The age range is from six to sixteen, and the children may stay until after graduation from high school.

The elementary and high school curricula are accredited by the New York State Education Department. In addition to its academic program, the school offers considerable vocational training. The children live in eight cottages scattered about the 1,500-acre campus. Each cottage provides home life for 15 to 22 boys or girls under the supervision of resident house parents.

It was one of these homes, Crest Cottage, that a group of ECW members from the Church of the Messiah, Rhinebeck, visited one day. The women discovered that beds were most urgently needed. But as they looked around, the list of articles which these women thought they could supply grew longer and longer. They even talked tentatively of modernizing some of the equipment.

A meeting with school officials disclosed that beds could be constructed in the school workshop. But, of course, mattresses would have to be bought. The women from Rhinebeck made an initial donation of $50 toward the purchase of materials. And then, since 20 beds were needed, the group turned for help to the

Diocesan Clergy to Hear World Assembly Delegates

Clergy throughout this diocese will have an opportunity to hear firsthand reports of the Third Assembly of the World Council of Churches if they attend the Clergy Conference at the Cathedral on March 27.

The speakers, all of whom were Assembly delegates, will be the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop; Dr. Clifford Morehouse, President of the General Convention House of Deputies; and the Rev. Dr. James Kennedy, Rector of Ascension, Manhattan.

The day will start with Holy Communion at 11 A.M. in the Cathedral, followed by lunch in the undercroft of Synod House. The Conference will adjourn at 3 P.M.

This conference is one of the events in Bishop Donegan's Clergy Conference program. It also includes the annual autumn Conference and six overnight Conferences at the Bishop Donegan Conference Center, Tuxedo Park. These six overnight events are limited to 40 clergy, including the three bishops who conduct them, whereas the fall Conference and the one on March 27 are for all clergy.

The series of small conferences was initiated in 1959-60, when the general theme was "Counseling." Last year's topic was "Pastoral Work of the Clergy," and it was followed by so many requests for a series on "The Devotional Life of the Clergy," that this theme was chosen for the current year.) Thus far four overnight conferences have been held. The remaining two will take place on April 4 and 5, and April 11 and 12. ■

Roof eaves will be carried to floor level in the new parish house being built at St. Luke's Beacon.

New Parish House Going Up

For the first time in many years, St. Luke's, Beacon, has embarked on a construction project. A new parish house, together with renovations to an adjoining, 70-year-old building, are under way. Completion is scheduled in May. William H. Van Benschoten of Hyde Park is the architect. The cost is estimated at $100,000.

For years the church had been concerned about the condition of its old parish house. It was solidly built but needed repairs and was far too small for present-day activities. Many schemes were studied in an effort to provide an economical, suitable and practical solution. Finally, the church decided upon simultaneous renovation and addition.

Mr. Van Benschoten designed a structure which will be contemporary in feeling, yet will harmonize with the older, Gothic construction. Long roof lines will merge into the old building, and repeat the roof lines of the rectory, the old parish house and church.

On the lower floor, the parish house will contain Sunday School classrooms, nursery, kitchenette, library, utility rooms and a heating plant. The parish hall, with a stage, will be on the upper floor, together with kitchen, chapter room, and Sunday School and parish offices. The hall will seat 250 for dinner, or 500 for other events. ■

Periodical Club Asks For Funds

The Church Periodical Club is conducting its annual appeal for funds.

This organization, a unit of the Episcopal Churchwomen, provides books and periodicals to mission libraries, schools, seminaries, hospitals, universities and individuals at home and abroad.

Through its Seminarians' Book Fund, it gives every seminarian from this diocese the nucleus of a theological library. Its National Book Fund supplies books and magazines to missions in far corners of the globe. Its Diocesan CPC Fund meets the substantial needs of missions and chaplains in this diocese, and takes care of general operating expenses.

According to Mrs. Rudolf F. Mattesich, Diocesan Director of CPC, contributions may be designated for any one of these Funds, or for all three. Checks should be made out to: Alida J. Lindstedt, treasurer, ECW, and mailed to Mrs. Harold M. Linstedt, Apartment 9-B, 242 East 19th Street, New York 3, N. Y. ■

McEvoy Discusses Challenge Facing Urban Churches

The changes and challenges that face the Church were discussed by Archdeacon McEvoy at a meeting of the Bronx Division of the Protestant Council of the City of N. Y. recently.

The challenge to the local church in the urban setting is "simply a two-fold task: To be there in the community and to do the right things," said the Archdeacon. He added, "This is the tragedy of contemporary cultural and technological advance ... that it has promised so much and has actually given so much materially and has taken so much away that is essential to the survival, health, sanity, and the wholeness of the person and of the common life.

"When the church worships God, ministers to the lives of persons in the neighborhood, and penitently, humbly, courageously, patiently, and imperfectly keeps on seeking to reveal His Life in the world's life, the Church is doing all that it is asked to do. Then it is a living church."

Among the "right things" that a church should do, Archdeacon McEvoy suggested:

Putting worship at the heart of congregational life.

Recognizing that the church must become a part of change, and adapt itself.

Become integrated across all categories of economic and cultural stratifications.

Resist the world, rather than reflect the world's values. ■

Yonkers ECW Hears Talk On Meaning of Missions

"Why missions?" the Rev. Harry Hansen, missionary to Japan, asked the Episcopal Churchwomen of St. John's, Getty Square, Yonkers, when he visited them recently.

He said, "As long as there are people who have not heard of Christ, we missionaries will try to reach them. The faith we have must not be hidden ... We are challenged to spread the message; you at home are challenged to give support with your prayers and gifts. Your role as Christians is as important as ours as missionaries!"

Mr. Hansen said that church life in Japan is like life in the early Christian era. The Church is surrounded by a pagan society and a baptism becomes a great event.

The St. John's ECW has heard a series of missionary speakers, and the organization reports that support of missions has increased considerably since these programs started.

Both the National Council, 281 Park Avenue South, and the Department of Promotion, Diocese of New York, can obtain missionary speakers for groups wishing them. ■

Interest on $3,000 from 1661

A typographical error in an Oregon church's financial statement caused members of the parish to do some daydreaming. How would the parish finances stand if the statement were correct?

The incorrect item in the statement read as follows: "As of January 1, 1661, there was $3,153.90 on deposit in the bank."

Members of the church figured that if they had that much on deposit in 1661, it must have grown into quite a sum by this time. So they called a friend at a local bank and asked if he could figure how much $3,153.90 deposited in 1661 would amount to now, at 3% interest compounded semi-annually.

The total figure was so incredible that the calculations were checked by an insurance company's electronic brains. The figure was correct. To learn what it was, see bottom of page 23.

Art Carney Speaks on 'Maturity' At Youth Meeting in Westchester

Television actor Art Carney was the guest speaker at one of four regional Convocation of Westchester youth meetings held on January 28.

Appearing before nearly 200 teenagers at St. Luke's, Eastchester, Mr. Carney displayed both the comic and serious side of his talents. He gave a talk entitled "Maturity," which he followed by impersonations of famous people. The actor and his wife are communicants of St. John's, Tuckahoe.

At Grace Church, Hastings-on-Hudson, Dr. Ida Jiggetts, a physician, spoke on "Teen-age Drug Addiction." The Rev. Robert Chapman, Director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, New York City, was the guest speaker at St. Matthew's, Bedford. The Rev. Henry L. Myers, a member of the Department of Christian Education, National Council, spoke at Christ's Church, Rye.

Nearly 500 teenagers attended the four meetings. ■

Directory Lists 2,488 Churches in New York Area

The new 1962 Protestant and Orthodox Church Directory, published by The Protestant Council of the City of New York, lists a total of 2,488 churches in metropolitan New York. They are served by 2,672 ministers and priests.

The 294-page directory covers the five boroughs of the city and Nassau and Westchester counties. Copies of the new volume, which sell for $5 each, are now available at The Protestant Council's offices, 475 Riverside Drive.

Manhattan edged out Brooklyn this year in its claim of being the "Borough of Churches" with a total of 564 churches, 76 denominations, and 717 clergymen. Brooklyn reported 563 churches, 55 denominations, and 556 ministers.

Queens, as in the past several years, is third with 367 churches, 37 denominations, and 356 clergymen.

Of the churches listed in the directory, 57.8 per cent are identified with Baptist, Methodist, Lutheran, Protestant Episcopal, and Presbyterian judicatories.

The Baptists, including all their branches, lead with 409 churches.

Next in order are the Methodists with 297 churches; Lutherans with 284; Protestant Episcopal, 268; and Presbyterians, 179, a total of 1,437 churches of the 2,488 churches listed in the Directory. ■

Consultation Service Moves to 71st Street

Youth Consultation Service has opened new Manhattan headquarters at 216 East 49th Street.

The counseling offices, which were previously on East 79th Street, and all administrative offices, which were previously at Dana House, 18 East 71st Street, are now together at the new address.

According to YCS officials, the move will allow an increase in the number of girls accommodated at Dana House, and will provide added space for the activities of the residents.

Greer School —

Convocation Board. The response was immediate and enthusiastic.

Mrs. G. Meredith de la Vergne, Convocation President, called upon Mrs. K. George Falk, Diocesan Supply Chairman. The result? A donation of $950 from the Supply Department for materials needed to complete the 20 beds and equip them with foam rubber mattresses!

Providing the beds was only the beginning. After the "shower", the ECW knew it had successfully undertaken the first steps toward making help for Greer School a continuing project. To keep interest in the school alive, and to win new friends, Branches throughout Dutchess Convocation are showing a new 16 mm sound-color film made at Greer recently, showing the work being done with individual children.

Ian A. Morrison, who became director of the school last fall, wrote in his annual report: "Glorious as has been the past, we have no doubt that the future will be fruitful." The women of Dutchess Convocation have taken a stake in that future. ■

When A Prowler Isn't A Prowler . . .

It happened at a certain city parish recently. Because he has been bothered with prowlers, the rector installed a speaker system connecting his office with his sleeping quarters. Soon after, he was awakened one night by the sound of paper rustling. He listened for a few minutes, and the speaker at his bedside registered a continual shuffling. Whoever was down there in the office was doing a thorough job, the rector decided.

He tiptoed to the phone and called the police. Then he waited while the rustling went on, softer for a minute, and then louder than ever. The cops arrived in three squad cars. Bristling with night sticks and service revolvers, they threw open the office door, turned on the lights.

Not a soul in the place! Not in the closet. Not behind the door. Not under the desk.

But on the desk, right next to the microphone where the crackling of paper had been going on, was a thoroughly chewed bag of potato chips. The prowler? A mouse! ■

Pre-Convention Hearings Planned to Aid Delegates

Two innovations will go into effect at Diocesan Convention next month. If they work, they will achieve seemingly paradoxical results: Convention business will move faster, but it will be possible, also, to discuss important issues more thoroughly.

The new procedures are:

1. The Committee on Canons is studying possible changes in the rules of order so that items of greatest importance can be presented during the morning session.

The fact that matters of widespread interest and sometimes controversial nature have been listed on the afternoon rather than morning agenda has been a criticism of Convention operation. Delegates have complained that in the afternoon, with the session reaching its close, participants cannot give these issues the time and thought they deserve. Futhermore, it has been pointed out that not enough delegates remain in the hall during the closing hour or so to give adequate representation when issues are called to a vote.

2. The Council of the Diocese has announced that hearings on all matters contained in the Calendar of Business will be held on Monday, May 7, at 3 P.M. in Synod House.

In a letter announcing this step, Bishop Donegan said, "It is my hope that these hearings will serve to clarify issues or proposals for Convention action and thereby lessen the need for prolonged discussion at the Convention itself."

The Calendar of Business is mailed to delegates approximately a week before Convention. Each of the three general standing committees of Diocesan Convention—Canons, Finance, and Miscellaneous Business — will be available at the hearings. Only clerical and lay members of the Convention entitled to vote will be permitted to speak. Any delegate who has questions on any subject relevant to matter printed in the Calendar of Business is invited to come. Typical queries might concern budgets, a resolution or proposal to be made at Convention, any suggestion for changes to the Canons, or any resolutions on current affairs or contemporary problems.

No action, of course, will be taken at these hearings. All matters will be brought to Convention. But it is hoped that the hearings will pinpoint issues and eliminate debate based on misunderstanding, and that they

(to page 12)

The tangible record of each Diocesan Convention is, of course, The Journal of Convention. The 1961 Journal from the 181st Convention contains 210 pages — a good-sized, red-covered book which contains, in addition to the actual Convention business, the reports of diocesan organizations, a complete list of clergy, a directory of lay members, and many interesting and vital statistics.

By way of contrast, the Journal for the First Convention of the Diocese, held June 22, 1785, has only one page. It lists five clerical and 11 lay delegates as having attended. Approximately 900 delegates attended the Convention last year.

182nd Convention To Convene May 8 In Synod House

The 182nd Convention of the Diocese of New York will be held Tuesday, May 8, in Synod House on Cathedral Close, 110th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8:15 A.M., in the Cathedral, followed by breakfast in Synod House undercroft for the delegates. The business sessions will begin at 10.

The Convention is the legislative body of the Diocese. It consists of all canonically qualified clergy, three lay delegates from each parish with one combined vote for that parish, and one lay delegate from each organized mission with one-half vote for the mission.

This year the Convention will return to the regular form of balloting. The Hare system of voting was abolished at the 1961 Convention.

All persons attending the Convention who are not entitled to vote are requested to take seats in the balcony. This arrangement is necessary because of limited seating on the main floor and because it expedites the movement of delegates during balloting.

The Bishop's Message

THE LORD IS RISEN! This was the announcement which changed frightened, dejected men into fearless followers of their Lord. It was the resurrection of Jesus which banished the hesitancies and reservations of the apostles and brought them to complete commitment to their Master and to absolute trust in God.

Terrible doubt possessed them after the stark tragedy of the Passion and Good Friday, but from the moment they realized that the Father had raised their Master from the dead their loyalty never faltered. The One they greatly loved was alive and present with them in power. They could never lose heart again or doubt the promises of God. Henceforth, they knew but one thing: Christ was risen from the dead. Without any reservation they were now committed to the cause of Christ and gave themselves wholly to the propagation of the gospel that had been good news to them.

The dynamic of Christianity is the good news of a Lord, risen! If our loyalty to Christ is weak and our trust in the promises of God is wavering it is because we are not gripped by the resurrection. Only when we can say, without any hesitation or reservation, "Christ is Risen!" "God hath raised Him from the dead!" does our Christian discipleship cease to be lukewarm and become a transforming, empowering experience.

The victory of Christ on Easter Day fully converted the apostles. God grant that our hearts will respond to the message of Easter, that the Feast of Feasts will be for us a time of rededication to our Risen Lord and Redeemer.

With my affectionate wishes to you and to all the people of our Diocese, for a glorious and joyous Easter, I am,

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

THE Adventure in Anglicanism is over. After two years of non-stop travel during which he visited 80 countries, rode in 210 airplanes, slept in 294 beds and crossed the equator six times, Canon Howard A. Johnson is back home at the Cathedral.

He resumed his duties as Canon Theologian officially on February 1, but much of his time between now and May 1 will be devoted to writing a book, the story of his great adventure.

For these two years, Canon Johnson has been "on loan" to the National Church, and, in fact, to the world-wide Anglican Communion for the unprecedented task of traveling to every country in which our Church is at work. It was without doubt the adventure of a lifetime. Canon Johnson is sure that "the rest of my life is bound to be an anticlimax."

Still, the repercussions of a trip like this are bound to be heard for years to come. There are some who are already saying that the forthcoming book will be "the definitive book" on Anglicanism. But "Anglicanism is alive!" Canon Johnson insists. "You can't write a book about something living and call it 'definitive.'" The work is intended to be a source book for the Anglican Congress in Toronto in 1963. "But not in the sense of a gazetteer," he adds. And he warns that candor will probably prevail above tact, for Canon Johnson has no intention of giving the mistaken impression that all is sweetness and light throughout the Anglican Communion.

Actually, there are critical problems and important decisions to be made throughout this world-wide Church.

"For every one West African who becomes a Christian, ten become followers of the Prophet . . . Already we are outnumbered (by Islam). Shortly we shall be overwhelmed," Canon Johnson will warn in his chapter on Africa.

In that land, too, there is the question of polygamy. An examination of this problem — how to dispose of excess wives when a polygamous family becomes Christian — will make many a thoughful reader ponder.

And then there is the racial question. "Demolished . . . is the cherished picture of the missionary as a pallid Englishman sitting under a palm tree telling Bible stories to unclad blacks who look up to him adoringly, tears of love and gratitude streaming from their eyes. Today's missionary has to deal with university graduates who perhaps can speak more languages than he can. Today's missionary is often a black, brown or yellow man . . . " And, in this connection, here is a story the Canon tells, "because it illuminates our problem . . . "

He says, "The Bishop of Accra, vested in cope and mitre, wearing a pectoral cross and an episcopal ring, and holding a crozier in his hand, was catechising a group of Ghanaian children. He had come as far as 'What orders of Ministers are there in the Church?' and had been given the proper answer. Then, departing from the Prayer Book's printed page, he asked, 'Now, children, how can you tell, by looking at me, that I am a Bishop?' A little ebony hand shot up in the back row, and the answer came, 'Because, sir, you're a white man!' "

There will be little description of the colorful and changing landscapes Canon Johnson traveled through; little about politics. "Other books can do that for you," the author suggests. "I will tell you only something about one small Church — one among many — and even that is more complicated than I can deal with adequately. But the Church is people."

There is, for example, the Lord Bishop of Gambia and the Rio Pongas. He was the first bishop Canon Johnson met in Africa, and the two men drove inland in a jeep.

"The country was quite wild," Canon Johnson recalls. "Suddenly, about a hundred feet ahead of us, down the rutted road, there emerged from the bush the first African I had seen whom Hollywood would even consider for a part in its next Tarzan picture. By his attire — or, rather, virtual lack of it — the Bishop knew he could not be from these parts. He had a bandana to cover his head and a breechclout to take care of the rest of him. He was carrying a spear, a smoking flax, and a kind of hula hoop. The hoop was to enable him to shinny up trees. The flax was for smoking out bees so that the honey could be gathered. (His picture is on the opposite page.) The Bishop, having alighted from the car, tried several dialects on him; when these availed nothing, the Bishop's steward brought his linguistic skills into play, but with no greater success."

Opposite page:

Deep in the African bush . . . the Lord's Prayer.

At right:

"Family service" at a mission near Nongoma, Zululand, South Africa. Notice the baby on mama's back!

A human conveyer belt! Women in St. Vincent, B. W. I., loading bananas. In the distance, the banana boat, which, on the day that Canon Johnson took this picture, carried Bishop Ronald N. Shapley, of the Windward Islands, to minister to the former Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Horace N. V. Tonks, who was dying.

The face of a new Africa: He's a TB patient, who will soon be cured, at the Holy Cross Mission Hospital, Bolahun, Africa. "He repeats exactly everything he hears in English," says Canon Johnson, "even if he has no idea of the meaning. But soon he will have!"

All the travelers could make out was that the unclad searcher for honey was far, far from home. "The Bishop then said, 'Christian? Chrétien?' and put the question in several African dialects. The man looked blank. The Bishop then made the Sign of the Cross upon himself and folded his hands in an attitude of prayer.

"A broad smile irradiated the face of the African, who promptly made the Sign of the Cross in return, threw down the spear, the flax, and the hoop, took off the bandana, dropped to his knees, folded his hands." The group said the Lord's Prayer. The Bishop gave his blessing. The man picked up the tools of his trade, gave a smile which Canon Johnson said melted his heart, waved his farewell, and disappeared into the bush. "I'll never see him again," Canon Johnson told his companion sadly as they drove away. "Oh, but you will!" said the Bishop. "In heaven!"

Transportation was not easy in Africa. While in Liberia, Canon Johnson wanted to visit both Cuttington College and the Mission at Bolahun, conducted by monks of the Order of the Holy Cross. Still, in the time allotted, this appeared to be impossible. But "at the merest hint from the Bishop," the Lutheran Mission sent its plane and flew Canon Johnson gratis from one Anglican institution to the other. He landed by permission on the Baptist Mission's airstrip.

He was picked up by a Roman Catholic who for the purpose had borrowed a car from the Methodist Mission. "This," said the traveler, "is what I call 'applied ecumenics!'"

Perhaps one of the most entertaining incidents which occurred in West Africa was the way in which a Nigerian Bishop introduced the visitor to his clergy. "There I stood, pallid as usual, and there he stood, with 40 of his priests, all splendidly black. 'Now, Americans are largely ignorant about the Anglican Communion,' the Bishop said, 'so Canon Johnson is being sent around the world to write a simple book that Americans can be expected to understand!'"

"But how right he was!" Canon Johnson comments. "We understand, in fact, nothing about the Anglican Communion until we have been grasped by the wonder that God has wrought. Some of the priests who sat before me that morning in Nigeria had ritual scars upon their faces. Others had pierced ears where rings had been. Some were tatooed from head to foot. Yet these were the men who, besides coming to hear me, were met that day to discuss how more effectively to use radio and television for proclaiming to West Africa the Gospel of Christ."

Yet his five months in Africa represented only the beginning of Canon Johnson's travels. He had started in the Caribbean, gone to Central and South America, then to Africa, and from there to Europe and the British Isles. Then he was flown by the RAF to bases in the Mediterranean.

(The British, protocol conscious as they are, decided that Canon Johnson had better have a title while he was being flown around. So, for a pleasant interval, he became a Wing Commander, RAF).

The Middle East, India, Pakistan, Southeast Asia, the Far East, and the islands of the Pacific followed in due course. In New Guinea, the Australian Church's Cessna 188, an airplane called "St. Gabriel," taxied him from one lonely outpost to another. "St. Gabriel," incidentally, was a gift from the American Church. It was in New Guinea that a bishop, "a prince of the church, his father, once a head hunter and a cannibal," risked his life to come and describe the church's work in that desolate land.

Truly, there has never been a journey quite like this one. ■

Children to Have Their Day May 26

The annual children's Presentation Service will take place on Saturday, May 26, at 2 P.M. at the Cathedral.

This is the yearly "children's day" at the Cathedral. Church School members, their teachers, parents and friends attend the service at which missionary offerings, saved in mite boxes and given in special contributions during the year, are offered at the Cathedral altar. Last year more than 2,500 children attended this service.

The day begins with a procession of vested choirs and acolytes which is reviewed by the Bishop and other church dignitaries. Instead of tableaux this year, special exhibits of Sunday School projects done by children from various parishes will be on view in the Cathedral bays. Theme for 1961-62 has been "Christians of the Americas," with special emphasis on the Church's work in Brazil.

The Rev. Eric Snyder, Assistant Minister of Grace Church, White Plains, is chairman of the committee arranging the service. He is a member of the Children's Division, Department of Christian Education. ■

CORRECTION

An article in a recent issue of The Bulletin described the planning and growth of St. Paul's Church, Ossining, and reported that the new site for St. Paul's was obtained by disposing of the former Grace Hall mission. Our sources indicated that the mission had been established by the late Bishop Potter's family in Crotonville.

It has been called to our attention that services in Crotonville were started in a small school house by the Rev. George Wilson Ferguson, whose daughter, Miss Helena M. Ferguson, is still a resident of Ossining. Mr. Ferguson was rector of Trinity, Ossining. After a time, the Misses Blanche and Martha Potter offered to build a church for the services in Crotonville. They were not related to Bishop Potter. ■

"Tell me," the clergyman asked a friend, "do you think I should put more fire into my sermons?"

"No," came the reply, "but you might try it the other way around."

Church Center Drive Is Set For May 13

As directed by the General Convention last September, the Presiding Bishop has designated a special Sunday on which gifts may be received toward building the new Episcopal Church Center in New York City.

The Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger has chosen May 13, the third Sunday after Easter, for this offering. Some parishes may, however, specify an earlier or later date. Special offering envelopes will be provided.

The new building will replace Church Missions House at 281 Park Avenue South. In use since 1894, the structure is obsolete and too crowded for efficient operation. The Episcopal National Council, administrative arm of the Church and agent of the General Convention, now has its departments scattered expensively and inefficiently in three New York City locations and others 35 miles away at Greenwich, Conn. and 912 miles away at Evanston, Ill.

In the new headquarters, all departments and several related Church agencies will be housed under one roof.

The special offering on May 13 is expected to raise the last $1 million of the $4 million needed for the project. Construction of the 12-story building already has started. Completion is scheduled for 1963.

The largest single gift received for the new Center is $419,781.96 contributed by Mr. and Mrs. Eli Lilly of Indianapolis, Ind. The gift results from sale of 5,000 shares of stock in Eli Lilly & Co., pharmaceutical manufacturing firm. Long active in the Episcopal Church, Mr. and Mrs. Lilly are members of Christ Church Cathedral parish in Indianapolis, his native city.

Among the most distant contributors are members of nine congregations (including two leper colonies) in the Ryukyu Islands of the northern Pacific. They sent $33.92 with "thanksgiving for being able to share in the building of our new headquarters." ■

New York Council Elects Kinsolving, Hears Dr. Parlin

The Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, Rector of St. James', Manhattan, was elected president of The Protestant Council of the City of New York on March 3. The election took place at the 18th General Assembly of the Council, held in the Windsor Ballroom of the Hotel Commodore.

Dr. Kinsolving, who has been rector of St. James' for 14 years, was installed along with other Council officers during a dinner meeting attended by 580 persons. He succeeds the Rev. John Sutherland Bonnell, who retired in January as minister of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. He had served there for 26 years.

The theme of the Council meeting, "Jesus Christ, the Light of the City," was emphasized in the addresses given during the evening. Among the speakers were Dr. Kinsolving and Dr. Charles C. Parlin, New York attorney and the first United States layman to be elected to the presidium of the World Council of Churches.

Dr. Parlin reviewed the World Council meeting held in New Delhi, India, last December.

In the course of his talk he touched on Prime Minister Nehru's reaction to the worldwide religious meeting held in his country. Nehru was invited to speak, but at first declined, Dr. Parlin reported. Later, after the meeting had achieved wide press coverage in Indian newspapers, Nehru apparently realized its importance and asked to speak.

Dr. Kinsolving

Dr. Parlin also presented a defense for admitting the Russian Orthodox Church to World Council. He said some people charge that if the Russian Government allowed delegates to leave Russia and attend a meeting in New Delhi, then the Russian Government must think the

Episcopal Academy Plans $500,000 School Building

The six Manhattan churches that founded the Episcopal Academy of New York last fall have been so swamped with enrollment requests that they have launched a $500,000 drive to build permanent quarters.

The school, for nursery and kindergarten children, is now functioning with 41 pupils in quarters rented from the Church of the Resurrection at 119 East 74th Street. According to Miss Priscilla Houghton, the director, 90 youngsters have already sought enrollment for next fall.

Norman Dudley Johnson, chairman of the board of trustees, said he was surprised that a building program should be necessary so soon. "We knew there was a need for this type of school on Manhattan's East Side, but we envisioned a building program as something for the rather distant future," he remarked.

The formal campaign kick-off was a breakfast on February 28 at the Church of the Epiphany, York Avenue and 74th Street. Bishop Donegan was the main speaker. He praised the six churches for tackling the school project as a cooperative venture, rather than as separate parishes. He emphasized the importance of education, especially that which has a religious background.

"A most serious weakness of our schools and colleges is the failure to help our youth find a faith to live by," said the Bishop. "In such times as these, the call comes to make our church schools represent not just education, but wholeheartedly and unashamedly Christian education."

Sometimes, the Bishop said, a school starts as a church-related school, but gradually it loses this association until it is no different from a secular school. He warned against this pitfall, and urged the Episcopal Academy to name as chaplain a clergyman from one of the sponsoring parishes.

The cooperating parishes are Epiphany, St. James', St. Thomas, Resurrection, St. Bartholomew's and Holy Trinity, East 88th Street. The 16-member board of trustees consists of members of these churches. Eliot H. Goodwin is chairman of the fund raising committee. ■

St. Michael's Creates Student Funds At Bard

St. Michael's Church, Manhattan, has established a $250 scholarship at Bard College, and in addition has created a $2,000 endowment fund to be known as "The St. Michael's Church Scholarship Fund."

Bard is an Episcopal affiliated co-ed, liberal arts college at Annandale-on-Hudson.

The scholarship will be awarded, in amounts not to exceed $250 in any academic year, during 1962-63, 1963-64, 1964-65 and 1965-66. It will go to a member of St. Michael's who maintains at least a C-plus average and who is nominated by the rector, wardens and vestrymen.

Interest from the endowment fund will be used to aid persons from St. Michael's who are communicants in good standing, who maintain at least a C-plus average, and who are nominated by the rector, wardens and vestrymen.

In either case, if there is no candidate from St. Michael's, the scholastic aid will go to any similarly qualified Episcopalian at Bard. If there is no qualified or approved Episcopalian, the money will be added to the St. Michael's Church Scholarship Fund. ■

Evensong at Cathedral Now 15 Minutes Later

The regular hour for Evening Prayer at the Cathedral has been changed from 5:00 to 5:15 P.M. Dean Butler, who announced the new schedule, said he believes the 15-minute difference in time will enable more business people in the vicinity of the Cathedral to attend the services.

Evening Prayer is sung each evening but Monday by boys of the Cathedral Choir School. On Mondays the service is said. The daily services also include Morning Prayer and Holy Communion at 7:15 A.M., and Holy Communion on Wednesdays at 10 A.M. Sunday services are at 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 A.M. with Evening Prayer at 4 P.M. ■

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedral Church

My Rector keeps using two words which he obviously expects us to understand; one sounds like "amanuensis" (which I thought meant a high-priced stenographer), and the other seems to be "epiklesis." What do they mean?

The first word is "anamnesis," which comes from ana (back) and mimnesko (call to mind). It is the word which the King James Version of the Bible translates as "remembrance," or "remembrance again." In liturgical language it means the "making present" to the mind of the mighty acts of God.

Thus, to have these acts "in remembrance" is to participate in them again, to be caught up in them, and to re-live them. Our identification with these mighty acts of God is the only basis of any real sacrifice. Christ made the "full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction" once and for all, but, by the memorial we make of it, we are, each time, caught up again into union with it. This idea is best conveyed religiously in the words of Hymn 189 — And now, O Father, mindful of the love; and Hymn 205 — "Wherefore, O Father, We thy humble servants."

The second word, epiclesis (epiklesis is the British form) is made up of epi (upon) and kaleo (call). It means the Invocation of the operative Spirit of God to effect the Divine Mystery whereby the bread and wine may serve as outward and visible conveyers of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ to the end that we may be "made one body with him, that he may dwell in us, and we in him."

Historically, liturgies have invoked the presence either of Christ (the Word) or of the Holy Spirit to bring this about.

ECW to Elect Officers And Hold Ingathering

Episcopal Churchwomen in the Diocese of New York will elect a new slate of officers at their annual meeting Saturday, May 12, at the Cathedral. Mrs. Gurney Williams, who will preside, is retiring as president after having served for two terms.

The slate, as proposed by the nominating committee, is shown elsewhere on this page.

The meeting will be preceded by the Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering at a service of Holy Communion in the Cathedral at 10:30 A.M. The Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector of St. Philip's Church, Manhattan, will preach. A box luncheon in Synod House undercroft will follow the Ingathering. Sandwiches and coffee will be on sale.

At the afternoon session, Bishop Donegan will address the annual meeting and install the newly-elected officers.

The UTO offering to be presented is the first in the new Triennial, and consists of funds given by Branches throughout the Diocese in the 1961 Advent Ingathering at their respective parishes.

According to Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd, UTO Diocesan Chairman, this Ingathering totals $30,137.89 from 9,452 women. The figure is the second highest on record. Only the Ingathering for Advent, 1960, was larger.

Two parishes participated in the 1961 Ingathering for the first time: Ascension, West Park, and St. Anne's, Washingtonville. The total includes two memorials — for Mrs. Thomas M. Millen of Pelham, who served as UTO Chairman of Westchester - New Haven Division; and for Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Sr., of Manhattan, mother-in-law of the ECW chairman, Manhattan Convocation. ■

Ralph Bonacker Appointed Director of City Mission

After 22 years of service as Director of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, the Rev. William E. Sprenger is retiring on April 30.

Bishop Donegan, President of the Society, has announced the appointment of his successor. He is the Rev. Ralph D. Bonacker, 52, Rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, San Francisco. His appointment is effective May 1.

Mr. Sprenger, a native of Derby, Conn., served as Assistant Minister at St. Paul's Church, New Haven, Conn., and Rector of Trinity Church and Executive Secretary of the Trinity Institute, Albany, N. Y. before coming to the Mission Society. Tremendous improvements in chaplaincy service, development of a broad camping program, the creation of a clinical training program for young clergymen, and modern quarters for St. Barnabas House, the shelter for temporarily homeless children, all were accomplished during Mr. Sprenger's period of service.

On Mr. Sprenger's 20th anniversary as director, Thomas M. Peters, chairman of the executive committee, wrote: "Sometimes I wonder how many lives have benefited by your 20 years of unremitting effort; how many children have turned from frustration to become sons of God; how many young people have seen a great light; and older ones and patients in hospitals have been cheered and helped; and to how many in prisons and reformatories the Gospel has been preached?"

The new director, Mr. Bonacker, was Director of the Episcopal Community Service of San Diego, the equivalent, in that area, of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, from 1954 to 1960. Previously he was Rector of Grace Church, Millbrook, in the Diocese of New York, for six years. Earlier he served in the Ramapo Convocation as the Episcopal City Mission Society Chaplain and Supervisor of Clinical Pastoral Training at the State Training School for Boys. He also served on the staff of the Society at Bellevue Hospital.

Mr. Bonacker was born in St. Louis, Mo., received his B. A. from Park College, Parksville, Mo., in 1933, and his B.D. from Yale University Divinity School in 1936. He did graduate work at General Theological Seminary and studied also at the Department of Psychology, University of Chicago, and at the Institute of Psychoanalysis in Chicago. He is married and has one son.

The Rev. Ralph D. Bonacker

As Director of the City Mission Society, Mr. Bonacker will be directly responsible for the Society's sponsorship of 35 staff and associate chaplains in 41 public institutions. He also will be responsible for the Centers of Clinical Pastoral Training. Other programs of the Society include its shelter for more than 200 temporarily homeless children at St. Barnabas House, 38 Bleecker Street, New York City; a summer camping program for 1,500 boys and girls, and supervision of seven religious and charitable services throughout the Diocese of New York.

Mrs. Ricardo C. Gonzales, a member of All Saints Church, Harrison, is issuing invitations to a reception on May 11 at the Hotel Carlyle, in honor of the retiring director and Mrs. Sprenger, and to welcome Mr. Bonacker and his wife to New York. Bishop Donegan, the members of the Mission Society Board of Managers, its Chaplaincy Corps, its Department Directors and others will pay tribute to Mr. Sprenger's years of leadership. ■

The great Eastern Liturgies concentrate on the Holy Spirit, but our own Liturgy works rather on the theory that all action is an absorption into the life of the Trinity. Thus we beseech the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit to bless and sanctify the holy gifts. This is done in the section of the Prayer of Consecration entitled "the Invocation."

delegates' activity would help the Communist cause.

But the speaker said the Communists are little concerned about the activities of the Orthodox Church. Their plan is to kill this church by winning away its youth with the result that when the present older Christians die, there will be none to replace them. "But the Communists overlook one tremendous Christian influence — the influence of a mother, in her own home, telling her child about God," said Dr. Parlin.

Dr. Kinsolving told delegates and guests of the Council's highest governing body that, "The Protestant Council is the nearest thing to ecumenical fellowship that we have," and that "logically it should be able to attract Christians of good will, of almost every stripe, towards Christian cooperation."

"Through the Protestant Council many look for evidence of continuing conference and collaboration between the leaders of the major church bodies," he said. "I see no essential incompatibility between the stress upon things old and new. Our Lord Jesus Christ in His consummate vision calls us to both." ■

National Council Approves Budget Of $10,368,017

A total operating budget of $10,368,017 for the Protestant Episcopal Church in 1962 was adopted by its National Council at the annual meeting in Seabury House, Greenwich, Connecticut.

While this figure hit a new record in budget appropriations, it is, nevertheless, $136,743 below the $10,504,760 budget authorized for 1962 by General Convention last September. This was because pledges accepted by the dioceses added up to less than the amount projected by the Convention.

The 1961 budget was $9,609,819.

According to Harrison Garrett, Baltimore layman who is chairman of the Department of Finance, the dioceses in 1961 paid 97.4 per cent of their quotas for the year.

The 1962 quota acceptances from the dioceses total $9,188,686, nearly $600,000 above the 1961 total. The remainder of the $10,368,017 budget will be provided as follows: $404,334 from the Episcopal Churchwomen's United Thank Offering; $693,000 from trust funds; $15,500 from miscellaneous sources; and $66,497 from the 1961 surplus.

After all the 1961 bills were paid, the Council had a balance of $356,863. Of this surplus, $66,497 was applied to the 1962 budget, and the remainder was added to the Church's reserve fund, to send it once again above the $1 million mark. ■

Convention —

will help the Committees in their deliberations. Naturally, persons will still be entitled to submit proposals from the floor at Convention.

Commenting on the two changes in procedure, the Bishop said, "However successful these proposals may be, I believe we should never forget that the Convention is a legislative and deliberative body meeting only once a year. Its business is important in the life of the Church and I do not believe it is too much to ask of our delegates that they give this one day of their time and talents for the transactions of the business of the Diocese." ■

Missionary Clergy to Tell Of Work in City, Country

The purpose of this year's spring convocation meetings will be to learn what's going on in the other fellow's back yard.

In other words, clergy well acquainted with the problems and accomplishments of parishes and missions deep within the heart of the city will speak at convocation meetings in the suburbs and rural areas. Clergy from the country will speak in the city.

All of the meetings will be held Monday night, April 30. The time, place and speaker for each convocation is as follows:

MANHATTAN — Trinity, Wall St. Evening Prayer at 6 P. M., followed by dinner and meeting. Speaker, the Rev. Richard Elting, Vicar of St. Anne's, Washingtonville. The Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving is Dean.

BRONX — St. James, Fordham. Evensong at 8 P. M., followed by a business meeting. A new dean will be elected to fill the unexpired term of the Rev. Robert W. Cromey. The Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang will preside and introduce the speaker, the Rev. Lloyd Uyeki, Vicar of St. Gregory's, Woodstock.

WESTCHESTER — St. Peter's, Port Chester. Dinner at 6:30 P. M., followed by Evensong at 7:30. At the 8 P. M. business meeting the Convocation will elect a secretary and a treasurer to serve one year, one clergyman and one layman to serve two years on the executive committee and one layman to complete a one-year unexpired term. The speaker will be the Rev. Richard Gary, Priest-in-Charge of St. Mary's, Manhattanville. The Rev. K. E. Mackenzie, is Dean.

RAMAPO — St. Anne's, Washingtonville. Business meeting, 8 P. M. The Convocation will elect one clerical and one lay member to serve two-year terms on the executive committee, and a secretary and treasurer each to serve one year. The speaker will be the Rev. David Kern, Priest-in-Charge of St. Ann's, Bronx. The Rev. Douglas Glasspool is Dean.

HUDSON — Ascension, West Park. Dinner, 7 P. M., followed by business meeting. Speaker, the Rev. Robert Jenks, Vicar of St. Peter's, Manhattan. The Rev. Colley Bell is Dean.

DUTCHESS — St. Paul's, Poughkeepsie. Dinner at 6:15 P. M., followed by Evensong. At the business meeting the Convocation will elect members of the executive committee and hear a brief survey of new work in the Convocation. This will be followed by a talk by the Rev. Wray E. MacKay, Vicar of St. Andrew's, Bronx. The Rev. Alfred H. Whisler is Dean.

The convocations are the seven geographical areas of the Diocese. At least two meetings of each convocation are held annually, one in the fall, and one in the spring.

Bishop Donegan will attend the Manhattan meeting. Other representatives of the diocese appointed to attend are Archdeacon McEvoy, Bronx; Bishop Wetmore, Westchester; Archdeacon Brätt, Dutchess; Bishop Boynton, Hudson; Dean Butler, Ramapo; and Father Cragon, Director of Christian Education, Richmond. ■

Bishop to Preach At Radio City On Easter Sunday

Bishop Donegan will preach the Easter sermon at the annual United Easter Dawn Service to be held at 7 A.M. on Easter Sunday at Radio City Music Hall.

The service is sponsored by the Protestant Council of the City of New York, and this will mark its 43rd year. The Bishop was guest preacher once before, in 1942 while he was rector of St. James', Manhattan.

Seat reservations for the service are required. Cards of admission can be had by writing to the Manhattan Division, The Protestant Council, 475 Riverside Drive, New York 27, N. Y. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with the request. The admission cards are good until 6:30 A.M. The service annually attracts thousands from all over the nation.

This year choral groups from Wagner College, S. I. (Lutheran), and Virginia Union University, Richmond, Va., (Baptist) will lead the music. Ashley B. Miller will play the Music Hall's huge 4,328-pipe organ. ■

THE CHOIR SCHOOL
of St. Thomas Church
123 West 55th St., N. Y. 19, N. Y.

As a chorister, this boy daily sings to the glory of God and learns to know and love the great music of the Church. During the school year he lives, studies and plays with forty-three other boys in grades 5 - 8.

The school program encourages him to take advantage of the variety of cultural opportunities Manhattan offers. Happy hours are spent in the spacious gymnasium and on reserved playing fields in Central Park.

Two housemothers and a large domestic staff insure his well-being and comfort. He receives a classical and sound education from a faculty composed of three part-time and eight resident teachers, one, his personal advisor. Classes are small, the atmosphere informal and personal. His progress is carefully evaluated through standardized tests. When he graduates from this unique school, he will be well prepared for entrance into a leading preparatory school.

A large endowment makes possible for him the low tuition fee of $900 for the full year. Additional scholarship help is available.

Captain Tells Of SCI Work With Seamen

Exactly 202 men and boys from all of Staten Island's ten Episcopal churches attended the 22nd annual Corporate Communion and breakfast of the Richmond Convocation on George Washington's Birthday. It was held at Christ Church, of which the Rev. Andrew C. Long is rector. He is also dean of Richmond Convocation.

At the Church of the Holy Innocents, Highland Falls, 70 men and boys from area Episcopal churches attended another Corporate Communion and breakfast. The church's rector is the Rev. Wendell B. Tamburro.

On Staten Island, the speaker at the breakfast was Capt. Jorgan Borge, Supervisor of Ship Visiting-International, at Seamen's Church Institute.

Capt. Borge, who was a Norwegian ship captain before joining the Institute six years ago, goes aboard foreign ships to welcome the men to the Port of New York and to invite them to use the Institute's extensive facilities in Manhattan and Port Newark.

A hearty and enthusiastic man who knows seamen from having been one, Capt. Borge said that "most seamen on foreign ships coming into New York are under the age of 25. About half are 17, 18 or 19."

There are, he said, 13,000 ships and a half-million seamen coming into the Port of New York annually. Of these ships, 52% are foreign, he said.

During his visits to ships, Capt. Borge distributes newspapers, subway maps, tourist guides, and other literature — all printed in the language used by that particular ship's crew.

At the Highland Falls breakfast, the speaker was Col. Robert L. Ashworth, Chief of Staff at West Point. Col. Ashworth, an Episcopalian whose father was a priest, spoke on "George Washington as a Churchman."

The first President, Col. Ashworth said, was profoundly influenced by his religious faith. Washington's great interest in the Church, the speaker said, stemmed from the fact that he was descended from Lawrence Washington, a priest of the Church of England. ■

Episcopal Laymen Elect Officers; Alexander Brown Named President

Alexander Brown of Pawling was elected President of the Diocesan Board of the Episcopal Laymen of New York at the annual meeting held recently in Cathedral House.

Elected with him were John E. Murphy of the Bronx, vice president, and Arthur W. Sauter of Pearl River, secretary-treasurer. For the first time since ELNY was formed, its organization is complete. There are now representatives on the Diocesan Board from all seven convocations, and 11 members have been appointed by the Bishop.

Elected by Convocation Councils were James E. Barns of Bronxville, Westchester; Mr. Brown, Dutchess; Richard D. Wade of Mahwah, N. J., (Christ Church, Suffern), Ramapo; Eugene Byrd of Staten Island, Richmond; G. Edwin McEwen, Bronx; John Beale of Newburgh, Hudson; and Rexford Slauson, Manhattan.

Appointed by the Bishop were Henry L. DeRham, Manro T. Oberwetter and William Stringfellow, all of Manhattan; Dr. Charles Lawrence of Pomona, Harry I. Moore of Brooklyn (St. Martin's, Manhattan), H. W. Williams of Pawling, Mr. Murphy, Mr. Sauter, the Rev. Clifford Lauder, Rector of All Souls, Manhattan; the Rev. George F. Regas, Rector of Grace, Nyack; and the Rev. A. H. Whisler, Rector of Zion, Wappingers Falls.

Presidents of the Convocation Councils are Donald Williams, Bronx; Robert Raymond, Jr., Dutchess; Joseph Gorham, Hudson; Carlos Munoz, Manhattan; Richard Beman, Ramapo; Harry La Quier, Richmond; and William B. May, Jr., Westchester.

All officers and Diocesan Board members will serve for one year-terms expiring at the annual meeting in February.

ELNY is a men's organization established by Bishop Donegan in January, 1961. Its principal aim is to coordinate and encourage men's activities in this Diocese. It has been pointed out that the purpose of this organization can be achieved only "as the rector and his chosen representative sit down and plan a parish program for men, and get busy doing it!"

ELNY is not "... a money-raising organization ... a layman's program planned at 'Morningside Heights' and imposed on the parishes ... a series of big rallies which always take laymen out of their parishes ... a 'Gestapo organization' for the Diocese ... a means to by-pass the clergy ... a demand for parish men's clubs." ■

How Richmond Laymen Get Results

The weather was bad, but there were 202 men and boys at Staten Island's 8:00 o'clock Corporate Communion and breakfast. (See article on this page.)

How do you get such a good attendance for an inter-parish function, an average of 20 from each church, with all the convocation's churches represented? Here's how, according to Thomas P. Rabbage, Warden of St. Andrew's and the man who organized the first of these annual functions 22 years ago: The key is in clearly defining responsibilities.

Everything is done by laymen, except, of course, celebration of Holy Communion. Every year, the rector or vestry of each church appoints two men to serve on the George Washington's Birthday Corporate Communion Committee.

These 20 men meet in March and elect a chairman, treasurer and secretary. Two committees are formed: Tickets and Speakers.

The Speakers Committee functions during the summer. By working eight or nine months ahead, the committee has a wide choice of speakers.

As Washington's Birthday draws near, the Ticket Committee distributes tickets to the two men in each parish. The tickets are sold mainly after Sunday services.

The committee as a whole meets only twice, once in March and again two weeks before the event. The latter meeting is to determine expected attendance and to iron out details. The committee chairman is always from the host church, and so able to keep on top of things himself.

Tickets are $1.00, with 80 cents of this going to the women of the host church for providing the breakfast. The extra 20 cents covers other expenses and serves as an operating fund for next year. ■

Born in Coventry, England, on March 17, 1893, he came to this country in 1911 and served as organist of Holy Cross Church, Kingston; Messiah, Rhinebeck; and Grace, Utica, before coming to the Cathedral. He was regarded by his colleagues as one of the world's greatest masters in organ improvisation. Twenty of his works were published; many are still being played. Both because of the number and importance of his students, and his 40 years' service on the National Examination Committee, American Guild of Organists, Mr. Coke-Jephcott's influence on church music was felt throughout the country. ■

If You Really HAVE to Be in Church . . .

A hospital bed might deter most people from getting to church on Sunday, but the Rev. George F. Kempsell, Jr., found a way of getting around the problem.

Father Kempsell, Rector of the Church of St. James the Less, Scarsdale, spent about a month in White Plains Hospital with a stubborn infection. The long, solitary days spent in the small hospital room didn't bother him so much, but when Sunday came he felt that he just had to know what was going on in church.

The problem was solved easily, as there is a telephone next to the organ at St. James. When the service started, the organist simply phoned Father Kempsell in his hospital room and then left the phone off the hook.

He could plainly hear the choir, the prayers, the responses, the lessons, the sermon ...

And later, when his curate phoned him, he could discuss the service almost as though he had been there.

Summer Conferences Will Start Soon in Settings Like This

Annual Day of Witness Set For June 16 in Manhattan

The annual Day of Witness will be held on Saturday, June 16, at St. Peter's, Chelsea, West 20th Street, near Ninth Avenue. Some 20 churches are expected to participate in the street procession of bands, floats and marching units.

As in past years, the procession will be followed by a celebration of Holy Communion. Bishop Donegan will be the celebrant, and the service will be held outside at St. Peter's.

Later there will be refreshments, followed by an outdoor program and dancing.

Churches that will have contingents marching in the procession are asked to have these units ready to assemble at Holy Apostles' Church, Ninth Avenue and 28th Street, at 9 A.M. The procession will circle through neighboring streets and past General Theological Seminary.

The Rev. Robert T. Jenks is general chairman of this year's event, which is the ninth annual Day of Witness. Co-chairmen are the Rev. John Wells and the Rev. John Wilson. Members of the program committee are the Rev. Robert Willing and the Rev. William Dwyer. ■

Here-and-There Churchmen Urged To Get Letters

Are you a member of the church you're attending? Or maybe you're still being carried on the rolls of the church you left five or ten years ago — back in Chicago or Dayton or Dallas.

You have plenty of company if you fit into this latter category. You're a "here-and-there" Churchman — go to church here but belong to a church there.

To make it easier for a person to transfer his membership from his former church to his present one, the Department of Promotion now distributes a "Request for Letter of Transfer" card.

The 4″ x 6″ cards, which churches may order, are placed in hymnal racks or in other prominent places. A person who wishes to transfer his membership from his old parish to his present one simply fills in the card and drops it in the collection plate.

From the filled-in card, the priest learns the year and place of the person's baptism and confirmation, where the person thinks his "letter of membership" is now held, and other information. The priest then writes for the Letter, notifying the person when it has been received.

The new cards are expected to promote more accurate parish membership rolls. When a person has his membership in one church and yet attends another church, he is not a full-fledged, active member of either church. ■

Presiding Bishop Describes Change In World Council

When the World Council of Churches admitted the churches from Russia, Poland, Bulgaria and Romania, this action changed the character of the international body, the Presiding Bishop told some 250 clergy from this diocese at the Cathedral on March 27.

For years the World Council had been regarded as largely an organization of churches in Western Christendom, he explained. But now nearly one-half of its members are Orthodox.

The occasion was a "Day for the Clergy" which included Holy Communion, luncheon, and an afternoon session devoted to reports by delegates to the World Council of Churches meeting in India last fall.

Bishop Donegan introduced the Presiding Bishop. Other delegates who spoke were Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies, and the Rev. James W. Kennedy, Rector of the Church of the Ascension, Manhattan. Dr. Kennedy also showed slides. ■

New Cross

Cross over six feet long with a gold-leaf "gloria" at the crossbar was dedicated on Palm Sunday at St. Thomas Chapel, Manhattan, by the Rev. R. DeWitt Mallary, Jr., Vicar. The cross, hanging above the high altar, is made of linden wood finished in red and gold. It is the gift of Mrs. Russell Crouse, wife of the noted playwright, in memory of her mother, Mrs. Pauline Erskine. J. Sanford Shanley designed the cross, and it was made by Louis F. Glasier. The chapel, part of St. Thomas parish, is in the midst of a building improvement program.

The Bishop's Message

Almost equal to the tension created by atomic testing and the international situation is that developing in this country because large groups of people continue to disregard the Gospel on the relations between the races of mankind. It is quite possible that some anxious people feel frustrated because of the unrest in the world and their inability to understand and live with it.

I have spoken often of this. You know the teachings of the Church. I shall only remind you that there are clergymen of this Church who are to stand up in court this month for their Christian principles. We cannot stand up with them, but we can uphold them with our prayers and our support.

The recent subtle offering of "opportunities" elsewhere to Negro families in the South is immoral. We must reject these practices, but, at the same time, we must have patience with those who offer such inducements and those who accept them.

We have to work with love and compassion and firmness with all concerned. To encourage individuals or families to run away from problems is futile; equally as disastrous is the acceptance of flight as a quick cure for economic and social discrimination.

We have made progress in this country in the sphere of race relations, but with each step forward we are faced with a new set of circumstances and problems. With God's help let us strive to develop wisdom to be effective witnesses to our fellow men in the light of these new developments.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

Youth Conferences Are Expanding

The New York Youth Conferences have expanded this year to offer three conferences instead of two in each of the series at Bard College and St. John's-in-the-Wilderness. In addition, the capacity of each conference has been increased from 24 to 30.

These two summer programs for young people of junior and senior high school age are sponsored by the diocesan Department of Christian Education. Each offers a combination of recreation and discussion in an informal setting.

The Wilderness Conferences are for young people past their fourteenth birthday, who have finished ninth grade. These youngsters rough it. They live in tents for two weeks, and their typical day includes work periods as well as swimming, other recreation, discussion groups, and prayers. The Rev. W. Scott Root is the director.

Wilderness Conferences this year will be held as follows: July 8 through 20 and July 22 through August 3, for everybody; August 5 through 17, for officers in parish youth groups. The cost is $30, of which $5 must accompany registration.

The Bard Conferences will be held at Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, an Episcopal-affiliated, liberal arts college some 100 miles north of New York City. The theme will be "My Crowd, My Lord — and Me." Discussions will deal with the problem of conflicting loyalties ("Me — Me and my Crowd — Me and my Lord — Me Again") and the help the Church provides people facing these conflicting pressures.

Bishop Wetmore will introduce the

Princeton Offers Long Weekend

"The Christian in the World Today" will be the theme of the Princeton Conference to be held at Princeton Seminary, Princeton, N. J. from June 22 through 26. This is the annual tri-diocesan Episcopal Church Conference for Adults, sponsored by the Dioceses of New York, New Jersey and Newark.

Beginning with a keynote address, the conference consists of courses and workshops which interpret and enlarge upon this keynote theme.

Bishop Donegan, the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Director of the Department of Christian Education, the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang and Mrs. Gurney Williams, are members of the steering committee for this diocese.

Cost of this Conference is $30, of which $5 is payable with registration. Checks should be made payable to The Princeton Conference, and mailed to Mrs. J. Woodard Talman, Jr., Registrar-Treasurer, Sumner Avenue, Edgewater Park, N. J. ■

Over Sixty? Try This Camp

Men and women over 60 will be offered a chance to go to camp, too, this year. This new venture is being undertaken by the Church and Chapel of the Incarnation, with the consultation and cooperation of the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations.

The camp will be conducted for two weeks, June 11 through 20, at Incarnation Camp, Ivoryton, Conn. Facilities include a large, sturdily built lodge with an open fireplace, and the use of a mile-long private lake. Sixty campers can be accommodated. The entire group will leave from the Cathedral, 110th Street and Amsterdam, at 1:30 P.M., June 11.

Registrations should be made as soon as possible with Andrew Katsanis, Director, Incarnation Camp, 240 East 31st Street, New York, 16. For other information phone MU 9-2151. ■

Incarnation Camp Is Filling Fast

Parents who wish to send their children to Incarnation Camp are advised to register promptly, Andrew Katsanis, the director, has told The Bulletin. The first session, from June 30 through July 27, is already filled to capacity. There are a few openings for the period July 28 through August 24. These will probably be filled by early June.

This camp is sponsored by the Church and Chapel of the Incarnation, All Angels Church, Grace Church, St. Thomas Chapel and the Girls' Friendly Society of the Diocese of New York. The facilities include Camp Pequot for Boys and Camp Sherwood for Girls, both at Ivoryton, Conn. Swimming, horseback riding, nature study, fishing, arts and crafts, and various camping skills are included in the program.

A $25 non-refundable registration fee for each four-week period must accompany the application. ■

the two-week summer camp for adults over sixty. In the case of children's camps, we have listed only the one which has the cooperative support of several parishes and the Girls' Friendly Society, thus making it as nearly as possible a diocesan venture. A number of individual parishes operate camps for children; ask your rector about these. Note that the registration capacity at both the Bard and Wilderness Conferences for young people has been increased this year.

Church in Action Topic at Geneva

"The Church in Action" will be the theme of this year's Finger Lakes Conference to be held June 24 through 30 at Hobart and William Smith Colleges, Geneva, N. Y.

With the Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, Vicar of the Chapel of the Intercession, Manhattan, as general lecturer, the conference will face the challenges and complexities of today's tumultuous times, and try to come up with a few answers.

Fr. Myers is particularly known for his work on New York's Lower East Side, and for his book, "Light the Dark Streets."

Cost of the week-long Conference is $42, of which $5 is payable with registration. Checks should be made payable to Finger Lakes Conference and mailed to Miss Charlene Young, 26 Forest Place, Fredonia, N. Y. ■

New Program Created For Leaders of Youth

The Department of Christian Education is planning a brand new type of summer program this year. It is a Training Conference for Adult Leaders of Youth, to be held from August 26 through 31 at Bard College. This is simultaneous with the last New York Youth Conference at Bard.

The conference is open to all parish volunteers who work with young people. The cost is $45, preferably to be paid by the church sending the volunteer rather than by the individual. The Rev. Miller M. Cragon, diocesan Director of Christian Education, said that, at the request of a rector or vicar, scholarships can be obtained from diocesan funds.

Father Cragon will direct the conference.

The six-day session is unusual in that the adults will attend some of the Bard Conference sessions, but they will not take part. Nor are the young people supposed to be particularly aware that adults are using the same campus. The adults will sit in on the Bard Conference groups in the morning, then have lunch and a period for swimming or other sports. Their daily work sessions will be held from 3 to 5 P.M., and from 7:30 to 10. There will be ample time for recreation and fellowship.

According to Father Cragon, the purpose of the conference is "to deepen the understanding of young people, examine and practice some of the leadership skills in working with them, and to become familiar with some of the good, published materials which are available." ■

WHERE'S THE FIRE FATHER???

The Rev. David Arnold, Vicar of the Church of Christ the King, Stone Ridge, is as far as we know, the only Episcopal clergyman in the nation to wear a Fire Chief's helmet as well as a clerical collar . . .

WHEN the phone rings at 3 a.m. in a doctor's house, he knows it means a sick call. When it rings in a policeman's home, he is fairly confident the desk sergeant wants him.

But when the telephone awakens the Rev. David Arnold, Vicar of the Church of Christ the King, Stone Ridge, he is never quite sure which he will need — his priest's equipment or his fireman's helmet.

If it's the helmet and white slicker he reaches for, the priest knows that some person's life and property may depend upon the decisions he makes. He's Chief of the Stone Ridge Fire Department.

According to both the State Firemen's Association and the International Fire Chiefs Association, he is the only clergyman-fire chief known to them in all of New York State at the present time.

Likewise, although there are several Roman Catholic priests who are chiefs throughout the country, Father Arnold may well be the only Episcopal priest in the nation to hold such a job.

He does this work for love, not money. Fire service, he believes, is a basic contribution that an able-bodied man should be glad to provide in a small community — or in a large one, for that matter.

When Father Arnold was a boy, his father, an auditor for the New York Central Railroad, was a volunteer in the White Plains department. While in college, in Plattsburgh, the young man was a volunteer fireman, and when he went into the Navy he received special fire training. "But they discovered that I could use a typewriter, so they sat me at a desk," he recalls with a chuckle.

In 1954 he was assigned as the vicar in Stone Ridge, a little in-again-out-again hamlet about 11 miles west of Kingston on route 209. One of the first things he did was to join the fire department. He became chaplain, assistant chief, and five years ago, he was elected chief.

There was no question in his mind that he could be a priest at one time, a fireman at another, and on occasion, both simultaneously. Once during a service he was saying, "Let us pray for the whole state of Christ's Church," and the fire whistle blew. The priest continued the service without pause. "I knew there were two assistant chiefs and two captains who were extremely dependable," he explains. "More important, I was at the altar."

But on the Sunday morning that the whistle went off as the recessional started, Father Arnold became Chief Arnold and ducked out the side door. Only these two times in seven years have the fire signals blown during a service. But once or twice, on the way home from church, Father Arnold has heeded the whistles and put his slicker on over his cassock.

The biggest fire on record occurred nearly a year ago when the whole center of High Falls, an adjacent hamlet, was threatened. The blaze totally destroyed a market, three other stores and four apartments. Fourteen companies, including Chief Arnold's volunteers from Stone Ridge, had the mess under control in three hours, and saved wooden dwellings that adjoined the blazing buildings for 50 feet on every side.

Generally, though, fires are smaller and less destructive. One reason, Father Arnold believes, is that his department maintains a good program of inspection, drill and fire prevention, and has invested in modern equipment. Shortly after he became chief, the District spent $28,000 in one year alone to modernize its apparatus.

The 100 volunteers who comprise the department have held training sessions, have participated in the State Division of Fire Safety program, and have attended the U. S. Air Force Aircraft Fire and Rescue School at Stewart Field, Newburgh.

The chief himself has attended the New Haven Fire School, and a year ago he qualified for the Civil Service post of New York State fire instructor, one of two for Ulster County. He is chaplain of the Ulster County Fire Instructors Association, and he has participated in two governors' conferences on fire safety. At the 1959 conference in Albany, Gov. Rockefeller publicly commended him.

Naturally, Father Arnold's dual role causes great commotion at home when "the chief" rolls out in the middle of the night to answer a fire call. While daddy hustles into his clothes and reaches for his slicker and hip boots, Mrs. Arnold gets busy to alert volunteers whose homes are not hooked up to the emergency reporting system keyed into the phones of the chief and four aides. Michael, seven, often wakes up, too, begging to be taken along on the fire truck. Pamela, five, and Sandy, four, are more generally apt to sleep through the hubbub.

How the parishioners of the Church of Christ the King react to the idea of a priest-fire chief is a slightly more touchy question. "A great many people have not made any comment whatever," Father Arnold reports. He says he knows some of them, members of the vestry included, disapprove, but he also says he has no intention of turning in his chief's badge for that reason.

"I believe this kind of activity enables people to see the clergy in a new light," he asserts. He says he is "thoroughly convinced" that priests should take a more active part in community life. "We should not hide ourselves under a bushel, but get out and be active. No matter whether I wear a clerical collar or show up in old clothes, people grant me the same respect, but they begin to see that ministers are human as well as holy."

Father Arnold was injured in a fire once. Not in Stone Ridge, but in Plattsburgh, while he was still in college. The BFD Division of the Diamond Match Company went up in smoke one freezing night, and at about 11 P.M. firemen were still struggling with the blaze.

The order came for more hose, and Father Arnold crawled up one roof peak and over another to carry the message. But the roof was a glaze of ice, and he plummeted to the ground from the second story. He broke a floating bone in his kneecap and was in the hospital four or five days.

Nothing serious, he grins. "I can genuflect without any problem at all." ■

THE CHOIR SCHOOL of St. Thomas Church

123 West 55th St., N. Y. 19, N. Y.

As a chorister, this boy daily sings to the glory of God and learns to know and love the great music of the Church. During the school year he lives, studies and plays with forty-three other boys in grades 5 - 8.

The school program encourages him to take advantage of the variety of cultural opportunities Manhattan offers. Happy hours are spent in the spacious gymnasium and on reserved playing fields in Central Park.

Two housemothers and a large domestic staff insure his well-being and comfort. He receives a classical and sound education from a faculty composed of three part-time and eight resident teachers, one, his personal advisor. Classes are small, the atmosphere informal and personal. His progress is carefully evaluated through standardized tests. When he graduates from this unique school, he will be well prepared for entrance into a leading preparatory school.

A large endowment makes possible for him the low tuition fee of $900 for the full year. Additional scholarship help is available.

GREAT NEWS FOR HOSPITALIZATION AT

Pays $100.00 Weekly from First Day

NO WAITING PERIODS ✶ ONLY YOU CAN CANCEL

If you are the one American in four who does not drink, the Gold Star Total Abstainers' Hospitalization Policy will pay you $100.00 a week in cash, from your first day in the hospital and will continue paying as long as you are there, even for life!

If you do not drink and are carrying ordinary hospitalization insurance, you are of course helping to pay for the accidents and hospital bills of those who drink. Alcoholism is our nation's #3 health problem, ranking immediately behind heart disease and cancer! With the GOLD STAR PLAN you are not called upon to help pay the high bills for the ailments and accidents of those who drink. GOLD STAR rates are based on the SUPERIOR HEALTH RECORDS of Non-Drinkers!

For the first time, you can get the newest and most modern type of hospitalization coverage at unbelievably low rates, because the Gold Star Policy is offered only to non-drinkers. And your low Gold Star premium can never be raised because you have grown older or have had too many claims. Only in the event of a general rate adjustment up or down for all policyholders can your rate be changed!

One out of every seven people will spend some time in the hospital this year. Every day over 64,000 people enter the hospital — 47,000 of these for the first time!

READ WHAT A BLESSING THIS PROTECTION HAS BEEN TO OTHERS

AUGUSTA STORAKER, Staten Island, New York — "I appreciated your promptness in handling my claim. Thank you very much. Will surely recommend your Company for its trustworthiness."

MRS. N. L. KOLB, Rochester, New York — "I am most grateful for the hospitalization I received through the De Moss service to non-drinkers. It was the only insurance I found covering my age of 86 years. Almost before the ink was dry on the policy, I fell, cracked a bone in my leg, and received payment for every day I was in the hospital."

REV. HUGH THOMPSON, Buffalo, New York — "We do appreciate greatly your service to us during our recent illness. The claim was handled so efficiently and quickly that we were able to take care of everything. It is very gratifying to be a member of an insurance company with Christian standards.

MRS. MARGUERITE JOSYLON, Auburn, New York — "Thank you for my checks. The last one came today. I can truly say I am glad to recommend the Gold Star policy to anyone. Even though my policy was in effect less than a month, I received full payment for the time I was in the hospital."

MR. CARMAN McEWEN, Malone, New York — "I certainly appreciate the prompt action in payment of my claim for my recent hospitalization."

MISS ELIZABETH THOMPSON, Buffalo, New York — "Thank you for the check and the splendid, courteous service. I am very happy that I read your advertisement in our religious magazine."

LOW RATES FOR NON-DRINKERS

With a Gold Star Total Abstainers' Hospitalization Policy, you receive $100.00 per week in cash, as long as you remain in the hospital, starting from your very first day there, for either sickness or accident. If your hospital stay is less than one week, you still collect at the rate of $14.29 per day. Even if you are already covered by another policy, the GOLD STAR PLAN will supplement that coverage, and will pay you directly, in addition to your present policy. And your benefits are tax-free!

This wonderful, generous protection costs only $4 a month for each adult, age 19 through 64, or $40 for twelve full months. For each child under 19, the rate is just $3 for a month's protection. And for each adult of age 65 through 100, the premium is only $6 a month, or $60 for a full year.

And remember, with Gold Star, the NO LIMIT Hospital Plan, there is NO LIMIT on how long you can stay in the hospital, NO LIMIT on the number of times you can collect (and the Company can never cancel your policy), and NO LIMIT on age!

Compare this plan with others. We welcome comparison because the GOLD STAR PLAN pays from the very first day (we can't pay any sooner); and it pays forever . . . as long as you remain in the hospital (we can't pay any longer!).

OUTSTANDING LEADERS SAY—

JEROME HINES, Leading bass with the Metropolitan Opera Company: "The non-drinker is a better risk and should be entitled to a better insurance rate. There has long been a need for a special hospital plan for total abstainers. Having known Art De Moss for a long time, I am most happy to recommend this low cost Gold Star Policy. It should prove to be a real help and blessing to all who can qualify."

DR. DANIEL A. POLING, Noted Minister and Editor of The Christian Herald: "The advantages of a hospital plan which is available to non-drinkers only are obvious. The lower rate is made possible because you are not paying the bills for the illnesses and accidents of those who use alcohol."

ETHEL WATERS, Noted singer and actress: "It recently came to my attention that you are offering a policy to non-drinkers only. This restriction enables those who qualify to obtain a policy of unusually liberal coverage at low cost. I would like to recommend the De Moss Associates for making the substantial saving possible to those who do not use intoxicating liquor. After all, why should non-drinkers be charged for the much greater risk of those who are a greater hazard?"

Mission Society Appoints New Family Service Head

Miss Bennett Miss Hall

Miss Jean W. Hall, for 36 years Director of the Family Service Department of the Episcopal City Mission Society, and Mrs. Walter Elliot, her assistant for 25 years, have retired.

Succeeding Miss Hall is Miss Barbara S. Bennett, a native of West Hartford, Conn., former newspaper reporter, and counselor in church-sponsored summer camps. Miss Bennett has a B. S. degree from Springfield (Mass.) College. She also studied at St. Margaret's House, an Episcopal graduate school for women church workers, Berkeley, Calif.

During the Depression, the Family Service Department, under the direction of Miss Hall, played a tremendous role in giving direct financial relief and work opportunities to Episcopal families in dire need. Miss Hall started the "youth project" which offers teenagers an opportunity to explore Christian social service work as the basis for possible careers. She also started a senior citizens' project to give part-time employment to elderly people, and she was the guiding spirit behind the Friendship Club at St. Michael's Church. This is a project for older people.

After her retirement, Miss Hall expects to continue her association with the Friendship Club. ■

Society Shelter Plans Open House

The Episcopal City Mission Society will hold an open house on Monday, May 28, from 2 to 4 P.M. at St. Barnabas House, the Society's shelter for temporarily homeless children.

Deatly, chairman of the St. Barnabas House Committee. The event will honor the Rev. William E. Sprenger, retiring director, and the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, his successor.

Tours of the shelter, 304 Mulberry St., Manhattan, will be conducted from 2 to 3 P.M., after which the children will hold their annual Maypole Festival in the Garden.

The Mission Society's Bellevue Hospital Chaplains' Committee honored Mr. Sprenger and Mr. Bonacker at its annual meeting and tea April 26. ■

Cathedral Guild To Meet May 24

The Cathedral Guild of St. John the Divine and the Gardeners of St. John's will hold their annual reception and tea on Thursday, May 24, at 3 P.M.

Churchwomen to Hear Dr. Kennedy At Annual Conference in Tuxedo

Dr. James W. Kennedy, a delegate from this diocese to the World Council of Churches Assembly in New Delhi, India, will address the Diocesan Board of the Episcopal Churchwomen at its annual conference May 22-23 at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center in Tuxedo Park. He will speak on the evening of the 22nd.

"The Ministry of the Laity and Persons of Special Need" is the ECW subject for special emphasis during the coming year. At the conference, the 1962-63 edition of the "Handbook for Episcopal Churchwomen" will form the basis for considering next year's program. Guests on the second day will be officers of ECW boards in the seven convocations.

Keynote speaker for the opening session on May 23 will be Miss Esther Stamats, Director of Services for the Aged, Department of Christian Social Relations, Diocese of New York. Miss Stamats has had a varied background of experience with persons of special need. Counseling and vocational guidance have been a vital part of her work, and she has traveled all over the country as a lecturer and discussion leader.

Summarizing the Conference, on May 23, will be Miss Edith Daly of the Department of Christian Education, National Council. ■

New Curriculum Coming Out

A major event in the field of Christian education is the appearance of the first part of a new curriculum for church schools having a primary department of fewer than 12 pupils.

This curriculum, one of several interesting new projects being developed by the national Department of Christian Education, eventually will consist of three units, each with its teacher's manual and student's work book. Seabury Press, Greenwich, Conn., is the publisher.

The first course, for grades 1, 2 and 3, is entitled "God in Our Widening World." It consists of a basic manual for teachers and three unit books for use in planning class sessions. This manual and Unit Book A will be ready next month. Unit Book B will appear in June, 1963, and Unit Book C in June, 1964, so that teachers beginning with the course this fall will be able to go through the entire grade range with this new curriculum.

Development of material for small church schools grew out of a survey made in 1960 which revealed that 36 per cent of the Episcopal Church schools throughout the country have fewer than 50 pupils in attendance. For these schools group grading (gathering pupils of three grade levels into one group) is a necessity. In preparing the new curriculum to meet their special need, the new materials were pre-tested in more than 30 small schools.

Futher information about this new curriculum can be obtained from the diocesan Department of Christian Education.

The national Department of Christian Education offers a growing number of printed materials under the general designation, "The Church's Teaching." Those available include the closely graded curriculum (for church schools with separate classes of five or more pupils in a grade) known as the Seabury Series; the vacation church school curriculum; a variety of study materials for youth groups; and a wide choice of courses for adults. ■

St. Andrew's, Yonkers, Plans County Festival

The Boys' Choir of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine will sing Evensong, and the Rev. Dr. Reamer Kline, President of Bard College, will preach.

Invitations have been sent to all Westchester clergy. They have been asked to bring a full delegation of their lay readers and to march in the opening procession behind their own crucifers and acolytes. ■

Woman's Council Benefits to Give City Youngsters a Chance at Camp

Four spring benefits and two summer theater programs are planned by Convocation Committees of the Episcopal City Mission Society's Woman's Council. The proceeds will help send 1,500 boys and girls to summer camp.

Each year the Society sends 1,000 children, nine to fourteen years old, to Elko Lake Camps, Liberty, N. Y., and another 500 youngsters, five to eight, to Edgewater Creche and Rethmore Home, a camping area in Englewood, N. J., that is affiliated with the Society. These are children who really need a camp experience and could not have it without the Society's sponsorship.

To help raise the $96,000 needed to operate the Elko Lake Camps alone in July and August, the following events have been scheduled with the hope that parishes in each Convocation will give their full support. Mrs. Thomas F. Vietor is chairman of the planning committee.

RICHMOND — Dessert and bridge party, Friday, May 11, at 1:30 P.M. at St. Andrew's Church. Tickets, $5.00, from Mrs. George C. Hartmann, Convocation Committee chairman, 20 Fairway Avenue, S. I., 4, N. Y.

BRONX — Second annual dinner-dance, Friday, June 1, at Mayer's Parkway Restaurant, 8 P.M. Tickets, $5.50, from Mrs. Albert D. Ketchum, Convocation Committee chairman, 236 Bedford Park Boulevard, New York, 58, N. Y. Mrs. Andrew Bernero is co-chairman.

WESTCHESTER — Second annual "Crystal Ball" at "Brookside," Rye estate of Mrs. Ricardo C. Gonzales, Friday, May 25, at 9:30 P.M. Barney Sorkin's Orchestra again will play for the black-tie dance to be held in a special pavilion erected on the terraces. This band usually plays for Mrs. Gonzales' internationally-famous parties and at many Hollywood social functions. Tickets, $20 a couple, from Mrs. G. Maxwell Ule, 5 Loch Lane, Port Chester. Mrs. E. Walter Chater is Convocation Committee chairman, and Mrs. Gonzales is benefit chairman.

RAMAPO — Benefit tea and art show, Thursday, June 14, from 2 to 5 P.M. at "Sharing Knowe," beautiful home of Mrs. R. Donald Geddes in Goshen. Tickets, $1.50 per person, from Mrs. Samuel W. Eager, Convocation Committee chairman, 37 Highland Avenue, Middletown.

DUTCHESS — As soon as the summer theater circuit of Broadway shows is scheduled, the Dutchess Committee will announce plans for a benefit evening in Hyde Park. Mrs. Robert De F. Boomer is chairman of the Convocation Committee, and Mrs. E. Matthew Netter is co-chairman.

HUDSON — Mrs. H. John Wilkins, Jr., Committee chairman, and Mrs. H. Edgar Timmerman, benefit chairman, are investigating the possibility of a summer matinee and luncheon in Woodstock.

Details of these last two events will be announced later. ■

St. Simeon's Parishioners Are Willing to Work Hard

It should have cost $4,700 to do all the work that's been accomplished at St. Simeon's, Bronx, this year. That is what contractors estimated. But this parish, which is just off the Concourse at East 165th Street, contains a group of hard-working parishioners who said, "Let's do everything that we can ourselves."

The projects include installation of new, Gothic-type hanging lanterns in the church, a complete paint job for the nave, and new kneeling benches for the pews and choir stalls. The total cost was $1,347, all for materials.

"And I didn't urge them," the Rev. Walter A. Rogers, priest-in-charge, told The Bulletin. "The people started to talk about how the church looked, and the first thing you know they had ladders up there and were working."

The leader in this venture was Oliver Wesley, an engineer who is a member of the vestry. He supervised the wiring for the new lights and directed the crew of men and women painters. (A contractor had estimated nearly $1,000 for rigging scaffolding for the 40-foot ceiling.)

Mr. Wesley also made the patterns for the kneeling benches. To do this, he went up to Holy Nativity on Bainbridge Avenue for construction details. Then his volunteers brought in power saws, drills and sanders and cut the benches from his patterns. They made 64 benches, all told.

Some funds were needed, of course — $879 for lighting fixtures, $120 for paint, and $348 for lumber and other materials for the benches. Part of this $1,347 came from Mr. Rogers' discretionary fund, part from parishioners' memorial gifts and part from two benefit dances. ■

TO ORDAIN SON

The Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of New York, will ordain his son, C. Frederic Boynton, to the Priesthood at 10:30 A.M., Monday, June 18, in the Chapel at Bellevue Hospital. Bishop Boynton's son has been a chaplain at Bellevue for the past year. ■

Live Faith, Don't Preach, ECW Panel Member Advises

If a woman goes to work, to what degree should she stand out as a Christian? How can a housewife distinguish between "church work" and "the work of the Church?" How can a volunteer keep her perspective? Where does the clergy stand in this?

Nearly 200 Episcopal Churchwomen from all parts of the Diocese faced these questions during a recent panel program at Grace Church, Nyack. The program evolved from a meditation by Bishop Mosley of Delaware at the ECW Triennial in Detroit last fall.

The business woman on the panel, Mrs. Landes Lewitin, admitted that "if one practices the Christian virtue of humility in the business world, the effect is often that a person is considered a dope to let herself be walked on." She said kindness and understanding get a better reaction, but they are not immediately credited to Christianity. Furthermore, "a person has to be careful about any mention of church attendance, lest it be attributed to bigotry!" However, she said, it would seem that "the best kind of preaching is in living, not in speaking."

The housewife, Mrs. Woodson D. Scott, declared that a wife and mother is sharing in "the work of the Church" if her home exemplifies Christian living. While her children are small, this may mean that she cannot do "church work" — holding office in an organization or helping with bazaars.

The volunteer, Mrs. Albert D. Ketchum, said she believes the work of a business woman, housewife and volunteer can dovetail. "I don't like to feel that the volunteer comes in at the end of the line, when she has one foot in the grave!" she declared.

The Rev. Peter Chase, Canon Pastor of the Cathedral, told the women that, "You must ask yourselves the questions: Who are you? Where are you going? How are you going to get there? The Christian's answers must bear courageous witness that every man is made in the image of God."

Mrs. Robert H. Howe, representative from Province II to the General Division of Women's Work, National Council, was moderator. Mrs. Robert DeF. Boomer, chairman of diocesan meetings, introduced the panelists. ■

The Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Jr., Director of the Department of Christian Education, Diocese of New York, will conduct a week-end retreat sponsored by the Episcopal Churchwomen.

The retreat, open to all women of the Diocese will be held at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park, beginning with dinner on Friday, June 2, and ending with breakfast on Sunday, June 4. The cost, including room and meals, will be $14.50.

Reservations may be made by writing Mrs. Carolyn Beattie at the Conference Center, Box 535, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., or by telephoning ELmwood 1-4651.

Fr. Gusweller Named To New Housing Board

The Rev. James A. Gusweller, Rector of the Church of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan, has been appointed to a new New York advisory board designed "to assure equal treatment and equal opportunity for all minority groups" in state-aided housing and urban renewal developments.

The board, consisting of nine members, will hear charges of inequalities, review policies, and make recommendations for assuring the rights of persons in minority groups. ■

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedral Church

In this monthly column, Canon West answers some of the questions directed to him at the many seminars, retreats and courses which he conducts.

In the unlikely event that our Saviour had married and begotten natural children, would they have been semi-divine, fully divine, or only divine by adoption as we are?

The Great Fathers would have responded cheerfully that he did marry — he married the Church, and we are his children. This, however, begs your question. The only clue to an answer is our Lord's attitude about his family. He would have his mother "blessed" not because she gave birth to him, but because she heard the word of God, and kept it. His careful dissociation from his mother and his brethren (St. Matthew 12:47-50) is only to be understood in terms of the avoidance of any form of "caliphate." It is clear that some of this very group became his ardent disciples, e.g.: The Blessed Virgin and "his brethren" (Acts 1:14); James (Galatians 1:19); Juda (Acts 1:13) — the ascription of Epistles to this same Juda (or Jude) and James is probably best understood as even further evidence of their great reputation for Christian piety.

I recognize fully the danger inherent in giving answers where none has been given us, but I would also insist on any serious-minded person's right to share the best guess one can come up with.

A Good Book Written in a Hurry

An eye-witness account of the World Council of Churches Assembly in New Delhi, India, last fall has been written by Dr. James W. Kennedy, Rector of Church of the Ascension, Manhattan. Entitled "No Darkness At All," it consists of four parts — an account of four sessions, a section on follow-up plans for North America, a study of the ecumenical movement, and a 32-page picture supplement with photos by John P. Taylor, internationally known photographer.

The book was commissioned by the U.S. Conference for the World Council. Just as fascinating as its contents is the steamroller fashion in which the book was written. In New Delhi Dr. Kennedy worked every day virtually around the clock, each night putting the day's proceedings into more or less manageable form.

Then he flew to London where he spent one week, again working around the clock. He would plow along until he felt hungry or felt the urge to take a walk in the fog. Sometimes he worked through the night. When the week was over, he rolled the manuscript under his arm, together with the pictures which had been carefully laid out before leaving New Delhi, and flew to New York. The book came out three days in advance of scheduled publication. Bethany Press is the publisher. Single copies cost $1.50, ten or more copies, $1.25. ■

Bishop to Ordain Deacons, Give Sermon at Rededication

Preaching engagements, an ordination ceremony and the yearly graduation programs at diocesan schools will be included in Bishop Donegan's activities during May and June.

Bishop Donegan will be the preacher at rededication ceremonies at St. James Cathedral, Chicago, on Sunday, June 3. The Rt. Rev. Gerald F. Burrill, Bishop of Chicago, was a priest in the Diocese of New York before his consecration. He was Rector of St. Paul's, Bronx.

Candidates for ordination to the diaconate will present themselves before the Bishop on June 9 at 10:30 A.M. in the Cathedral. The preacher will be the Rev. James J. Sharkey, Rector of St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining. The Bishop will conduct a retreat for the ordinands the day before. During Holy Week, he visited Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn., to have personal conferences with young men from this diocese who are seminarians there. He was accompanied by Archdeacon Brätt.

The Cathedral Choir School prize day also is scheduled for June 9, at 3 P.M. The commencement of St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School will be held on June 6. The Bishop will preside at both events.

On Sunday, May 27, at 11 A.M., the Bishop will institute the Rev. Clarke Oler as the new rector of Holy Trinity, East 88th Street, Manhattan. In the afternoon of that day he will preach at the 50th anniversary service at the Church of St. John the Divine, Mount Vernon. ■

Archbishop of Canterbury To Visit Here in October

The Archbishop of Canterbury

The Archbishop of Canterbury will be a house guest of Bishop Donegan when he comes to this country next fall.

The Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Arthur Michael Ramsey and Mrs. Ramsey will arrive in New York on October 12 for a month-long tour of the United States. It will be his first visit to this country since his enthronement last year as the 100th Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of All England. His last visit to the United States was in 1959.

During his weekend as the guest of Bishop Donegan, the Archbishop will preach on Sunday, October 14, at Trinity Church, Manhattan. On Monday he will address a Clergy Conference at the Cathedral. Later that afternoon and evening he will visit General Theological Seminary. On Tuesday, he will go to Trinity Church, Princeton, Diocese of New Jersey.

The Archbishop will address the House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church at its annual meeting October 27 through November 2 in Columbia, S. C. He will conduct the special Sunday session October 28. ■

St. John the Divine Celebrates 50th Year

Speaking at the 50th anniversary observance of the Church of St. John the Divine, Mount Vernon, Bishop Donegan on May 27 challenged a congregation of 200 to go out into the world and prove the relevancy of the Church by their quality of life and action.

"To the Church has been entrusted the communication of the Good News of God's love to all men . . . the responsibility of converting the world," the Bishop said. He admitted that "so many people think this is the task of the ordained clergy." But it's not. It's the task of everybody, he insisted.

The Bishop spoke at a choral service of Evening Prayer attended by clergy and parishioners from many Westchester communities. The Rev. Jonathan LeRoy King is the rector. ■

Here's a Psychology Book for Youngsters

What is thought to be the first psychology book written FOR children, rather than ABOUT them, was published recently by Prentice-Hall. Arthur Alexander, teacher of the fourth grade at St. Luke's School of Trinity Parish, is the author.

The 62-page book is entitled "The Hidden You: Psychology in Your Life." It sells for $2.95.

Written for the 8-12 age level, the book "introduces the child to psychology at his level," according to the author. It can be used for private reading or as a supplement to science courses, he added.

Mr. Alexander formerly was an editor, copywriter and promotion manager for publishing houses in Canada and the United States. ■

VOLUME 38 JUNE 1962 NUMBER 6

THE BULLETIN OF THE DIOCESE OF NEW YORK, 1047 Amsterdam Avenue, New York 25, N. Y. Published by the Department of Promotion of the Diocese of New York (Episcopal) under the direction of the Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, D.D., D.C.L., S.T.D., monthly except July, August, and September. Joseph B Martin, Editor and Diocesan Director of Promotion. Ruth Weber, Managing Editor. Subscription price, $2, single copies 25¢. Free subscription to persons who contribute regularly to a church in the Diocese of New York. Second class postage paid at Rutherford, New Jersey.

Church people should not expect immediate results from the efforts to reunite Christendom, Bishop Donegan told the 182nd diocesan convention at Synod House on May 8.

He declared that doctrinal viewpoints of the Episcopal Church, other communions, and of the Roman Catholic Church lie in the way of any quick reunion, and he warned against "some superficial alliance which could only in the long run bring new schisms."

Centuries of drifting apart cannot be cured in a few years, the Bishop asserted. Speaking of the coming Vatican Council, he said we should remember that "it is not our Council," and that the terms of the Roman Catholic Church "are not even considerable to the other great religious bodies."

Four Main Topics

Christian unity was one of four major subjects that the Bishop discussed. The others were nuclear testing, racial tensions, and the activities of extremists — both of the left and right.

Discussing racial tensions, he said, "to encourage individuals or families to run away from problems is futile . . . "

Opposes Extremists

On the subject of extremists he said "The Church has always stood firmly against erosion from the left. We stand as firmly against those on the right, who, in the name of patriotism and 'religion' peddle hate and fear and spread divisiveness."

The Bishop acknowledged the final report of the Confirmation Commission, (see separate article on page 6) thanked the 28 persons who worked on this Commission for three and a half years, and described their report as "both brilliant and solid."

The Bishop asserted that, "the insistence of the Lambeth Quadrilateral that all approaches to unity take as their minimum requirement an acceptance of the creeds, the scriptures, the two sacraments — Baptism and Holy Communion — and the apostolic ministry, is not just a way of finding the lowest common denominator." He added, "We do not, and have never denied the efficacy of God's grace as ministered through bodies not holding this view. But, on the other hand, we have never, nor can we ever, deny the rich heritage which is our own. And without which we would cease to be churchmen in our own eyes."

He said there have been intimations that the Roman Catholic Church "would be willing to come to a number of practical agreements with other religious bodies, provided that the position of the Sovereign Pontiff and the dogmas of the Roman Catholic Church be accepted without reservation.

"Let us be honest, the Roman Catholic Church has a right to believe anything it chooses, and to impose any discipline which its own faithful clergy and laity are willing to accept. But let us be equally honest to say that, as of the present, such terms are not even considerable to the other great religious bodies.

Changed Attitude

"Now, there is no need to be unhappy about this. The very change in temper and attitude on the part of all Christian people is something for which we should be profoundly grateful. If, instead of hurling verbal indictments at each other, we have finally arrived at the point where we can credit each other with sincerity and moral honesty, then this is no small achievement."

Speaking on the subject of nuclear testing, the Bishop noted the existence of "two basic sources" of protest against the resumption of nuclear tests — one group "obviously left wing;" the other "made up of some most conscientious, serious-minded Christians," whose courage in expressing their convictions deserves admiration.

War Always Wrong?

But in tackling the problem of whether all war is always wrong, the Bishop said, "War exists because we all live in a fallen world. The problem is not is war wrong — it is, rather, is war always the greatest wrong? There are still people in the world who would rather be dead than be slaves — and there are even people who would rather have their children die than grow up in a perverted and immoral society.

"The problem at the moment is not that of saying war is a bad thing but rather that of insisting that war has suddenly become a bad thing because so many people can be hurt by it. The sin lies inevitably in the killing — not in the method." ■

Convention Elects Council Members

Four men were elected to the Council and two to the Standing Committee at the May 8 Convention of the Diocese.

The Convention also nominated three men for the Cathedral Board of Trustees and elected deputies to Provincial Synod.

Those elected were:

Gusweller, Rector, St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan; the Rev. John C. Harper, Rector, St. Matthew's, Bedford; Charles F. Bound, banker, St. Mark's, Mount Kisco; Dr. Norman H. Pritchard, physician, Crucifixion, Manhattan. All Class of 1964.

To the Standing Committee, (a council of advice to the Bishop) the Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, Rector, St. James', Manhattan, and Dr. Robert H. E. Elliott, physician, Christ Church, Bronx. Both Class of 1966.

Tyler, Jr., attorney, St. Matthew's, Bedford; Charles Brown, retired business executive, Holy Trinity, Pawling, all Class of 1965, and Godfrey R. de Castro, attorney, Crucifixion, Manhattan. Class of 1963 to fill a vacancy.

Alcohol, Placement Of Clergy Are Lively Convention Topics

As the result of action at its 182nd Convention, this Diocese has urged Governor Rockefeller to support legislation which would raise from 18 to 21 the minimum age at which a person may purchase intoxicating beverages in New York State.

The subject has kicked up considerable controversy throughout the state.

At the Convention, delegates split over the question of which was involved — a moral issue or public safety. The resolution passed by 307 to 204.

It was one of two resolutions which prompted long and lively discussion. The other involved the request for a committee of clergy and laity to study the placement of clergy "on the basis of merit, without racial discrimination."

1,100 at Convention

An estimated 1,100 clerical and lay delegates attended the Convention on May 8 in Synod House. The day's schedule began with Holy Communion at 8:15 A.M. with the Bishop as celebrant. Breakfast followed in Synod House undercroft. The legislative session opened at 10.

One of the earliest items of business was passage of a resolution permitting the election of women to the Council. The resolution was defeated on the first call — for unanimous action by delegates — but on a reconsideration it passed by two-thirds vote of both clerical and lay orders.

During the afternoon session two resolutions which were not submitted in advance of Convention were referred for further study. A third resolution was tabled.

Medical Care and Housing

The first two resolutions were submitted by the Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector of St. Philip's, Manhattan. They dealt with medical care for the aged and housing for senior citizens. (See accompanying box.) Both were referred to the Department of Christian Social Relations for report to the 1963 Convention.

The tabled resolution was a proposal by the Rev. Richard Gary, Priest-in-Charge of St. Mary's, Manhattanville, that the Diocese accept full membership in the New York State Council of Churches.

A similar resolution was tabled at the 1961 Convention.

Clergy and key laity in this Diocese have received copies of the resolution urging a higher age limit for the purchase of alcohol. It has gone to the Governor and to the other Dioceses in New York State, urging them to pass similar resolutions, and to join with this Diocese in a State-wide educational program designed to bring about amendment of the law.

The resolution on alcohol was presented by the Department of Christian Social Relations.

Old Enough at 18

Those in opposition assailed the principle of trying to curb drinking by legislation, and urged that if youths are old enough to serve in the Army at 18, they are old enough to buy alcohol.

Among those supporting the resolution was the Rev. J. Norman Hall, Rector of St. Bartholomew's, White Plains and vice chairman of the Department of Christian Social Relations. He said the committee "supports this resolution not without reservations, but in the firm conviction that it is needed in the interest of public safety."

Discussion on the resolution to study placement of clergy followed a motion by Stanley Sabel, lay delegate from St. John's, South Salem, to delete a "whereas."

As passed by the Convention, the resolution read: "Whereas, the placement of Clergy of the Episcopal Church should be on the basis of merit and without racial discrimination; Therefore Be It Resolved, that the Bishop is requested to appoint a representative committee of Clergy and Laity of the Diocese to study this situation and recommend constructive action which will lead to a wider acceptance of clergy by parishes and missions, without regard to race."

However, by a vote of 128 to 126, the Convention struck out a second "whereas" which read " . . . the prevailing practice in this Diocese and throughout the Church appears to restrict the placement of Negro Clergy in terms of actual or expected opportunities for employment in parishes and missions which are exclusively or overwhelmingly Negro in membership."

The Rev. Gerald V. Barry, Rector, Christ Church, Riverdale, confers with two parishioners, Dr. Robert H. E. Elliott, retiring chairman, Department of Christian Social Relations, and Walter S. Root, a former warden.

The Rev. M. Moran Weston, who had offered the resolution, objected to striking out the "whereas." He said, "I could wish that there were no necessity even to consider this matter." But he added, "We face a real situation in the world today in which the image of our country and in corresponding ways the image of our own church is seriously impaired in the minds and understanding of many people . . . " He asserted that "Negroes, Puerto Ricans or persons from other minority groups are not seriously considered for placement in parishes and missions in our Diocese and in our Church as a whole."

Favors 'Whereas'

Dr. Tollie Caution, associate secretary in the Division of Domestic Mission, National Council of the Episcopal Church, argued in favor of the "whereas."

A lay delegate, Whitney North Seymour, Sr. of Grace, Manhattan, said: "The effect of the present second paragraph is to make a finding by this body that at present there is grave discrimination in this diocese now. Whatever the experience may be, this diocese has made great progress. I see no reason why its present practice should be condemned and thus encourage dioceses who love to watch New York and say 'look what New York says about itself' to stand by practices which we would disapprove." ■

Council Members Appointed

The Bishop has appointed two clergymen and three laymen to the Council of the Diocese of New York. At a Council meeting June 7, Bishop Boynton was reelected secretary.

The appointments made at that meeting are: The Rev. H. August Kuehl, Rector of St. Barnabas, Irvington; Budinot P. Atterbury, Holy Trinity, East 88th Street; Harry Brookfield, Grace, Nyack; and Mrs. William Gardner, St. Philip's, Manhattan. Mr. Kuehl and Mr. Atterbury are reappointments.

The Bishop also named these department chairmen: Finance, Mr. Atterbury; Christian Education, Mr. Kuehl; Christian Social Relations, The Rev. J. Norman Hall, Rector, St. Bartholomew's, White Plains; and Promotion, The Rev. John C. Harper, Rector, St. Matthew's, Bedford. The Bishop is chairman ex-officio of the Department of Missions.

Mrs. Gardner will serve in the Department of Christian Social Relations, and Mr. Brookfield, Finance. ■

IN HIS CONVENTION address Bishop Donegan reported that during the past year 3,939 persons have been added to the communicant strength of the Diocese of New York. Of this number, 3,684 were confirmed, 246 received from the Roman Catholic Church and 9 from the Orthodox. ■ Amendments to Canons to permit election of women to the Council.

Amendment to the Rules of Order so that matters of most importance come up early in the Convention.

Resolution endorsing "warnings against extremist movements — both of the Right and Left — which have been expressed by the Bishop of New York . . . and by the General Convention of 1961," urging clergy to make the subject of extremist movements one for "instruction, study and preaching," and empowering the Department of Christian Education to "assist the clergy" in this effort.

Resolution asking legislative action to amend the Alcoholic Beverage Control Law, raising from 18 to 21 the minimum age at which a person may purchase intoxicating beverages. Resolution declared the present minimum age "makes many of our communities potential sources of death and injury for out-of-state young people who come here primarily to buy and consume intoxicating beverages not available . . . in their own States . . ." # Confirmation Report Is First of Its Kind

The results of five years of study, research and analysis by a Commission on Preparation for Confirmation was formally presented to Bishop Donegan at a meeting and dinner at Cathedral House on May 4. According to Bishop Boynton, chairman of the Commission, the report is unique in at least two respects:

• Although Confirmation preparation is a frequently discussed subject in theological circles and has been the subject of many books and pamphlets by individuals and diocesan groups, this is the first report on the subject ever to be prepared by an official commission in the Diocese of New York. As far as its research committee was able to determine, it is the first of its kind in the Episcopal Church.

'Commitment' Stressed

• Whereas the great emphasis in Confirmation preparation, in most cases, has been on understanding, this report points to "allegiance" or "commitment" as the ultimate goal. It affirms that "the key question is not 'what do you know?' but 'on what do you bet your life?'"

The 82-page report will now be published and sent to all clergy in this diocese as well as to bishops throughout the nation.

Creation of the Commission was first proposed by the Department of Christian Education and announced by Bishop Donegan in his Convention address of 1958. He stressed the importance of "careful, adequate instruction," and the "follow-through of fellowship and interest" for the lack of which "too many after Confirmation become lapsed communicants or conventional and casual Christians."

20 on Commission

Twenty persons were appointed. They were divided into committees on The Theology of Confirmation, Guide Materials and Bibliography, Research, and committees on Preparation of Children, of Youth, of College Students and of Adults. Because the original composition of the committee changed as some of the members left this diocese for positions elsewhere, the actual number of those who served was 28.

Core of the Commission's report is an outline of a course of study for the Preparation of Children, Youth, College Students and Adults. A substantial chapter is devoted to each, followed by a carefully worked out bibliography.

Early in its deliberations the Commission realized that it could not tackle its project without answering the fundamental question, "What is Confirmation in the Anglican Communion?" As the answer began to evolve, other broad questions vital to the work were debated and agreed upon. (The Commission made a point of proceeding on nothing less than a unanimous decision on every question.)

Thus, there are chapters on "The History of Confirmation," "The History of the Commission," What is Confirmation?" "Validity," and "Allegiance." (The last three were presented by Bishop Boynton to the 1959, 1960 and 1961 Conventions. See the Journal of Convention for those years.) Other chapters are "Methods of Preparation," "Caution and Special Attention," and "Follow Up." A general bibliography is appended.

Highlights

Some of the important points mentioned in the chapter on the History of the Commission are these:

That "Confirmation should be considered as complementary to Baptism rather than its completion."

That "Confirmation is analagous to Ordination but is not 'Ordination of the Laity' as so frequently defined."

Bishop Wetmore and the Rev. William F. Corker, Rector of St. Michael's, Manhattan, hold a conversation at Diocesan Convention.

Platform parley between Bishop Donegan and Bishop Boynton during Convention.

That "Confirmation does not EFFECT Church membership although it decidedly AFFECTS it."

That "Confirmation preparation should be primarily devoted to the spiritual life, and must be seen within the perspective of the total parish program; involving the families of the candidates in particular and the whole congregation in general."

That "the particular gift of the Spirit in Confirmation as opposed to the more limited and fragmenting lists of gifts, is, as in the case of marriage, ordination, etc. in direct relationship to the new responsibility being undertaken."

Knowledge "Not Ignored"

That " . . . although Confirmation at this stage in Christian history cannot be considered as 'generally necessary to salvation' it certainly can be defined as 'normally' so."

That " . . . commitment, on the part of the candidate, is a key to the determining of his readiness — a readiness which embraces his desire and allegiance far more even than his understanding or knowledge." But while commitment is stressed, knowledge is not ignored.

In its chapter on "Allegiance," the report notes: "Admittedly the intellectual training of a candidate for Confirmation ought to include the maximum which that candidate can absorb, but to stop there is to run the risk of a religion so compartmentalized as often to end by ceasing to be religion at all."

Under a heading of "What to Watch Out For," the report warns that "Confirmation preparation is, both for children and adults, a very

Council Departments Give Report Of Year's Important Activities

One of the major items of business at each Diocesan Convention is a report from each of the five departments of the Council. Here are excerpts from these reports:

Missions: Presented by Archdeacon Brätt for rural churches and Archdeacon McEvoy for urban work.

The report on rural churches noted increased giving by congregations in missions and aided parishes. The reasons, said Archdeacon Brätt, are a growth in church attendance, plus assistance provided by Director of Stewardship Eric Ley in developing a new sense of stewardship.

Developments during the year included the acceptance of St. Anne's, Washingtonville, as a mission; a new parish house at St. Gregory's, Woodstock, assistance to Christ Church, Piermont; a conference in Yorktown, Westchester Convocation, to explore rapid growth in that area; and a house-to-house religious survey in Pine Plains. Hopewell Junction is preparing for a ten-fold population growth within ten years, the Archdeacon also reported.

In discussing urban mission work, Archdeacon McEvoy said, "The Diocese of New York has been a pioneer . . . we tend, unhappily, I believe, to think of 'urban' work as that subsidized, in part, by the Diocese . . . but every parish in an urban setting is doing, each in its own way and through a variety of methods, Christ's work for souls in the City."

Projects ("in great measure due to the more than 30,000 contributors to the 175th Anniversary Fund") undertaken this year are:

Completion of parish house, St. Margaret's, Bronx, and start of reconstruction of the church (its foundations were honey-combed by termites); new church at St. Andrew's, Bronx; new parish house, St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan, in progress; renovations, St. Mary's, Manhattanville; site purchase, All Saints, S. I. Work planned at St. David's, Bronx, and St. Peter's, Manhattan.

Christian Education: Presented by the Rev. H. August Kuehl, department chairman. Under the heading of Youth Division — Summer Conference programs at Wilderness and Bard growing steadily. Three conferences will be held at Bard this year, instead of two. The Department had hoped to add a full-time staff member to work in the field of youth work. "But once again the sinister dragon called 'unpaid Missionary Quotas' raised his ugly head to defeat our purpose."

Promotion: Presented by the Rev. George Barrett, department chairman. "Impressive achievements" in promotion include "development of the Bulletin . . . into a far more complete and adequate organ of the Diocese." Also, a "considerable increase" in radio and television activity, creation of a Speaker's Bureau, publication of a manual on press relations and other aids for parishes.

The stewardship program "has now resulted in two years of effective teaching, witnessing and leadership . . . " During that time, full scale canvasses conducted in 39 parishes and missions; 10 to 14 scheduled for the balance of 1962. Gains of from 20 to 200 per cent made in the six canvasses conducted so far in 1962, with an average increase of 69 per cent.

Recommendation to obtain an assistant for Mr. Ley.

Christian Social Relations — Presented by Dr. Robert H. E. Elliott, department chairman. Department's points of emphasis defined:

1. "Not only to place before the people of this Diocese the social issues of the day, but also to assist them in the development of a response . . . which is in keeping with the teachings of the Church;"

2. That the appropriate channel for development of this program should be through Convocations to parish clergy and through them to parishioners.

3. That the Department should "have available for the Bishop background material and consultative advice . . . "

Projects during the year included an open meeting on the problem of integrated housing (held during May); cooperation with the Department of Christian Education to begin a program on "Ethics and the Church in Business and Professional Life;" appointment of a Director of Services for the Aged. This director, Miss Esther Stamats, also presented a report to the Convention.

Finance — Presented by Boudinot P. Atterbury, department chairman. He presented "a message both magnificent and disturbing: . . . that the spirit and will of the servants of the Council year after year exceed the Council's material resources." He said, "Fulfillment of parish quotas is the cure." This year, the Finance Department "was faced with a gap of $73,000 between askings and anticipated givings." Because Bishop Donegan made available a $24,500 special gift from the St. Peter and St. Paul Foundation for repairs to buildings of the Department of Missions, as well as additional gifts to the Departments of Christian Social Relations and Christian Education (from his Fund for Diocesan Needs) "our $73,000 problem came down to a somewhat more manageable $40,000 deficit."

Thus, the Finance Department recommended eliminating from the Christian Education budget its re-

522 Clergy Here

During 1961 sixteen candidates for Holy Orders were ordained to the diaconate and fourteen deacons were ordained to the priesthood. There are at present 68 postulants, candidates and pre-theological students. The diocese contains 522 clergy, of whom 440 are canonically resident. Eighty-two are officiating under license from the Bishop. Six deaconesses are canonically resident and there are 216 lay readers. These statistics are from the Bishop's Convention address. ■

What Is The Anglican Communion?

THE ANGLICAN COMMUNION was described by the Lambeth Conference in 1930 in these words:

"A fellowship within the One Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church, of those duly constituted Dioceses, Provinces or Regional Churches in communion with the See of Canterbury, which have the following characteristics in common:

(a) They uphold and propagate the Catholic and Apostolic faith and order as they are generally set forth in the Book of Common Prayer as authorised in their several Churches;

(b) They are particular or national Churches, and, as such, promote within each of their territories a national expression of Christian faith, life and worship; and

(c) They are bound together not by a central legislative and executive authority, but by mutual loyalty sustained through the common counsel of the Bishops in conference."

What this fellowship means in practice is a very simple thing. It means that you, an Episcopalian, will find you have a church almost anywhere you go in the world. If you come to England, the Church of England is your church. If you go to Japan, the Nippon Sei Kokai is your church. In Kenya, you would find the Church of the Province of East Africa. In New Zealand, you would find the Church of the Province of New Zealand. The Prayer Book you used might be that of the Episcopal Church, or of any of the 17 other churches. The language might be English or Baganda or Malayan Chinese or Spanish. One thing would be certain: in all essential matters of faith and order, of life and worship, it would be the same church. Thus you, as an American Episcopalian, belong to a world-wide family—very loosely organised, indeed, with complete independence among the various churches which make up the fellowship, but still bound together by an enormous depth of loyalty and tradition, of common doctrine and common life.

The "common counsel" which sustains our mutual loyalty is principally maintained at the meetings, generally every ten years, of the bishops of all the Anglican churches at Lambeth Palace, the London headquarters of the Archbishop of Canterbury. These "Lambeth Conferences" have no legal authority themselves; their recommendations must be acted upon by each of the 18 churches before they can have any binding force; but the counsel of the bishops has great informal authority, of course, as well as providing the possibility of the practical planning and co-operation we all need. The Archbishop of Canterbury, as the senior bishop and primate of our Communion, convokes and presides over the conference; but bishops from every continent and of nearly every race take part equally in its work.

Since 1930, when the description I quote was written, several other inter-Anglican groups and activities have been added. Chief among these is the Anglican Congress, a meeting, of all the bishops and of clerical and lay representatives from every diocese around the world. The first of these was held in Minneapolis, in 1954, with the Episcopal Church as host. The second is planned for Toronto, in 1963, at the invitation of the Anglican Church of Canada. Another agency of importance is the Advisory Council on Missionary Strategy, a body representative of and supported by all the 18 churches, with an executive officer and staff, whose chief function is the strengthening of the common life and planning of all our churches.

There are, as I say, 18 churches in this loosely-organised fellowship. The Church of England is the mother church, of course, with its two provinces of Canterbury and York. The Church in Wales was set apart as a separate church in 1920, when four (now six) Welsh dioceses were disestablished. (In England, the Church of England is the established, i.e., the legal, official Church of the Kingdom. This is no longer the case in Wales, Ireland or Scotland). The Church of Ireland was organized as a separate church in 1870; it includes 14 dioceses, in two provinces, Armagh and Dublin. In Scotland, the established Church has been Presbyterian since the 17th Century, but the ancient Episcopal Church in Scotland continues, organised in six dioceses. Thus the Church of England, the church which has borne unbroken witness to the Catholic faith and order since Christianity first came to England in the first or second century, remains the legally-established church only in England itself, but shares with the three other churches of the British Isles the long apostolic tradition of nearly 20 centuries.

The oldest churches outside the British Isles are the Episcopal Church of the United States, and its twin, the Anglican Church of Canada. Both came into separate existence as a result of the American Revolution. Until then British settlers in the colonies, in Virginia or Nova Scotia, in Quebec or Connecticut, had simply been members of the Church of England, ministered to by missionaries sent out from the British Isles, and with only a shadowy chief pastor, the Bishop of London. The political changes of the Revolution necessitated ecclesiastical changes, too. The Church in the United States completed its separate organisation in 1786, and the Canadian Church, following a somewhat different path, ultimately became a united, national church of Canada in 1893. Long before that, however, the four provinces of the Canadian Church had become fully self-governing units of the church's life.

In like manner, other such autonomous churches came into existence as the years went on. Some, like the churches in Australia and New Zealand, were established as the two American churches were, by colonists from England who brought their church with them. In other cases, the new provinces were established by missionary work from the older churches among the people of non-Christian areas and cultures. In both Japan and China, for example, there are self-governing national churches, whose bishops, clergy, lay people, Prayer Book, Bible are all entirely Japanese or Chinese. Other Anglican churches may and do support them, financially and with man power as needed, but they are completely independent and self-governing.

Such churches exist in Japan and China, where their legal names in both cases are translated as "the Holy Catholic Church in (Japan or China)", in India ("The Church of India, Pakistan, Burma and Ceylon") and in Africa, where there are now five separate churches, called simply the Church in the Province of whatever-it-is — South Africa, West Africa, Central Africa, East Africa, or Uganda. The last-named is the newest to be set apart, having been launched as a province in April, 1961. In the British West Indies as well, a similar and autonomous province exists. However, the American missionary dioceses in the West Indies—Cuba, the Dominican Republic Haiti, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands — are still members of the American Church rather than the West Indian. The same is true of the American mission in Liberia, which does not yet belong to the Church of West Africa.

The eighteenth member of the household is the Archbishopric in Jerusalem, which links together the life of our Churches in Jerusalem, Egypt and Libya, Iran, Jordan and the Sudan.

There are still some dioceses, as well, which are not included in any province (usually because of geographical problems). Eight such are Argentina, Bermuda, Borneo, Gibraltar, Korea, Madagascar, Mauritius and Singapore and Malaya. These are all dioceses largely supported from the British Isles, whose metropolitan is the Archbishop of Canterbury. Three Australian dioceses are still isolated from any province — Adelaide, Tasmania and Willochra. The various overseas dioceses of the Episcopal Church are included as members of the American Church, represented by their bishops and clerical and lay deputies in the American General Convention, although it is expected that in the course of time most of them will become parts of independent national or regional churches of their own. In Brazil, the three dioceses there already have a measure of self-government.

Thus the aim of the Anglican Communion is to establish, as quickly as possible, autonomous national churches in every land. It is by "missionary" effort that these churches are born; but the aim is not to keep them as dependent colonies but to lead them swiftly to the point where they are fully and strongly established in their own soil, with their own leadership, managing their own affairs, and taking their full part in the world-wide life of our fellowship. The older churches continue to help, of course. Our Episcopal Church, for example, is very substantially involved in assistance to the Church in Japan, and to some degree we are in partnership with almost all the other Anglican churches. Similarly, missionaries and funds from the other Anglican churches flow to strengthen the brotherhood everywhere in the world. This interchange of resources and manpower, and the world-wide planning of it, is a principal concern of the Advisory Council on Missionary Stategy, of which I have the honour to be the executive officer.

Each church manages its own affairs as far as its government and finances are concerned. Although the Prayer Books in use are generally similar to one another, each church decides what its own worship is to be, and establishes its own rules for the guidance and discipline of clergy and members. In England, where the church is officially established, Parliament is the supreme governing authority, and the Queen, acting on the advice of her ministers, is the temporal head of the church — that is, for example, she (on the advice of the Prime Minister) appoints all bishops and deans, must approve all church legislation, etc.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is the spiritual head of the Church of England and Primate of all England. In addition, he has the first place in honour and dignity among all the bishops and archbishops of the Anglican Communion, and in some cases is a final authority on appeal from some of the other churches. He is, ex officio, the chairman of the Lambeth Conference and of the other principal inter-Anglican bodies. He is appointed, of course, by the Queen. In most other Anglican churches, the archbishops (or presiding bishops) and bishops are elected by the clergy and laity of the church.

In such an informal fellowship, there are no rules for admitting (or evicting!) member churches. They come into separate existence as they grow and are ready for it, and in each case the parent church or churches establish these new members. The only test of membership in the Anglican Communion, I should suppose, would be whether or not a given church sought such membership, fulfilled the very general description in the first paragraph, and was represented by its bishops in the Lambeth Conference. Any question about such a vexed matter would be finally decided by the Consultative Body of the Lambeth Conference, composed of the heads of all the member churches (or their deputies), which is as close as the Anglican Communion comes to having a supreme court or legislature.

Two matters remain to discuss. One is the question of size — how big is this fellowship? At present, there are 18 churches, including more than 340 dioceses. Some forty million Christians are members of these churches. The majority of these members are probably still citizens of the United Kingdom or of the British Commonwealth around the world. But there are nearly eight million Anglicans in Africa, for example, to say nothing of other continents, and nobody knows how many nationalities, languages and dialects are included in our life and worship.

Second, what about relations with other churches? Our Anglican churches are in full communion with some other Christian bodies (i.e., we may freely receive the Holy Communion in each other's churches, and our bishops and clergy may equally freely exchange with theirs). This does not mean unity of organisation or the full acceptance of what each church teaches; it means that each regards the other as a critical time . . . for clergy, and those who assist them . . . It is, however, too easy for Confirmation preparation to be seen merely as 'one more turn of the wheel,' — an annual routine responsibility already carried out many times." It is suggested that clergy "spend time . . . meditating on how all of this will be seen through the eyes of some well-known child who will be a member of the class . . ."

The report also draws attention to various individual situations to be wary of — the child who is coerced into attending Confirmation class by an eager parent, the child who anticipates "magic" or some special sensory effect from the laying on of hands, the person who expects final answers.

Special problems involved in the preparation of the mentally retarded or disturbed, the infirm, the exceptionally brilliant, prisoners and delinquents also are discussed. ■ fully qualified church within the one Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church of Christ. This wider fellowship includes many groups of Christians in many lands — the Old Catholic Churches of Europe or the Polish National Church in America or the Philippine Independent Church are examples. Beyond that, we are bound together closely with many other Christians in the World Council of Churches and in various National Councils. Here, although we are not in full communion with each other, we have steadily-deepening relationships of brotherly work and study and many aspects of common life.

In many parts of the world, as in India and Nigeria for instance, intensive plans are being studied looking toward the union of our church and others in a new and very broad national church (as in South India). While this means, in one sense, the "disappearance" of the Anglican Communion, it also makes possible the emergence of a far more inclusive unity, for which all Christians pray. Only with the Roman Catholics and with some Christian groups at the other end of the spectrum are there no official contacts. Yet, even in these cases, there are warm and important unofficial relationships which may lead to a still greater unity than anything we now know. ■

Children Throng Cathedral For Presentation Service

A total of $24,737, representing missionary offerings, saved in mite boxes and given in special contributions by children all over the Diocese during 1961-62, was received at the annual Presentation Service on Saturday, May 26, at the Cathedral.

More than 2,500 children thronged the Cathedral for the occasion with their parents and friends. Church School banners of every conceivable color and design led the delegations of vested choristers from more than 70 parishes. Bishop Donegan gave the address.

Instead of creating tableaux this year, children from nine churches prepared displays of work actually done during Church School sessions. These displays came from Grace, White Plains; St. George's, Manhattan; St. John's, Larchmont; St. John's, Staten Island; St. Mary's, Cold Spring; St. Paul's, Bronx; St. Paul's, New Rochelle; St. Philip's, Manhattan; and St. Stephen's, Pearl River. The Girls' Friendly Societies of Holy Communion, Manhattan, and St. Stephen's, Pearl River, also contributed material. This year's missionary offering is earmarked for use in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. ■

Mrs. Edgar Elected ECW President At Annual Meeting, Ingathering

Episcopal Churchwomen from all seven Convocations attended the annual meeting and Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering on May 12. The day opened with a service of Holy Communion in the Cathedral, at which the Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector of St. Philip's, Manhattan, described these days as " a time of joy, a time of tragedy, a time of decision."

The joy arises from thanks to God for all blessings, and the tragedy from man's destructive use of "the marvelous possibilities inherent in nuclear power," he said. The decision to follow Christ into the midst of the tragedy of this troubled world will enable God to break through " . . . and bring into being new and creative possibilities . . . "

The United Thank Offering total was $26,267.24 from 7,461 women. Here is the breakdown by Convocations:

|---|---|
| Bronx | $ 1,761.00 |
| Dutchess | 1,555.88 |
| Hudson | 770.39 |
| Manhattan | 11,320.42 |
| Ramapo | 1,068,59 |
| Richmond | 1,288.56 |
| Westchester | 8,502.40 |
| | $26,267.24 |

After luncheon in Synod House undercroft, the ECW elected a slate of officers and heard an address by Bishop Donegan, who installed the new officers. He praised the work of Mrs. Gurney Williams, the retiring president, and welcomed her successor, Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr. The slate was elected as announced in the April Bulletin, with the addition of Mrs. Hartley Le M. Smith, Staten Island, to fill the one-year unexpired term of Mrs. Russell Brown. Mrs. Williams presented her annual report, highlighting work of the year in the ECW's many areas of activity. ■

Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr.

Dear fellow members,

To be elected President of the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of New York is an honor, a privilege, and a responsibility. I pray that I may prove worthy of the office, and I beseech your prayers and your support.

During the past five years, under the dedicated leadership of Mrs. Gurney Williams, program planning for the Diocese has evolved and developed around a Triennial theme, with a special emphasis each year. Our current theme is the "Ministry of the Laity." Next year the emphasis will be on "Persons of Special Need."

"The Ministry of the Laity" and "Persons of Special Need" was the subject of the May Conference between Diocesan and Convocation boards. "Who Cares?", the title of our study guide, poses the question that Episcopal Churchwomen will be called upon to answer through prayer, study and action in their parishes and communities. Wider opportunities for this ministry will be explored at the Diocesan meetings.

Changing times cause changing patterns in our lives and work. The Diocesan Board, therefore, will continue to review and evaluate its policies, and will submit to parishes for their approval, suggestions as to ways in which organizational procedures of Episcopal Churchwomen may be changed and improved.

With all best wishes,

Katherine Edgar

St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's Opens Drive for New School

St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's, an Episcopal school on Morningside Heights, has announced plans for a new school building, and has begun a fund drive for $4,600,000.

Bishop Donegan, who is chairman of St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's board of trustees, was the speaker at a dinner held at Cathedral House to open the campaign officially.

The school was opened in 1950 with an enrollment of eight children. Now, 430 boys and girls from pre-school through twelfth grade attend classes in three brownstone houses on West 113th Street and in a converted residence at Riverside Drive and 107th Street.

According to the Rev. Mother Ruth, Headmistress, the new school will accommodate 750 pupils. At present, she reports, 'The number of applications is so great that we must regretfully turn away far more students than we can accept." The campaign goal includes $450,000 for a scholarship fund.

Although a site for the new school has not yet been chosen, the structure has been conceived as a multi-purpose building containing 30 classrooms, a library, science laboratories, gymnasium, auditorium, cafeteria and chapel.

Hans Kessler of Manhattan is chairman of the Development Committee. The Bishop is honorary chairman. ■

Miss Stamats Speaks Out for Aged

"There is far too little communication between the churches, their old people and the groups working with them," Miss Esther Stamats, Director of Services for the Aged in the Diocese of New York, told a group of social workers in Ottawa, Canada, recently.

She declared that "older people, when given a chance, have been the best volunteers for work with other older people and with mental patients."

The occasion was a luncheon sponsored by the Social Service Council of the Anglican Diocese of of Ottawa, and it was one of several speaking engagements during an eight-day visit to Canada. Miss Stamats was the guest of The Anglican Church of Canada and the United Church of Canada.

She also addressed the annual meeting and dinner of The Good Companions, a fellowship of senior citizens in Ottawa. She acted as leader of the Conference on Older Persons held at Five Oaks Conference Center, Paris, Ont., under sponsorship of The Anglican Church; she was interviewed on a live television program, and she was both consultant and speaker for an all-day conference held by the United Church of Canada.

Miss Stamats, 69, took her new job last year after several years of work for the Government in helping plan and direct the White House Conference on the aging.

During the past year she has visited clergy, parishes and convocation groups in all seven Convocations, consulted with deans and Christian Social Relations chairmen, visited institutions and social work centers, and in varous places has helped develop programs for the aged. ■

the Question is...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of
the Cathedral Church

All the Clergy of our Church have recently been sent the following questions. Most of the Bishops and other Clergy, noting the "have-you-stopped-beating-your-wife?" character of them, ignored them. I take advantage of this column to speak up for my brethren; it is not that the faith of the Clergy is shaky, but rather that the forms in which the questions are put make them unanswerable save in a highly defined context.

Do you believe in the Virgin Birth, Resurrection and bodily Ascension into Heaven of our Lord to be Sacred truths?
Yes ( ) No ( )

If you mean Virgin Birth as stated in the Bible — as an affirmation rather than an explanation, Yes. If you mean the Resurrection and bodily Ascension as stated in the Bible — recognizing that the word "bodily" must be understood as describing a body which could pass through doors (St. John 20:19), vanish (St. Luke 24:31), not be recognizable on sight (St. John 21:4), could be seen by some and not by others (Acts 10:41), and could be borne up by a cloud — in St. John Chrysostom's splendid phrase, "in the symbol, he would say, of the Divine power, for no other Power is seen to appear on a cloud," — Yes.

Do you hold such belief to be essential to a Christian's Faith?
Yes ( ) No ( )

How can I answer yes, when Holy Scripture requires only that a person confess the Lord Jesus, and believe that God has raised him from the dead (Romans 10:9)? "It is the stature of Jesus that makes the Virgin Birth credible" — not the other way 'round. I believe in the Virgin Birth because I am an orthodox Christian; I am not a Christian because I believe that the Virgin Birth really happened. Indeed, it should not be forgotten that the Moslems also believe in the Virgin Birth. The Creed states in proper order "I believe . . . in Jesus Christ . . . born of the Virgin Mary."

Dr. Oxholm Recovering After Extended Illness

Dr. Theodor Oxholm, Treasurer of the Diocese, did not attend this year's Convention — on doctor's orders. His absence was explained by Bishop Donegan who told delegates that he has had, "as some of you know, a slight vascular spasm which he has been assured will leave him with no disability whatever."

The Bishop continued, "He is making an unusually good recovery and will be back in his customary good form in the near future. I will see him tonight and I know you will want me to send him your affectionate greetings." ■

Cathedral Choir School Appoints New Headmaster

G. Coerte Voorhees, Director of Program at St. Andrew's School, Middletown, Del., will become the new headmaster of the Cathedral Choir School in September.

Dean Butler, in making the announcement, said the appointment is the culmination of a search started last February. Alec Wyton, Cathedral organist and Master of Choristers, as well as headmaster of the Choir School for a number of years, now will devote his full time to the two musical positions.

"Mr. Wyton has long been anxious to revert to purely musical duties," Dean Butler said. "But he very graciously consented to continue as Headmaster during the beginning of my position as Dean."

Mr. Voorhees has had an unusual combination of academic and athletic experience. Born in Newark, N. J., in 1908, the son of an instructor at Kent School, he was educated at Kent and Princeton. He rowed for Kent and was on the Inter-Collegiate Championship Crew at Princeton, where he majored in French.

His first position was as instructor in English and Latin at Kent. Upon his arrival he was promptly made coach both of the crew and the football team. He taught for a year at the Nichols School, Buffalo, and in 1935 went to St. Andrew's, where, except for a period of Naval service, he remained until 1962. He was a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve, serving as Commanding Officer of Transports in the Atlantic and Mediterranean from 1944 to 1946.

Mr. Voorhees is married and has two sons. ■

Two Convocations Elect New Deans

Two new deans were elected at the annual Spring Convocation meetings held on April 30. In Manhattan, the Rev. Albert A. Chambers, Rector of Church of the Resurrection, was elected to succeed the Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, Rector of St. James'. In the Bronx, the Rev. Basil Law, Rector of St. James', Fordham, was named to succeed the Rev. Robert W. Cromey, Rector of Holy Nativity, who has left the Diocese.

At this year's meetings, several clergy who deal with the problems and achievements of urban churches were guest speakers in the suburban and rural convocations, and clergy from the country came to describe their work to people in the city. ■

Teenagers from St. Paul's, Bronx Win 'Salute to Youth Week' Award

Young people of St. Paul's, Bronx, received an award in the annual "Salute to Youth Week" ceremonies at City Hall recently. They were among a number of school and church groups to be honored for outstanding community service.

"Salute to Youth Week" points up the fact that many teenagers are highly responsible citizens and are engaged in useful and meritorious activities. Mayor Wagner presented this year's awards.

The award to St. Paul's was the second-place honor among several presented by the Protestant Council of the City of New York. The Jefferson Avenue Youth Center, Brooklyn, won first place.

Representing St. Paul's was Miss Pearline Westley, president of the church's high school class. This group of 35 teenagers has organized suppers, picnics and outings for children at St. Barnabas House, New York City Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society's temporary shelter for homeless children. The program also includes ways of keeping in touch with these "adopted" brothers and sisters between special events. ■

For the Department of Christian Social Relations it recommended "reduction in expenditures for miscellaneous educational and political material for which there just are no funds," and "still worse . . . limiting its services to the aged, at least until other agencies redeem their pledges to share in its overhead." New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society and Seamen's Church Institute recommended for still less support from the Council — half of the budgeted $15,000 between the two of them.

The Department also recommended increasing the income potential in two areas — the Conference Center at Tuxedo and The Bulletin. The Department recommended a plan to ask readers to pay $2 a year rather than receive the magazine free. ■

. . . in brief

■ WHEN BOYS at Greer School noticed the improvement project being undertaken for girls in Crest Cottage, some of them wanted to know why the girls had received priority. Learning that the Dutchess Convocation unit of Episcopal Churchwomen was assuming the role of "angel" in the transformation, one of the boys told the director, Ian Morrison, "Well, sir, we're a lot more angelic than those girls! Can't you find us an angel, too?"

In the next issue of Greer News, Mr. Morrison invited prospective "angels" to communicate with him "concerning assistance for the cottage containing male angels, all of whom are six feet and over, and whose combined weight is at least a ton and a half." Any takers?

■ THE VESTRY at St. Thomas, Manhattan, has authorized the installation of air conditioning. But the rector, the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, wants it understood that this is not an improvement simply meant to draw churchgoers who would not otherwise be there.

"We must always be careful to avoid the temptation to attract people by means of making things ever easier, ever more pleasant, ever less exacting," he remarked in his parish bulletin.

The new conditioning unit will be ready this summer.

■ ST. THOMAS CHAPEL, which is gradually approaching the status of a full-fledged, independent parish, is searching for a new name. It is the belief of the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, Rector of St. Thomas Parish, and the Rev. R. DeWitt Mallary, Jr., Vicar of the Chapel, "that by assuming a new name the Chapel will be able to pursue its program of growth . . . more effectively," and that "the term 'chapel' is a hindrance in this work." St. Thomas Chapel, 230 East 60th Street, has functioned as part of St. Thomas Parish since 1858, although not always at its present location. ■

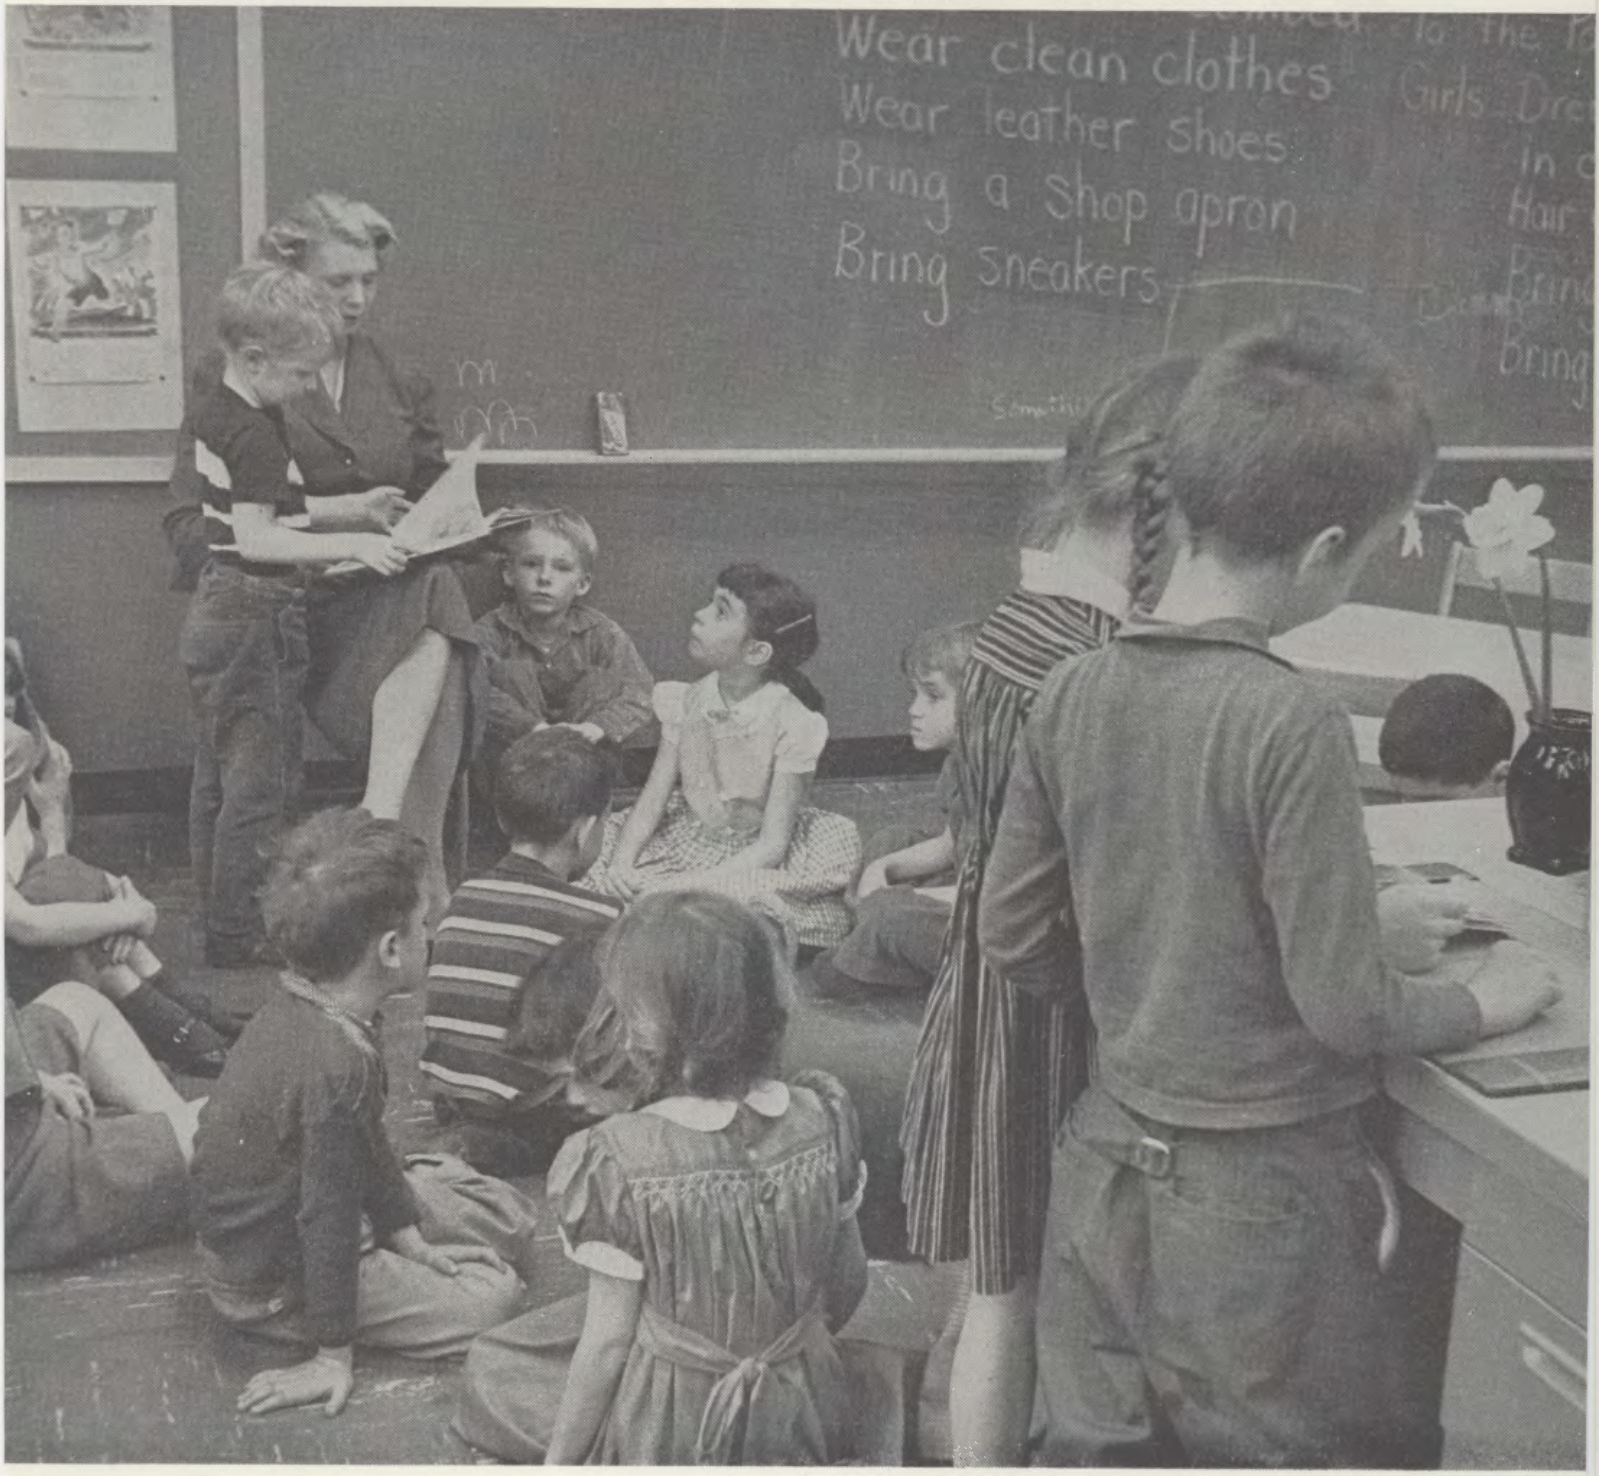
OCTOBER 1962



St. Luke's, an Episcopal School in the Diocese of New York

Archbishop to Preach At Cathedral Oct. 14

For most Episcopalians in the New York area, the service at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine at 4 P.M., Sunday, October 14, will be the high point of the Archbishop of Canterbury's visit to America this fall.

The Most Rev. Arthur Michael Ramsey, 100th Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of All England, will arrive at Idlewild, accompanied by Mrs. Ramsey, on Friday, October 12. They will be the guests of Bishop Donegan for the next four days.

The Archbishop will preach at Trinity, Wall Street, on Sunday at 11 A.M.

The service at the Cathedral will be attended by many church and state dignitaries, including the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop; Bishop Donegan, who will act both as host Bishop and as President of the Second Province; Bishops from other dioceses of the Province; the British Consul-General; and the Most Rev. Archbishop Iakovos of the Greek Archdiocese of North and South America, together with many clergy and parishioners of the Diocese.

A vast congregation is anticipated, for this is Dr. Ramsey's first visit to New York as the Archbishop of Canterbury and spiritual leader of the Anglican Communion, of which the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U. S. A. is a part. His last visit here was in 1959 when he was Archbishop of York.

On Monday morning, October 15, Archbishop Ramsey will address clergy of the Diocese of New York at a Quiet Day at the Cathedral and will remain for lunch. During the afternoon he will address students at General Theological Seminary, and dine with the dean, faculty and trustees. He will leave for Princeton, N. J. on Tuesday.

Dr. Ramsey, 58, was born into a family that had traditions of the ministry on both sides. He was educated at Magdalene College, Cambridge, and began his ministry as a curate in a Liverpool parish in 1929. He became Canon of Durham Cathedral and Professor of Divinity at the University of Durham in 1940. In 1950 he was named Regius Professor of Divinity at Cambridge. He became Bishop of Durham in 1952, and in 1955, at the age of 51, he was chosen Archbishop of York, the Church of England's second highest post. He was enthroned on June 27, 1961, as the 100th Archbishop of Canterbury, successor to the Most Rev. Geoffrey Francis Fisher.

Unlike Dr. Fisher, the present Archbishop was not a widely known figure outside the Anglican Communion, either at home or in world church circles. But since his enthronement the powerfully built man with silver hair, high forehead and great shaggy eyebrows has become something of a symbol of worldwide Anglicanism.

He has been a leading participant in the quest for Christian unity. In 1956, as the Archbishop of York, he led a group of eight Anglican clergymen to the Soviet Union for talks with Russian Orthodox leaders. In 1961, at New Delhi, he was elected one of the six presidents of the World Council of Churches. This summer he made a four-day visit to His Holiness Alexei, Patriarch of the Russian Orthodox Church, in Moscow. Purpose of this trip, he said, was "to establish deeper friendship between the Church of England and the Russian Orthodox Church." In August he conferred in London with Augustin Cardinal Bea, S. J., head of the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity. He has expressed great interest in the forthcoming Vatican Council. (see story on Page 13.)

The Archbishop is regarded as one of the most learned of contemporary British clergymen. He has been described as a man who is "very theological, with a mind too subtle for prophetic utterances." He is author of a number of books. ■

Woman's Council To Hold Luncheon

The Woman's Council of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society will hold its third anniversary luncheon on Monday, October 22 at 12:15 P.M. in the Crystal and Gold Suite of the Savoy-Hilton, Fifth Avenue at 58th St.

Bishop Donegan, president of the Society, will be guest of honor. The Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Society director, will speak on "The Gift of Self."

The Bishop will welcome Mrs. Gurney Williams as Diocesan Chairman of the Council for the next three years. She succeeds the founding chairman, Mrs. Thomas F. Vietor.

Last spring Mrs. Vietor was elected the first woman vice-president in the 132-year history of the Society.

During its first three years of existence, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Vietor, membership grew to more than 400 members. The majority serve as Chaplain's Aides in most of the 41 public institutions served by Society chaplains in the seven Convocations of this Diocese. Subscriptions to the luncheon, at $3.50 per person, may be obtained from Mrs. Gurney Williams, 62 Douglas Road, Chappaqua. ■

The Bishop's Message

September and October are the "back-to-school" months, when most people as students, teachers, parents and taxpayers are involved in the education of the young.

We of the Episcopal Church have an important share in the program of education. There are today 725 schools associated with the Church, including 50 in foreign lands. Our schools have always been, and must continue to be, a vital force within the life of our church and nation. They deserve the prayers and support of all Episcopalians.

I ask you to join with me in the observance of Episcopal School Week, a period from October 28 through November 4, which will call to the attention of our people the responsibilities of the Church in the education of the youth of today.

Elsewhere in this issue of The Bulletin you will find an illustrated article concerning the 14 church-related schools in our Diocese. St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School is presently seeking funds for expansion and capital improvement, and the Episcopal Academy plans to do the same in the near future. They both need your generous support. All our schools, as one of the educational media of the Church, are dedicated to fostering the fullest development of our young people. They are pledged to quality of life. Their existence and curricula are based on the belief that only in relation to our Lord and his Church can a person be educated in a true and whole sense.

The standards of our schools are high. In our Diocese, in order to assist each school in establishing the highest standards, the Division of Boarding and Day Schools of the Department of Christian Education has set up criteria of evaluation so that our schools may provide the finest education for our young people.

I urge you to observe Episcopal School Week by becoming more aware of the efforts within our Diocese and our nation to provide God-centered teaching and training of our children. And I ask your prayers that the Holy Spirit, guiding these institutions of learning, may lead all associated with them, trustees, faculty, students and parents, to a deeper understanding of truth, and to knowledge of the source of all truth.

Faithfully your friend and Bishop,

Austin W. Megan

As The Twig Is Bent . . .

The Episcopal Church has been bending twigs — that is teaching children — for a long time.

What do you know about Episcopal schools?

Probably you've heard that they are good schools, that many of them are old and well established, and that some of them are expensive.

But perhaps you do not know that today, in 1962, more and more average parents with average-sized pocketbooks are sending their children to Episcopal schools.

Actually, it's understandable if this subject immediately calls to mind some of the famous Episcopal prep schools like Groton and Choate. They are good, old, well established and expensive. St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School, Church of the Heavenly Rest Day School and Episcopal Academy are not so famous. They are good, relatively new, and not so expensive. They typify the Church's lively interest in schools today.

The story of church schools, of course, goes back to the birth of the American Colonies. These schools, Episcopal and otherwise, were the foundation of the nation's public school system. In the course of time, many of the early schools became secular institutions, or as the cost of private education spiraled, they won a reputation for being good, but expensive—schools for the rich. Furthermore, as the years went on, the Episcopal Church was not establishing new schools at the same rate as some other denominations—notably the Lutherans and the Roman Catholics. But after

EPISCOPAL SCHOOL WEEK will be celebrated throughout the nation from October 28 through November 4. Robert H. Porter, headmaster of St. Thomas Choir School, Manhattan, is chairman of the national committee. This year the Presiding Bishop has issued an official proclamation. He says in part, " . . . it is the Church's task to see to it that our children receive the best spiritual and intellectual nourishment. Anything less . . . is unworthy of our calling as the Body of Christ."

Our Diocesan Schools Festival will be held at the Cathedral on Sunday, November 4, at 3:45 P. M. The Bishop will be present, and the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Director of Christian Education, will preach. Massed choirs from the schools of the Diocese will participate.

The library — an important place at St. Thomas Choir School.

In a changing world church-related education has qualities for a thoughful parent to consider . . .

World War II, interest in education picked up.

Today there are 725 Episcopal elementary and high schools in the United States with an enrollment of more than 70,000 children.

In the Diocese of New York there are 14 schools with a registration of some 2,200 students this fall.

Among those 14 schools is the oldest Episcopal school in the United States. Trinity School, long associated with Trinity Church, Wall Street, was founded in 1709 by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. Its first classes were held in the tower of Trinity's pre-Revolutionary church building. Later, two of its schoolhouses were destroyed by fire, one of them during the Revolution. As the city grew, the school was relocated several times, and in 1895 it moved into its present quarters at 139 West 91st Street. In 1947 it had an "off-spring," the Trinity-Pawling School, a boarding school in Dutchess County.

Father Weed at St. Luke's is the center of attention.

An interesting feature about the schools in this Diocese is their variety. There are day schools and boarding schools. Some are coeducational; others are for boys or girls. Some are "church schools." Some are "church-related." Some offer classes from kindergarten through high school. Some are elementary schools. Some are high schools.

Turn to the box on page 6 to see at a glance the different types of schools, their age range, their administrators and their tuition.

As the table shows, tuition for day schools ranges from $400 a year to $1,000 and for boarding schools from $1,000 to $2,500. But scholarships are an important consideration. A good student who needs financial help usually can find it. Last year 700 children in this Diocese received a total of $506,000 in scholarships. The operating costs of the 14 schools, incidentally, ran to nearly $3 million.

The cost of education is going up as fast as Jack's legendary bean stalk, and Episcopal schools are running with the other public and private schools in today's competition for the best teachers. And this leads to another important factor—the academic standards of Episcopal schools. Just how good are they?

New York, can answer that question.

The Division is an official unit of the Department of Christian Education. It was formed "to foster cooperation among the schools . . . ; to assist those wishing to establish new schools; to interpret and promote the work of the schools; to encourage cooperation in such areas as teacher training and procurement, curriculum planning and administrative practices; and to establish evaluative criteria . . . " There are 20 members, including the heads of all 14 schools. Hugh Riddleberger, headmaster of Trinity School, is the chairman this year.

One of the Division's most important functions is the certification of member schools as "A School of the Diocese of New York." To obtain certification, the schools undergo a long process of evaluation similar to that undertaken by public schools seeking accreditation by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

This certification program is relatively new. Some schools already have been accredited as "A School of the Diocese." Others are in the process. All will seek this status.

People often ask, "Do you have to be an Episcopalian to go to an Episcopal school?" The answer is definitely "No!" Many children of other denominations and faiths go to our Church schools. In fact, school and church leaders have voiced concern that so many Episcopalians are failing to take advantage of their own educational opportunities.

Still, rising enrollment in schools within this Diocese indicates that their advantages are becoming better known. Both the Episcopal Academy, founded only last year, and St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School are seeking funds to provide larger quarters and the most modern educational facilities. Many of the schools said that their potential enrollment this fall far exceeded capacity.

You may have noticed that sometimes the term "church school" has been used and sometimes "church-related." There is a difference.

A "church school" is controlled by and responsible to some recognized canonical body within the Church—a parish, diocese, order or other body. A "church-related" school acknowledges a sympathy with the teachings of the Episcopal Church, but it is not controlled in any way by a church, the diocese or a religious body.

A research period in the Library at St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's.

In the Diocese of New York, "church schools" are: Heavenly Rest Day School, the two choir schools, the Episcopal Academy, (a cooperative venture of six Manhattan parishes), Grace, Mediator, St. Luke's, and St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's and St. Mary's, Peekskill. The last two are run by religious Orders.

St. Peter's, Peekskill, and Trinity School were started by churches but are now independent. These, together with Greer School, Malcolm Gordon School and Trinity-Pawling School, are "church-related." Binding them all together, however, is their common membership in the Division of Boarding and Day Schools.

How do you get into an Episcopal school in this Diocese? Write to the headmaster or principal and ask for a catalog and registration material. Most of the schools have entrance examinations. All insist upon interviews with both the child and parents.

Choir schools, of course, have their own specifications. The question here is not so much how to enter as when. Many parents make the mistake of trying to register boys for the seventh grade in choir school when they really should enter in the fifth. Headmasters report that boys seeking to enter the seventh grade often can't be admitted for various reasons. The ideal time for application is when the boy is in the third or fourth grade at another school.

And now, having read this far, you know a great deal about the schools of the Diocese of New York—except, perhaps, the answer to the most important question of all: What makes an Episcopal school "different?"

Many schools are "good." But an Episcopal school offers another dimension to education. This is the way the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Director of the Department of Christian Education, explains it:

"The benefits of a Christian education are not necessarily that it is better, subject by subject, but that it is a whole education. If the subject of God is not to be included in a school, then the curriculum is not complete. A church-related school can give a more complete, all-round education."

And he adds, "It is important to get an education where unself-conscious corporate worship is a normal part of the growing student, where it is not set apart, not something special . . . "

Bishop Chambers

Priest To Give Town Hall Recital

Preaching is an established part of a clergyman's duties, but singing? To be a concert artist is not generally expected of a rector—unless he's unusual, like the Rev. Allan R. Wentt of St. Luke's, Bronx.

Father Wentt will give a concert in New York's famous Town Hall on November 10 at 5:15 P. M. It will be for the benefit of the church building fund. St. Luke's is planning a new rectory.

The rector, a baritone, will sing songs by Schubert, Brahms, Handel, Purcell and Pergolesi, as well as several spirituals. Before coming to this country from Panama he studied at the National Conservatory and gave a recital at the National Theater in Panama City. He now has a scholarship in the Juilliard School of Music special study plan. ■

Father Chambers Becomes Bishop Of Springfield

The Rev. Albert A. Chambers, Rector of Resurrection, Manhattan, since 1949, was consecrated on October 1 as the seventh Bishop of the Diocese of Springfield (Ill.). Bishop Donegan was a co-consecrator and Bishop Boynton preached the sermon.

Bishop Chambers succeeds the Rt. Rev. Charles A. Clough, who was Bishop from 1948 until his death in 1961. He was elected on the first ballot at a special diocesan meeting on June 9.

Born in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1906, Bishop Chambers was graduated from Hobart College and General Theological Seminary. He was ordained in 1932, and served churches in the dioceses of Western New York, Fond du Lac, and Central New York before coming here. According to parish records, Resurrection had 260 members in 1949. It now has 650. On Bishop Chambers' 25th anniversary of ordination, the church's mortgage was paid off, and the building was consecrated. In 1961, Resurrection purchased a six-story brick building adjoining the church to contain parish offices, church school, clergy apartments and the newly established Episcopal Academy of New York

Bishop Chambers served on the Standing Committee of this Diocese 1957-61 and was its president in 1961. He was elected Dean of the Manhattan Convocation last fall. He also has been a member of various diocesan and provincial boards and committees. He has been chairman of the Diocese's Department of Promotion and has served the national Church in several capacities. ■

Launch Camping Program For Oldsters In Diocese

By ESTHER STAMATS

Director of Services for the Aged,
Diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations

When 35 old people, most of whom were strangers to each other, set out last June for their first camping experience, they had no idea what to expect.

"Certainly we didn't hope to find buildings with hardwood floors," said one.

What the campers carried with them, however, along with baggage, bundles, canes and assorted frailties, was a firm determination to get the most out of a new experience and to enjoy themselves. I went along as consultant and discussion leader.

The 450-acre camp at Ivoryton, Conn., includes a private lake and facilities for all kinds of activities —nature walks, arts and crafts, outdoor games of all kinds, and, of course, a chapel. The camp is owned and operated by the Church and Chapel of the Incarnation, but is supported, as a cooperative venture, by Incarnation, All Angels, Grace Church and the Girls' Friendly Society. In the past it has been used strictly as a summer camp for children. This was the first experiment with adult camping at Ivoryton.

It was a pilot project, and from the results, we hope that Incarnation Camp, in cooperation with Diocesan Services for the Aged, will soon be able to provide a full-time summer camping experience for older people.

The program was entirely permissive. One person said she came to rest, and she did just that. She slept each afternoon for a week. Some of the timid started out as spectators, but this quickly changed as they began to know the others and feel at home with them. Seven of the campers were over 85.

Each day's activities usually included a discussion period. The group suggested its own topics—the problems and joys of older people, morale, human relationships, cooperation, what older people can do to make themselves liked instead of disliked or avoided, how to change attitudes, faith and death . . . Outings included a trip to Stratford, Conn. to see a Shakesperian play and a bus trip to the restored whaling village at Mystic, Conn. A camp banquet made a glamorous ending to a busy ten days.

To those of the staff—Andrew Katsanis, the director; the Rev. John Bell, chaplain; Mrs. Ruth Young, program director; Mrs. Alice Collins, the nurse, and I—it seemed that there were many changes in individuals during the ten days. Some of the most apparent were a new willing-

Mt. Kisco Couple Leave For Kenya

A new kind of missionary work in Africa is being undertaken by a couple from St. Mark's, Mount Kisco. Mr. and Mrs. John Sherrill, both editors on Guideposts magazine, left in August to spend a year in Kenya and Tanganyika as "writing missionaries." They will have two assignments—to write articles for their magazine, and to conduct seminars in writing techniques for Africans.

Trained writers of any kind are in demand in Africa, the couple was told, but Guidposts has a special interest in training people to become "good news" reporters—writers who seek areas of agreement and sources of hope rather than those who play up disaster, riot, and murder news which more easily makes headlines.

Before leaving this country, Mr. and Mrs. Sherrill attended a six-week course on Dr. Frank Laubach's techniques of teaching adult illiterates. The Laubach Literacy Fund in Africa will provide facilities for their teaching mission. ■

Dr. Grant Named Vatican Council Representative

Dr. Grant

The Rev. Frederick C. Grant of New York City is one of three men named by the Archbishop of Canterbury to represent the Anglican Communion at the Second Vatican Council of the Roman Catholic Church this month in Rome.

Dr. Grant is a former dean of Bexley Hall, the Divinity School of Kenyon College, and past president of Seabury-Western Theological Seminary. Until his retirement in 1959, he was Professor of Biblical Theology at Union Theological Seminary.

Archbishop Ramsey also appointed the Rt. Rev. John R. H. Moorman, Bishop of Ripon, England, a noted scholar and historian, who, like Dr. Grant, has been head of a seminary, and the Ven. Charles de Soysa, Archdeacon of Colombo, Ceylon.

In a family as diverse as the Anglican Communion, Archbishop Ramsey said the choice of three men was not easy. He said he understood similar invitations went to Lutheran, Reformed, Old Catholic, Orthodox and other Eastern Churches, and he emphasized that, "The Vatican Council will not be concerned with negotiations for reunion." But, he added, "It is fitting that we . . . should accept this invitation from our fellow Christians in the Roman Catholic Church."

Dr. Grant reported that the appointment took him by surprise. Following its announcement in July, he told The Bulletin, "This leaves me two months in which to become proficient in spoken Latin (with Italian pronunciation) and spoken Italian. Reading and speaking a language are not the same thing, you know." ■

Expert On Cuba Is Among Speakers At Convocations

Is the Episcopal Church still active in Cuba? Do citizens of some of the newly emerging nations think Christianity and colonialism go together? Is Christianity a growing force in Japan?

These are some of the topics that will be explored when the seven convocations of the Diocese hold their fall meetings on Sunday, October 21. Each Episcopalian is invited to the meeting of his own convocation (geographical area).

The theme of the seven meetings will be "Critical Opportunities Facing the Church." Each speaker will cover specific problems and opportunities in one or more foreign countries where the Episcopal Church is active. They will be speaking from first-hand observation of these problems and opportunities.

Specifics of each meeting are:

Hudson — St. Andrew's, Walden, 4:00 P. M. Evening Prayer, followed by informal talk by Paul A. Tate, Assistant Secretary of the Episcopal Church's Overseas Department. Mr. Tate returned to this country in 1961 after living in Cuba for 32 years and serving as headmaster of an Episcopal school. He will talk on Cuba and then hold a question and answer period.

Ramapo — Christ Church, Piermont, 8:00 P.M. Speaker will be the Rev. Donald E. Bitsberger, Assistant Secretary of the Overseas Department. He will talk on Japan, where he was a missionary from 1954 to 1959, and on Taiwan, where he was interim director of Taiwan Church World Service in 1960-61.

Richmond — St. John's, 4:00 P. M. Evening Prayer. Massed choirs. Speaker will be the Rev. Howard A. Johnson, Canon of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Canon Johnson returned several months ago from a two-year trip around the world. He visited every area where the Anglican Communion is at work and is writing a book on his observations.

Dutchess — Christ Church, Poughkeepsie, 11:00 A. M. Some 30 churches will take part in this service. Massed choirs. Speaker will be Canon Johnson (see above.) A family picnic will follow the service.

Westchester — Trinity, New Rochelle, 4:00 P. M. Evening Prayer. Boys' Choir of Trinity Church. Speaker will be the Rev. Samuel Van Culin, Interpretation Officer of the Overseas Department.

Manhattan — Calvary, 4:00 P.M. The Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, Suffragan Bishop of New York, will speak on Greece, Ceylon, Japan and Hong Kong, all of which he visited this summer.

Bronx — St. Stephen's, Woodlawn, 5:30. Speaker will be the Rev. Canon Almon Pepper, Director of the National Council's Department of Christian Social Relations, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Church World Service, and Secretary of the Presiding Bishop's Committee on World Relief and Interchurch Aid. He will speak on the Episcopal Church's emergency aid program to other churches and on world relief needs. ■

Girls' Friendly Society Observing 85th Birthday

The first week in November is the time to ask, "What about the girls in our parish?"

November 1 through 8 is National Girls' Friendly Society Week. It is this organization's 85th year of service, and special observances are being planned all over the nation.

This Diocese saluted the opening of the 85th anniversary year with a festival service at the Cathedral last October. This fall individual branches will be celebrating GFS Week in a variety of ways, including programs devoted to international understanding, "girls' days," services, luncheons and teas.

The Girls' Friendly Society was organized in 1877 and now has branches in 1,060 parishes in 77 dioceses in the United States and in 10 overseas missionary districts. The organization provides a church-centered program for girls 6 through 21 years of age. Important in its current program is its "Project 2000," a three-year effort to obtain $500,000 throughout the country to expand its activities.

In the Diocese of New York, GFS was organized in 1883 and now serves nearly 500 girls. It has 10 leaders between the ages of 22 and 34, and 135 "sponsors," former members who sponsor activities for the younger girls. There are 37 parish groups, all in Manhattan, the Bronx and Staten Island, except for two in Dutchess Convocation and one in Ramapo Convocation.

Four new groups have been formed within the past year. They are St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan; Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac; St. George's, Manhattan; and St Ann's, Bronx. Miss Jean Pflomm is diocesan president, and Mrs. George Diering is the office secretary. ■

National Council Reports New Staff Appointments

The National Council of the Episcopal Church has made several appointments to key positions on its staff.

The Rev. Robert C. Martin, Jr., was named General Secretary for Evangelism, a position requested by the 1961 General Convention. Mr. Martin also is administrator of the Advance Adult Education program, Department of Christian Education.

The Rev. D. Williams McClurken of Harlingen, Texas, is the new Executive Secretary, Division of Radio and Television.

Vaughan P. Moore of West Point, Va., is manager of the newly formed Office of Administrative Services.

Miss Avis E. Harvey, Associate Secretary, Division of Publications, Department of Promotion, has been named Associate Director of the department. The Rev. George M. L. Woodgate, Associate Secretary in Leadership Training Division, Department of Christian Education, has been appointed Executive Secretary of the Unit of Camps and Conferences in this department.

The Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, has appointed three men from this Diocese to Council departments. Bishop Wetmore and John E. Murphy were named to the Department of Christian Education, and Dallas Sherman to the Department of Christian Social Relations. ■

John Lassoe Directs New Council Division

John V. P. Lassoe, Jr., a member of the Department of Christian Social Relations, Diocese of New York, has been named executive secretary of National Council's new Division of Church and Community Studies.

He will direct a program of ministry in urban-industrial areas, tackling problems such as transiency, loneliness, divorce, delinquency, alcoholism, mental breakdown and illegitimacy in these areas. Alcoholism will be a prime target. Mr. Lassoe, 36, has been director of the National Association of Inter-group Relations Officials since 1957. Two years ago he became the first president of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, an unofficial body. He resigned from the office in June. ■

Bishop Ordains Nine to the Diaconate

Nine men were ordained to the diaconate at the annual service performed by Bishop Donegan at the Cathedral in June. The order of deacon is the lowest of the three orders of the ministry in the Episcopal Church. The other two are priest and bishop. Normally, a deacon is advanced to the priesthood in six months or a year.

Parish Quotas Stand At $503,880 For 7 Months

DURING THE FIRST SEVEN MONTHS of 1962, congregations in this Diocese made missionary quota payments totaling $503,880.41. This sum is 41% of the missionary fund objective approved at Convention last May. The total quota is $1,224,298.

Of this total, National Council will receive 56% for its programs in this country and abroad. Diocesan Departments (Missions, Christian Education, Christian Social Relations, Promotion and Finance) and various affiliated agencies will receive 44%.

Although churches have until December 31 to make their payments, an increasing number are putting their parish commitment on a pay-as-you-go basis, sending one-twelfth of the total to the treasurer's office each month. Last year some churches overpaid their quota, but there was still an 18% deficit. Consequently, portions of the National Council and Diocesan programs had to be curtailed. Below is a list of parishes, by Convocation, showing their quotas and the amounts paid through July.

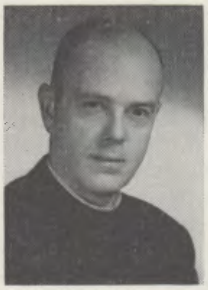
Annual School Of Worship Opens Series November 5



Canon West

Father Thomas

Dr. McCandless

Dr. Rodenmayer

The doctrine of the Holy Spirit will again be the theme of the Diocesan School of Worship this year, but with a new emphasis.

Last year the topic was "The Lord, the Life-Giver." This year it will be "The Voice of the Spirit." The four lectures, open to everyone in the Diocese, will be held on November 5, 12, 19 and 26. As usual, identical sessions will be held in the morning at the Cathedral and in the evening at four Manhattan churches.

The lectures will be as follows:

"The Holy Spirit in the Liturgical Prayer of the Church," on November 5—the Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral. He is internationally known for his contributions in the field of liturgics and church art, and is the author of several books.

"The Holy Spirit in Personal Devotion," on November 12—the Rev. Robert N. Rodenmayer, executive secretary, Division of Christian Ministries, National Council. Formerly he was Professor of Pastoral Theology, Church Divinity School of the Pacific.

"The Holy Spirit in Conscience and the Religious Instinct," on November 19—The Rev. Maxwell M. Thomas, Fellow and Tutor, General Theological Seminary. Father Thomas, an Australian, has been honorary Chaplain to Bishop Donegan since 1959.

"The Holy Spirit in Holiness," on November 26—The Rev. Hugh D. McCandless, Rector, Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan. Dr. McCandless has been a member of the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches and the Committee for Reorganization, Diocese of New York. He was a founder of the East Mid-town Ministers' Association, and is in charge of the Association's hospital work.

The entire series is sponsored by the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and the Episcopal Churchwomen. Mrs. Frank R. Stich is ECW representative on the committee, which consists also of Dean Butler and the four Canons. Mrs. Donald K. Stevenson is day chairman and Miss Valerie Franklin is evening chairman.

Host churches for the evening sessions are Chapel of the Incarnation, November 5; Calvary, November 12; Grace Church, November 19; and Trinity, November 26.

To register for these lectures ask your rector for the registration blanks which are being sent to each church in the Diocese. The fee is $2 for the series, or $1 for an individual session. ■

Summer Conferences Set Record

More young people than ever before attended the Bard and Wilderness conferences this summer, the Department of Christian Education has reported. Three sessions, instead of two, were held at each conference.

A total of 364 youngsters of junior and senior high school age attended both conferences, an increase of 52 over last year.

In each case the higher registration represented a 10 to 15 per cent growth, said the Rev. Miller Cragon, diocesan Director of Christian Education. "This reflects not a spectacular rise, but what is to be preferred, a solid, steady growth," he commented.

At Bard College 303 participated in the three six-day discussions of "My Crowd, My Lord—and Me." Especially significant was the appreciable increase in parish representation, said Father Cragon. Last year young people came from 75 churches. This year they came from 83.

At St. John's-in-the-Wilderness, the registration increased from 48 in 1961 to 61 in 1962. Wilderness is totally different from Bard. It is a small, quite intense, 12-day experience in Christian community living. According to Father Cragon, it is increasingly becoming a place for young people with decided leadership ability.

The staffs consisted of 46 at Bard (some serving at more than one session) and 10 at Wilderness. "Although the Conferences are for young people, we believe they have an impact upon these 56 adults as well," Father Cragon said.

In another phase of its summer ministry to young people, the Episcopal Church in this Diocese, through its Department of Missions, provided the Protestant chaplain for 5,000 campers at the Palisades Interstate Park Commission camps in Harriman State Park, and for another 1,000 at the Westchester County Park Commission camp at Croton Point.

The Rev. Peter Marks, Priest-in-Charge of the Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, was chaplain at Croton Point, where the program is in its fourth year.

The Palisades program is about 15 years old. This year the chaplains were the Rev. Scott Root, Rector of Trinity, Garnerville, and the Rev. Thomas Talley, a graduate student at General Theological Seminary; Willard Seymour, a lay reader at Christ Church, Suffern; the Rev. Colley Bell, Rector of St. John's, Cornwall; and Archdeacon George Brätt.

All services, Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic, are held in the community center at each region. Protestant services are on Sunday, but if Holy Communion is requested by Episcopal campers, it is held at 6:45 A.M. on a weekday. Archdeacon Brätt reports that some 35 youngsters attended one of the early morning Holy Communion services that he conducted. ■

Church For Deaf To Commemorate 110th Birthday

St. Ann's Church for the Deaf will observe its 110th anniversary on Sunday, October 7, with a service at St. Michael's, 99th St. and Amsterdam Ave., at 3 P.M. Bishop Donegan and Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy have been invited to participate. The Rev. Edwin W. Nies is Vicar of St. Ann's.

On October 13, at 6:30 P.M., an anniversary dinner will be held at Victor's Restaurant, 1 East 35th St. Dr. Nies will preside.

St. Ann's was the first Christian church for the deaf in the United States. During its 110 years of existence, it has been in several locations, all of them in Manhattan. It has been using the facilities of St. Michael's since 1959, and once a month holds a Holy Communion service at Good Shepherd, Bronx, for the convenience of members living in the Bronx and Westchester. Communicants, numbering about 100, come from all over the metropolitan area. It is the only church for the deaf in this Diocese. ■

. . . in brief

■ VERNON DE TAR, organist and choirmaster at Ascension, Manhattan, was one of eight American church music educators to visit Germany this summer at the special invitation of the West German government. The group visited schools of church music and other music centers.

■ THREE SISTERS from St. Helena's Convent, Newburgh, went to Liberia, West Africa, this summer, to help staff the mission operated by the Order of the Holy Cross at Bolahun. This is the first overseas venture for the Sisters, who function under the direction of the Order of the Holy Cross. The Holy Cross Fathers founded the mission at Bolahun in 1922.

■ A GLEAMING new cross adorns the spire of St. James' Church, Manhattan, climax of several years' study and experimentation to embellish the Fowler Memorial Tower and bring it into closer conformity with the older portion of the church. This, and improvements to the tower, were given by Mrs. Katherine Fowler Milbank in memory of her brother, Ludlow Sebring Fowler. He was Chancellor of the Diocese from 1956 until his death in 1961.

ness to cooperate, a desire to look out for someone else, success at making new friends, ability to learn new skills and take part in group programs such as a talent night, and an ability to enter into discussions, trying to be objective in analyzing personal feelings and behavior.

One of the young counselors made a comment which perhaps sums up the experience for all the staff.

"I've learned so much these ten days," she said. "I will never be sorry for old people again. They don't want pity and they certainly don't need it. ■

■ TRANSISTOR radios, which in this country link the teen-ager to rock and roll, are serving a far more serious purpose in Africa and South America. Missionaries in those continents rely heavily on the little sets to spread the Gospel. Transistor radios are immensely popular, because of their relatively low cost and because of the scarcity of electricity. A church-operated station, often the only station in its area, broadcasts music, news, and health and educational programs, with about 14 per cent of the time devoted to religious topics. ■

Send Your Stamps To Saint Helena's

Stop before you throw away those envelopes which came in the morning mail! If they bear either foreign stamps or U. S. commemorative stamps, the Sisters of St. Helena's Convent, Newburgh, would like to have them.

The Sisters sell the stamps in bulk to a dealer. Past proceeds have provided sufficient funds to buy a number of furnishings for the new chapel at St. Helena's. But the chapel is by no means completely equipped. "We don't get a fortune for the stamps, but we do very well and the money adds up to quite a lot in time," explains Sister Clare, who is in charge of the venture.

All stamps are worth sending except these: the violet-colored four-cent stamp bearing Lincoln's portrait, and the blue three-cent stamp showing the Statue of Liberty. A margin of at least one-quarter inch should be left all around the stamp so that the perforations will be unmarred. Stamps should be left on the envelope; do not soak them off. In the case of foreign stamps, the whole envelope or card should be left intact. These are called "covers" by philatelists. All stamps should be sent to Sister Clare, Convent of St. Helena, Box 397, R. D. 4, Newburgh, N. Y. ■

ECW To Observe Community Day On November 4

Episcopal Churchwomen will join women of other denominations on Friday, November 4, to observe World Community Day. Programs are planned in many communities under the auspices of the United Church Women, a department of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

This year the observance will focus on Southeast Asia. The theme is "Deepen the Channels to Peace."

A new project in Indonesia will be made possible through the offerings received on World Community Day. Through Church World Service, funds will be sent the Interchurch Aid Committee of the Council of Churches in Indonesia to complete the center for nurses and training of village health workers at the Mardi Santosa Hospital, Surabaja, Java. The offerings also will help continue the UCW pioneer work in nutrition in Chile and Brazil. They will make possible an expanded program at the United Nations, and they will continue the UCW program of education and aid in many lands. ■

"WHY BUY THE PARISH EVERY FAMILY PLAN?"

Here are just two sound reasons!

"strong help in doing my job"

"It would be my guess that not more than 15 people in this church ever read a church magazine before. Now, after every issue of The Episcopalian arrives, I hear comments about this or that article from all sorts of people—from high school students and busy housewives to sedate vestrymen.

"Apparently it is the first time that many have become aware of the Church and its manifold impact on the nation and the world. This, of course, is a sad reflection on my failings as a rector, so personally, I am delighted to have this strong help in doing my job."

The Rev. Alanson C. Davis,
Church of the Ascension, Bradford, Pa.

"communication from the outside world"

"We decided to try The Episcopalian to help break through the bounds of parochialism . . . the results were most encouraging. Parishioners began to approach us after church and ask if we had read some article in the most recent issue of The Episcopalian. We began to feel that we had a communication from the outside world coming into our parishioners homes once every month. It was the right tool at the right time."

The Rev. Raymond T. Ferris,
Christ Church, Nashville, Tenn.

ECW To Hear Talk By Bishop Emrich At UTO Meeting

Episcopal Churchwomen from all over the Diocese will hold their annual Advent meeting and presentation of the United Thank Offering at the Cathedral on Tuesday, December 4. The Rt. Rev. Richard S. Emrich, Bishop of the Diocese of Michigan, will preach at the morning service.

The day will include Holy Communion and the UTO Ingathering at 10:30 A.M. in the Cathedral, luncheon at noon in Synod House, and a program meeting at 1 P.M.

The ECW has invited Bishop Emrich to preach because of the tremendous impact he made upon those who heard him at the Triennial Meeting in Detroit last year. In fact, Church Periodical Club members, who met in Detroit just prior to the ECW Triennial, were particularly impressed with his presentation, and the Church Periodical Club is cooperating with the Diocesan Board of ECW in sponsoring Bishop Emrich's visit to the Cathedral.

The CPC board and the officers of Province II will meet in New York December 3-5 and will attend the ECW Advent meeting. A display arranged by the CPC will be set up in Synod House as a feature of the afternoon session.

Bishop Emrich was born in Mardin, Turkey, in 1910, of missionary parents. He became Suffragan Bishop of Michigan in 1946 and was elected Bishop of the Diocese in 1948. He has served both his Church and community on various city, state and national boards and committees. He has lectured widely and is the author of numerous articles and pamphlets.

Bishop Emrich is a member of the Joint Committee of the Episcopal Church on Approaches to Unity, the Board of Directors of Seabury-Western Theological Seminary and of Bexley Hall, the Divinity School of Kenyon College. He is a member of the Detroit Branch of the NAACP and for six years was a member of the National Council of the Episcopal Church.

The United Thank Offering to be presented at the service is the third in the present Triennium. A Triennium is a three-year period beginning and ending with a General Convention, and during which the ECW holds regular spring and fall Ingatherings. Next month's Ingathering will be included in the total presented at the General Convention of 1964. So far the total towards Triennium is $61,195. This is made up of $30,138, Advent, 1961; and $31,057, Spring,

Your Every Member Canvass

Years ago many parishes used to request material to be distributed on the subject of the Every Member Canvass, but it was discovered, alas, that few people really sat down and read it.

Nowadays, Eric Ley, diocesan Director of Stewardship, receives far fewer requests for this material, and for a very good reason. It has been found that the stewardship story can't be told adequately in pamphlets and booklets. The diocesan Division of Stewardship believes that the true purpose of stewardship is worshipping, working, praying and giving to God through his Church for the spread of the Kingdom—giving out of love—out of gratitude—giving to God to extend the witness of his Church because we believe in the Church. But Mr. Ley has discovered that this truth has an electrifying effect on church members only when it is shared with conviction by someone else in the quiet of a home.

"Unless the canvasser has wrestled with the truth of Christian financial stewardship and has understood his personal obligation, he is not equipped with the first fundamental tool of the canvasser," Mr. Ley asserts.
